CHAPTER XV

Consolidation

The thought of consolidation was in the air. To use a chemical metaphor, the point of saturation was near at hand and very little movement would produce precipitation.

It all seems natural, advisable, somewhat obvious to-day, but in the days when these events occurred it required foresight, imagination to see the advantages of such a step, and patience, diplomacy, sympathy, rare skill in dealing with men, to cause boards of trustees willingly to vote themselves and their institutions out of existence that a new board and a new organization might be born.

Andrew H. Green had his dream of a "greater New York" and had also a dream of a union of New York City libraries. In his memorandum to the Tilden trustees of May 9, 1892, he spoke of a consolidation of the Tilden Trust with the Lenox Library as "a scheme thus far but little discussed" and recommended such a union either under existing laws or under legislation to be obtained; he added that Mr. Kennedy, President of the Lenox Library, had expressed "his conviction that a practical union of interests could in some way be formed." He spoke also of adding some of the smaller libraries and suggested as an alternative that "some plan of federation of the libraries of the city may be found more practicable than consolidation."

It is generally understood that the "Act to permit the consolidation of library companies in the city of New York"* was the child of his brain and it was under the provisions of this act, as amended by chapter 209 of the laws of 1895, that consolidation was finally effected.

In the autumn of this year the Herald, † commenting on the letter from the Tilden trustees, dated November 14, 1892, presented to the Board of Estimate on the 18th, referred to the question of consolidation as all but accomplished. The story was somewhat optimistic, not quite accurate in several respects, but undoubtedly represented the ideas Mr. Green held then. The text runs as follows:

It is now predicted that the Tilden Library will yet be founded upon a grander scale than the late Samuel J. Tilden projected when he bequeathed the bulk of his $8,000,000 estate for that purpose.

The trustees of the Tilden trust have under consideration a plan for the consolidation of nearly all the large libraries in the city with the Tilden Library. The $2,000,000 or $2,500,000 obtained by compromise with the contesting relatives would not establish such a library as Mr. Tilden contemplated, but under the plan of consolidation the trustees hope to provide one of the greatest and most complete libraries in the world.

In the plans is embraced a system of distribution which will enable persons in all parts of the city to get the books they want by simply going to branches of the main institution.

Existing libraries which are likely to consolidate with the Tilden Library are the Vanderbilt, Lenox, Cooper Institute, Bruce, American Institute, Merchants', Ottendorfer, Society, Columbia, University of the City of New York and the New York Society. The Astor Library will probably not go into the scheme, although its trustees have not declared themselves positively against it.

President John Bigelow, of the Tilden Trust, yesterday sent a communication to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment stating that the Court of Appeals decision would reduce the fund available for the library to about $2,000,000 or $2,500,000 which will give a net revenue of $80,000 per annum. He points out that this sum, while sufficient to equip and maintain a library such as would be a credit to this city, would be insufficient to provide the necessary building. The Board is therefore requested to erect a suitable home for the Tilden Library. The matter was referred to Comptroller Myers.

The trustees of the Tilden estate have reached a final settlement with the relatives of the dead statesman, and most of the money has been paid over to the heirs. Mrs. Hazard, only daughter of Mrs. Pelton, the sister of Mrs. Tilden, was awarded one-half of the estate, the remainder going to the children of her brother, Moses J. Tilden. Mrs. Hazard, under an agreement made with the trustees before her uncle's will was broken, surrenders one-third of the entire estate from her portion to found the library.

* Chapter 541 of the laws of 1892.

† November 19, 1892.

Trustee Andrew H. Green informed me that the project to consolidate other libraries in the Tilden Library had been discussed at meetings of the trustees, who thought so well of it that he drew up a permissive bill, which was passed at the last session of the Legislature.

"We need a great library in this city," said Mr. Green, "and I hope we will have one. Most of the trustees of the large libraries of this city, excepting those of the Astor, have as individuals expressed themselves in favor of consolidation. If it is done we will erect one large central building and establish branches in different portions of the city. As at present planned I think eight branches would be sufficient. We could either build these branches or rent them.

"A rapid means of distributing the books from the main library to the branches will probably be adopted. They could be sent by pneumatic tube or electric tube service or by distributing wagons, whichever the trustees may consider best. Of course all the books would not be put in circulation. There would be a library for costly books which are to be used merely for reference. A person could enter a branch library at the Battery and file his application for a book. The librarian would telephone to the central building and the book wanted could be sent to the branch by tube or by other means."

Mr. Green added that all the prominent scientists in the city and many professors favored the consolidation plan. It would give this city, he said, what it had long needed, a library for the people, and also one where all sorts of delvers after knowledge could consult the books needed without going to Europe for information.

The library would need, he said, an entire city block 200 feet square. He favored building it at a cost of $1,000,000 or more. It would probably be six stories high, be composed of brick and stone, on a foundation capable of sustaining additional stories should the growth of the library warrant it.

Bryant Park and the reservoir sites had been mentioned as a suitable location for the library, but Mr. Green said he hardly thought either of them would be granted by the city.

The Tribune on November 20 referred to it and stated that "talks with the librarians of the various libraries yesterday revealed the fact that the project is yet in its infancy, and that the promoters of it have not as yet held any definite consultation with the trustees of these libraries. At the Astor and Lenox libraries it was said that the trustees had not been talked to in regard to the scheme, and that even if they were, they would not look with favor upon it. They would be willing to co-operate but not to consolidate. At the Cooper Institute and American Institute libraries nothing definite was known about the matter more than that such a scheme had been heard of. The librarian of the New York Free Circulating Library said that the matter was not yet developed enough to say anything definite about, but that the probabilities were that the library would be interested in the scheme later on."

From these suggestions came nothing definite. Matters drifted for a year or more. Columbia College, New York University, the Scientific Alliance one after another proposed union with the Tilden trust; possibilities of city aid appeared probable and then doubtful; every one felt that existing conditions were unsatisfactory, but no one had the ideal solution ready to offer.

The successful movement was really started by a chance remark at a dinner given by John L. Cadwalader, an Astor trustee, to Lewis Cass Ledyard, a Tilden trustee, and some friends in the spring of 1894.* After dinner, while waiting for the ladies to put on their wraps, on the way to the opera, Mr. Cadwalader asked Mr. Ledyard how the Tilden trustees were getting on with their problem.

"Not very well," was the reply. "Plenty of people are ready to let us help them, but none of the suggestions so far seems to offer just what we want. It's a pity that the best plan, the one right one is unattainable."

"Why, what's that?" asked Mr. Cadwalader.

"A union with the Astor Library."

"Well, I'm not so sure it's impossible. Did you know I was one of the Astor trustees?"

"No, I didn't," replied Mr. Ledyard. "And I had always thought the Astor name and the attitude of the Astor family put such a thing out of question."

"I rather think you're wrong on that point, but here come the ladies. Suppose you dine with me next week when we can go into the whole question more fully and see if the two boards can't get together."

As a result of this dinner and later conferences it became evident that difficulties of union were by no means insuperable. As Mr. Cadwalader expected to see Mr. William Waldorf Astor when in England during the summer it was decided that he should lay the whole matter before Mr. Astor and that Mr. Ledyard should urge Mr. Bigelow, as President of the Tilden Trust, to defer definitive action on other proposed schemes until after Mr. Cadwalader had talked with Mr. Astor in England.

Mr. Cadwalader did not see Mr. Astor, but on the eve of his return put in written form what he would have said if they had met. His letter and Mr. Astor's reply are worth quoting in full:

4 CLARGES STREET, LONDON

SEPTEMBER 28TH, 1894.

MY DEAR MR. ASTOR,

Many thanks for your telegram and kind letter. I had no thought of bringing you to London, but as I had missed you in the summer as I passed through, I sent to your office to inquire your whereabouts, and understood that you might be returning and probably here before I sailed.

I was anxious to see you and to talk freely on an important matter connected with the Astor Library; in fact I think its importance cannot be overestimated. As I cannot see you I shall put on paper what I would have said more informally.

With the early history of the Library, we are all familiar. New York at the time of its incorporation was in great need of such an institution, even with a small beginning.

While freely open to the public it was nevertheless guarded and cared for by your family who continued up to your father's death to manage its finances and give much time to its personal supervision; and the Trustees, while gentlemen of high standing and often of national reputation, have in general had relations more or less intimate with you all.

For these reasons the Library has occupied toward the Public the relation which the Trustees themselves have occupied; it has been, or has been considered to be a little exclusive and not quite in touch with the general Public.

Moreover, as your family have so generously provided for its wants the charitable American has been quite willing to leave it to you to maintain and care for it entirely, reserving to himself however the right of criticism as if the Library were a public institution pure and simple.

In this condition of things the Library has gone on for some fifty years, more or less, until its collection of books has become most valuable, and at the same time the needs and demands of the public for knowledge have increased in still greater degree. It is more difficult to manage a semi-private corporation than one which has for many years been independent and whose duties to the public are more clearly defined, and no such management is apt to be a popular one. Doubtless the management of the Library could be improved.

While all these facts do not detract from the real value of the Library as a great public charity, they cause the Library at times to fail to attract the public and to some extent limit its usefulness and the institution is to some extent side-tracked in its association with similar bodies.

During your father's life some similar thoughts affected his mind, because he so expressed himself and on one occasion consulted me as to the propriety of an effort to alter this condition of things, and discussed the question whether the Library could be turned over to a College or some existing Educational body.

I assume that your refusal to become a Trustee of the Library and take an active part in its management was due in part at least to the same feeling, and because you felt that the time had come for the Library to become more independent. Since your father's death the Library suffers from the loss of his most excellent judgement and personal supervision and at the same time it has not gained by an assertion of independence. To change its character in the ordinary nature of things is difficult and such changes must come very slowly.

In general estimation however the Library holds its own, but its means do not permit of very large expansion or growth and to keep its place it must open its doors more freely, — be supplied with electric lights and generally increase its staff and the expenses of maintenance.

In this condition of things, interested as I am in its past and future and more than all interested that such an institution should develop and be made the most of, I confess I have been much troubled as to how this can be brought about. In this connection I have followed with some care the history and the result of the effort of Mr. Tilden, by his Will, to found a great educational charity. Mr. Tilden practically gave his fortune, of several millions, to his executors, in trust to incorporate the Tilden Trust, with very liberal powers as to the use of the funds for public purposes. Litigation ensued, and the Will was not sustained and the general gift to the public was lost.

If Mr. Tilden's intention had been carried out the Astor Library would probably have had a great rival, with large funds at command which would have been unfortunate in the same sense that two fairly well established colleges are always less effective than one great one.

In the course of the litigation, however, one of the heirs, whether from pangs of conscience or fear of losing her share, or both, offered a compromise which was effected, with the net result of leaving in the hands of the Executors $2,000,000 for the purposes set out in the Will. The litigation is now disposed of, the fund remains intact and the Trustees of the Tilden Trust, — which is now an incorporated body, — are considering how they can best carry out the objects of their trust.

There was a definite plan, not long since, to remove the City Hall, now in the park at Chambers Street and place it in the centre of Reservoir Square at 42nd Street and give it to the Tilden Trust; which was approved by the authorities of the City, but the project of removal failed, although it may arise again. Some few months since, on a favorable occasion I asked one of the active members of that body what they proposed to do. He replied that they did not know what to do, that they hesitated to go on with the fund in hand and establish a new Library, or a separate work, and that they had considered the possibility of uniting in some form with the Columbia College Library, but which, from distance and for other reasons, had serious objections, and that other bodies had suggested an amalgamation.

I asked why they did not turn over the funds to the Astor Library? which led to a conversation of some length as to the possibility of uniting the two bodies, provided the general character of the amalgamated body as a Library of Reference was absolutely maintained on the general lines of the foundation of the Astor Library.

The matter was afterwards seriously discussed between us of course as individuals only and I was informed that it was very probable that his body would be glad to unite with the Astor Library if we thought such a union possible and chose to entertain the idea.

I ascertained also that the Tilden Trust had procured the passage of an act by the Legislature permitting any two Library corporations to consolidate by vote of the Directors of the two bodies. The Directors of the Tilden Trust are John Bigelow, Andrew H. Green, Alexander E. Orr, Lewis C. Ledyard (a partner of James C. Carter), and in addition a former secretary of Mr. Tilden.

I felt it my duty to communicate what had passed in strict confidence to such of the Trustees of the Astor Library as I could find, before my departure in July last, and all agreed that it was difficult to overestimate the great work which could be accomplished by an institution possessing the plant and the funds of the Astor Library and some $80,000 a year of new money for its development and that such a suggestion ought to be availed of if it were at all possible, but that the Trustees of the Astor Library owed a personal duty and trust to your family and that the present establishment of the Library ought not to be changed in such important particulars without the matter at the outset being placed before you, and I was asked informally to present the facts to you.

My feeling has been that it was a public duty as far as possible to prevent the expenditure of this large sum, which could only hope to reach the point in the creation of a second Astor Library, where we now are and thus divide the scholars and double the cost of administration, and that, if at some time we were to introduce a change in the Library and render it an independent body, here was the magnificent opportunity.

It is true, that if such an amalgamation were accomplished, it would probably be necessary that Mr. Tilden's name should appear in some way in the corporate name, or that its name should be changed to some such name as "The New York Public Library, Astor and Tilden Foundation." And perhaps the present building might be changed or enlarged or even the location might at some time be changed, all which are details which of course have not been discussed, but with broadminded people and great ends in view it would seem that such difficulties, if the only ones, should not stand in the way.

All this may amount to nothing. You will however pardon my laying all this before you, in view of the great interests involved. It is longer to write than to read. I am writing hurriedly within a few hours of my departure, and whatever comes from it it should be at present quite confidential.

Believe me

(Signed) JOHN L. CADWALADER.

LONDON

CABLE ADDRESS:

ASTOR ESTATE, LONDON.

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, W. C.

9TH OCTOBER, 1894.

My dear Sir,

I have read very carefully your letter of September 28th and appreciate your kind thought in consulting me upon a question that involves the present policy and probably the entire future of the Astor Library.

For many years that institution has been censured by the American Press sometimes upon comprehensible and occasionally upon unintelligible grounds. One particular of these complaints always remained the same, — that it was an appendage of the Astor family which controlled it for purposes of self-glorification to the detriment of the public interest. It was because these comments seemed to be an expression of public opinion that my Father desired that the connection between the Library and the members of the Astor family should cease altogether.

And here let me say that my own severance from its affairs was due not as you appear to think to any reflections or conclusions of my own, but to the fact that my Father forbade me to connect myself with it in any way.

You ask my opinion confidentially upon a plan to consolidate the Astor Library with the Tilden Trust of Two Millions, necessitating of course a change of name.

Personally, and from sentimental considerations, I regret any change in the name. I must however tell you frankly that some years ago in the course of a conversation upon the future of the Library, my Father told me that he would be very willing, that its name should be changed, if by so doing, the public could be made to understand that it was their property precisely as any other public institution.

The advantages of so great an enlargement of its resources and consequently of its ability to fill the use designed by its Founders, as should result from an addition of Two Millions to its Capital outweighs all other considerations; in fact, the public would have a most substantial and well-grounded grievance against who ever prevented the accomplishment of a project which promises so much good; and were the consolidation to be refused by the Trustees, and were that refusal to come, as it certainly would, to the knowledge of the American Press, the criticisms and strictures of the past would be as nothing compared with the undying reproaches that would follow.

I am very sorry not to have seen you, as what I have tried to say in this letter, could have been much better expressed verbally. I hope the next time you are in England, you will give me an opportunity of showing you Cliveden.

With kind regards, believe me

Sincerely yours

(Signed) W. W. ASTOR.

JOHN L. CADWALADER, ESQ.

As stated before, the matter came before the Tilden board on October 13, 1894, when it was decided to reject a scheme of co-operation proposed by Columbia College, and thereupon "The subject of an alliance with the Astor Library was presented to the Board by Mr. Ledyard." On November 17th the trustees appointed as a conference committee Messrs. Bigelow, Ledyard, Orr. (Later Green was added and Bigelow withdrew.)

Action by the Astor trustees was taken at a special meeting called for November 26 when it was decided, after a statement by Mr. Cadwalader, to appoint Messrs. Markoe, Cadwalader, and King (Bishop Potter being added later) a special committee "to meet a similar committee already appointed by the Tilden Trust to consider the subject of a consolidation of the Astor Library with the Tilden Trust and to confer at their discretion with any other person or persons interested in the matter."

Matters now moved swiftly. Numerous conferences were held, usually at the home of Mr. Ledyard, 271 Lexington Avenue, and by January, 1895, consolidation was accepted by both committees and only the details of formal action by the boards remained. The reports of each committee deserve quotation in full, but to preserve continuity of the narrative that quotation will be deferred to following paragraphs. About the time that the negotiations were taking their final shape came intimations that the Lenox trustees would be glad for an interview. It was deemed best to finish the details of the Astor-Tilden union and then consider the Lenox question.

Action by the Tilden board was soon concluded. The conference committee appointed November 17, 1894, reported favorably on January 15, 1895, and the report was adopted.

The Astor committee, appointed November 26, 1894, reported on February 13, 1895, when the board approved consolidation as suggested and continued the committee with power to perfect arrangements for the proposed consolidation. On March 13 was presented a further report narrating the progress of negotiations with the representatives of the Lenox Library. On May 8, Mr. Cadwalader reported for consideration a form of resolution suggested by the Lenox committee for adoption by the new board relating to the Lenox property as a future site for the new library building, to the Lenox collection of Bibles, and to a tablet in memory of Mr. Lenox. With slight changes these resolutions were formally approved by the Astor trustees and thereupon Mr. Cadwalader presented a form of resolution suggested as proper to be recommended by the Astor trustees for adoption by the new board expressive of the necessity of maintaining and administering the Astor portion of the consolidated collection as a reference library. This was approved by the board, and at the same meeting the form of consolidation agreement drawn up by Messrs. Cadwalader, Ledyard and Rives was approved. Final authorization and approval were given on May 22, the day before the agreement was actually signed and consolidation legally effected.

The Lenox name first appears in these final negotiations on January 15, 1895. On this date the Tilden trustees approved the report of their conference committee and thereupon resolved, on motion of Mr. Green, "that in view of the fact that suggestions have been received from representatives of the Lenox Library, looking to a consolidation of that corporation with the Tilden Trust, it would in the judgment of the Trustees of the Tilden Trust be desirable to form a library consolidation, including the Astor Library, the Lenox Library and the Tilden Trust, if such a consolidation can be brought about on terms mutually satisfactory," to appoint a conference committee consisting of Messrs. Ledyard, Green and Orr.

The Lenox board took formal action on February 6 when "The President [John S. Kennedy] then stated that negotiations had been begun by the Trustees of the Tilden Trust looking towards a consolidation with the Lenox Library, and that, at his request, Mr. Rives and Mr. Maitland had met with him and Messrs. Ledyard, Green, and Orr of the Tilden Trust, and an informal conference had been held, lasting over two hours. The President said that the Trustees of the Astor Library had voted to consolidate with the Tilden Trust, and the latter had requested that the Lenox Library Board appoint a 'Committee of Three,' which should confer with them regarding a consolidation." Messrs. Kennedy, Rives, and Maitland were so appointed. The negotiations here were complicated by the fact that the Lenox trustees felt it necessary to assure proper recognition of the Lenox Bibles and Americana, to secure the closing of the Stuart collection on Sunday, and also by the fact that the title of the trustees to part of the block on which the library was situated was subject to certain restrictions imposed in the will of Miss Henrietta Lenox. The committee made report of its progress on February 21, April 3, and May 1, but it was not until May 23, the day the articles of consolidation were signed, that formal authorization was given by the board.

And now may be given in somewhat fuller extent the documents on which consolidation was based, as indicated in the preceding summary. The report of the Tilden committee, recommending consolidation with the Astor Library, runs as follows:

TO THE TRUSTEES OF THE TILDEN TRUST, GENTLEMEN: —

Your committee appointed to confer with a committee of the Directors of the Astor Library, in reference to a proposed consolidation of the Tilden Trust and the Astor Library, beg leave to report: —

That they have met a similar committee from the Astor Library and have fully discussed with them the condition and resources of the two corporations and the general lines upon which a consolidation may be regarded as practicable.

For reasons which have been already fully discussed in the meetings of the Board of Trustees of the Tilden Trust, your committee are strongly of the opinion that if a consolidation of these two bodies can be had upon terms which will ensure the combination of their resources and the application of them to the maintenance of a great public library and reading room in this city, to be administered upon liberal principles and with a view to the public interest alone, we may yet, notwithstanding the enormous diminution of our resources which has resulted from the unfavorable decision of the courts upon Mr. Tilden's will, bring about the establishment of such an institution as he intended to bestow upon the City of New York.

The property of the Astor Library consisting of books, real estate and income producing investments is carried upon its books of account at something over $2,100,000 which very closely approximates the value of the property of the Tilden Trust.

Of this amount about $629,000 represents the cost of the books; $54,000 the cost of equipment; $481,000 the investment in building and site, and the remaining $941,000 is invested in bonds and mortgages and other securities.

The real estate is believed to have increased very largely in value since its acquisition by gift from Mr. Astor and is now estimated to be worth from $750,000 to $800,000; of this amount $400,000 represents the building and from $350,000 to $400,000 the land.

The books are believed by the Committee of the Astor Library to be worth all that they cost.

The collection consists of more than 260,000 volumes. Its character is so well known as to require no description from us.

The library is purely a library of reference. As such it is largely used. The number of readers shows a fairly constant increase from year to year, running up to 71,000 in 1894.

We have not been able in the time at our disposal to make an examination of the title of the Astor Library to its real estate, but the members of its Board of Directors whom we have met, believe that there are no restrictions upon it of any kind.

The Committee on the part of the Astor Library seem quite as strongly impressed as ourselves with the great public advantages to result from a merger of the two institutions, and are evidently sincerely desirous that no small differences should be allowed to stand in the way of so important an object.

After a full discussion of the situation, the two Committees were of opinion that a consolidation is practicable and desirable upon certain general lines; and having reached this determination, they adjourned to allow your Committee to report its conclusions to your Board and to receive further instructions in the matter.

The general outlines of the proposed consolidation as recommended by the two Committees are as follows: —

First: That there should be a consolidation of the two corporations, under the Act of 1892, or such further legislation, if any, as may be found necessary upon a more careful examination of details.

Second: That the name of the consolidated corporation shall be "The New York Public Library — Astor and Tilden Foundations."

Third: That while the Governing Board of the consolidated Corporation shall be left free to determine the policy and character of the Library, yet provision shall be made that not less than the income of the present productive endowment of the Astor Library shall be devoted to that part of the enterprise of the Consolidated Corporation which is to consist of a reference Library.

Under any probable plan, at least this amount would in any event be devoted to that purpose, but it was deemed wise to provide for it specifically in view of a resolution passed some years ago by the Astor Library to the effect that the funds contributed by Mr. Astor were given and received upon the understanding that they should be devoted to the purposes of a library of reference.

Fourth: The Astor Library has ten Directors besides the Mayor ex officio. The Tilden Trust has five.

As to the composition of the Board of the consolidated corporation, the Committee from the Astor Library is willing to admit the principle of equality of representation. They would, therefore, should the Tilden Trust insist upon it, recommend a reduction of their Board to five, and an agreement that each body should contribute five members to the new Board.

They are, however, conscious of the embarrassment which would attend the suggestion that any of their associates should retire and your Committee feel that there is a great delicacy in an insistence upon such a condition.

It is suggested that the Board of the Consolidated Body be composed of thirteen or fifteen members, five to be named by the Tilden Trust and eight or ten by the Astor Library, and that provision be made for an ultimate equalization of representation as vacancies may occur among the latter.

Fifth: The present building of the Astor Library is not strictly fire-proof, nor is it of sufficient capacity to meet, for more than a very limited time, the demands likely to be made upon it in the event of a consolidation.

There is available land in the rear upon the Bowery, which could probably be purchased and would permit of a sufficient enlargement of the building.

This would, however, still leave the older part exposed to the danger of fire.

We find that the Committee from the Astor Library are disposed to meet all such questions fairly and liberally. Whether the present site should be retained, whether additions should be made to it, or whether it should be abandoned and sold, and another site obtained, are questions they and we are willing to leave to the decision of the Governing Board of the Consolidated Corporation.

Sixth: In short the Committee from the Astor Library is willing to recommend a consolidation with the Tilden Trust upon the terms above outlined, without the imposition upon the consolidated corporation of any limitations or restrictions whatever, except the provision that at least the part above specified of the income shall be devoted to the purposes of a reference library.

And your committee further report that in their opinion the proposed consolidation with the Astor Library is practicable and expedient upon the general plan above set forth, and they recommend that a Committee of your Board be appointed with power to negotiate with a similar Committee from the Astor Library in respect to a consolidation upon the general lines suggested, and the arrangement of details connected therewith; such Committee to report back to your Board the result of such negotiations for its approval.

Respectfully submitted,
LEWIS CASS LEDYARD,
AND H. GREEN,
A. E. ORR,

New York, Jan'y 15, 1895.

Committee.

On motion of Mr. Green, it was Resolved, That in the judgment of the Trustees it is desirable for the Tilden Trust to consolidate with the Astor Library substantially upon the lines indicated by the committee's report.

Here is the text of the first report of the Astor Committee:

The Committee appointed by Resolution of the Board on the 26th day of November, 1894, to meet a similar Committee already appointed by the Tilden Trust to consider the subject of a consolidation of the Astor Library with the Tilden Trust, to confer at their discretion with any other person or persons interested in the matter, and to report thereon in writing at a regular or special meeting, of which Committee the President shall be Chairman, hereby respectfully report:

The Committee has met on several occasions with a similar Committee composed of Messrs. Andrew H. Green, Alexander E. Orr and Lewis C. Ledyard, appointed by the Tilden Trust, and has discussed and considered with care the entire subject of the advisability of a consolidation between the Astor Library and the Tilden Trust, and the manner in which such consolidation could be accomplished.

The Tilden Trust is a corporation, incorporated by special Act of the Legislature of the State of New York on March 26th, 1887 (Chapter 85 of the Laws of 1887) for the establishment and maintenance of a free library and reading room in the city of New York. Such corporation was specially incorporated for the purpose of receiving and [accepting] amounts derived under the Will of Samuel J. Tilden and to use and dispose of the same pursuant to powers contained in the Act, with the intention of following the terms of Mr. Tilden's Will. The powers vested in the five trustees, by the Act, are very large and broad following in that respect the liberal and comprehensive provisions of the Will.

From the statements furnished to the Committee the Tilden Trust is possessed of securities and property of the approximate value of about $2,000,000 with an undivided interest in the residue of Mr. Tilden's Estate, which may produce such further sum that the entire funds and property may reach $2,225,000 to two millions and a half of dollars; and in this respect its assets may be said to closely approximate to those of the Astor Library.

There are at present five trustees, namely: John Bigelow, Andrew H. Green, Alexander E. Orr, Lewis C. Ledyard and George W. Smith, formerly the secretary of Mr. Tilden.

The Tilden Trust has entered into no engagements or committals of any kind, to trammel or bind them in carrying on a public library, but its trustees seem to have fully and wisely appreciated the difficulties which surround the establishment of a new Library by them, now that the larger part of Mr. Tilden's property has been diverted from the purposes contemplated by him in the foundation of the Tilden Trust.

It would seem reasonably plain that, with the existence of the Astor Library as now constituted, the Tilden Trust without other aid could expect to do no more than duplicate our library, and to find, at the end of ten or twenty years when such duplication has been accomplished, that its funds are insufficient, either to properly serve the public or provide for proper maintenance and the necessary extensions.

Under these circumstances its trustees have hesitated in taking any action whatever until the present time, when it appears that some step must be taken in the performance of the duties devolving on them from the Trust.

In discussing, freely and frankly with the Committee appointed by the Tilden Trust, as to the future of a combined library and the lines on which a consolidated corporation ought to be conducted, the Committee has found the Trustees of the Tilden Trust committed to no fixed scheme, and as exhibiting no desire whatever to unduly push the circulating feature of the library as against a library of reference, nor has the Committee seen the least evidence of a desire on the part of those Trustees to take any step which could diminish or impair in any respect the usefulness and future of the Astor Library as a library of reference.

The Committee has explained freely and frankly the commitments of the Trustees of the Astor Library to Mr. William B. Astor and his family, on the question of maintaining the Astor Library as a library of reference, that the Trustees of the Astor Library must ask in any consolidation which shall take place, that the funds of the Astor Library shall in the future be devoted to the maintenance of a library of reference for all time to come. The Committee of the Tilden Trust have fully recognized the duty of our Trustees in this respect, and are prepared to agree to such a condition of consolidation leaving the policy of the consolidated Library as to the remainder of the joint funds, to be controlled by the future Board of Trustees.

The Committee has also had free conference with the Committee of the Tilden Trust concerning the name of the new corporation. While satisfied that the consolidated body must adopt a new name, and an impersonal one, the Committee has nevertheless felt it to be a duty to retain as far as possible consistent with the future of the Library, the name of the Astor family, which in successive generations has founded and provided for the institution. The same feeling has affected the Trustees of the Tilden Trust. The joint Committee has agreed, should the consolidation be effected, that the new body should be known as "The New York Public Library, Astor and Tilden Foundation."

The number of the Trustees of the Astor Library is now ten, excluding the Mayor of the City of New York and that of the Tilden Trust is five. Both Committees are of opinion that a board of fifteen is probably as large as is advisable. The Committee has been asked whether the Trustees of the Astor Library would agree that the number of Trustees in any consolidated corporation should be equally divided between the two institutions?

Being of opinion that to make a beneficial and successful consolidation, fairness and liberality must exist on both sides, the Committee has replied, that, in the judgement of the Committee, an equal division of the trustees of the new consolidated corporation would doubtless be agreed to by our Board of Trustees, if such were insisted on, but the hope was expressed that such a requirement would be waived by the Trustees of the Tilden Trust, and that some principle might be adopted which should retain as trustees of the new body, the existing trustees of the Astor Library, at least to a very large extent, leaving vacancies hereafter to be filled, in the new body, to be chosen by the members of the Board representing the Tilden Trust until the members nominated from the two bodies should be equal. The Committee is of opinion that this suggestion will be adopted in case the consolidation be accomplished.

The Trustees, in their resolution appointing the Committee, gave it authority to consult with any other person or persons as to the propriety of this consolidation with the intention of permitting the Committee should it deem the same advisable, to make explanations and give information to members or branches of the Astor family other than Mr. William Waldorf Astor, similar to those already made in writing by Mr. Cadwalader to Mr. William Waldorf Astor, some time since.

With a desire to scrupulously perform its duty toward both branches and all members of the Astor family, the Committee deemed it wise to make similar representations and give similar information to Mr. John Jacob Astor as has been made and given to Mr. William Waldorf Astor, for which purpose Mr.

Cadwalader was instructed, as sub-committee, to see him and explain fully the condition of the subject.

Mr. Cadwalader reported that at an interview arranged for the purpose, on December 7th, 1894, he fully and at length explained to Mr. John Jacob Astor, the condition of the subject, and at the same time handed him a copy of his letter to Mr. William Waldorf Astor, dated September 28th, 1894, and Mr. Astor's reply, dated October 9th, 1894, and requested him to carefully consider the subject. He further reported that Mr. Astor called upon him some time afterwards, returned the papers and stated that under the circumstances it seemed to him there was nothing for the Trustees to do but to effect the consolidation in contemplation, and that the same ought to be carried out.

Considering therefore the attitude of the Trustees of the Tilden Trust toward the carrying on of a joint library in the future, and their pecuniary position and the fact that the persons representing the two branches of the Astor family are of opinion that it would be a just and desirable measure, the question recurs, whether it is advisable, in the interests of the public and for the maintenance and extension of the great public charity founded by Mr. Astor in 1848 that the two bodies should be consolidated into a single corporation.

Bearing in mind the increasing demands of the public upon the Astor Library, for larger facilities, for an increase in the number of books, for better service, and that the Library should be open almost continually during the day and evening, and that the funds now available or which are likely to be available for these purposes are insufficient, and bearing in mind moreover that the public will not be content in the future with the same facilities which are now afforded, and that, unless some such step is taken, it is probable, that some large public library will be established, either by aid afforded to the Tilden Trust or by its consolidation with some other body or separately, which will not only duplicate the Astor Library, but exceed it in accommodation and benefits offered to the public; and impressed with the duty of founding for all time a public Library based on broad lines and possessed of ample funds, the Committee are clearly of the opinion that no obstacles exist which should deter the Trustees of the Astor Library from making a consolidation, and that such consolidation cannot fail to increase the value and usefulness of the Library, and to place at the command of the new body resources to fulfill all reasonable requirements and at the same time bring it more in sympathy and in contact with the general public and for all these reasons the Committee are firmly of the opinion that a consolidation should be accomplished as early as possible.

Considering the position and character of the individuals composing the Board of Trustees of the Tilden Trust, and the conviction on the part of this Committee that that body has no other possible object in view in a consolidation except to fairly and wisely administer the joint charity which shall be created, the Committee has not deemed it wise to endeavor to make any conditions concerning the future administration of the new corporation, except as hereinbefore indicated.

With reference to the means by which a consolidation may be accomplished, the Committee further reports, that in the year 1892 an Act of the Legislature was passed, being Chapter 541 of the laws of 1892 entitled, "An Act to permit the consolidation of library companies in the City of New York, by which any corporation theretofore or thereafter organized, under any general or special law of the State, as a library company or for the purpose of carrying on any library in the City and County of New York, was authorized to consolidate with any other corporation organized for the same or for similar purposes and thus form a single corporation."

Under this act, the respective Boards of Trustees of the two corporations may enter into an agreement for incorporation, prescribe the terms and conditions thereof and the mode of carrying the same into effect, and upon the making and perfecting of the agreement by the directors of the constituent companies, and the filing of a certificate thereof with the Clerk of the City and County of New York and with the Secretary of State the two corporations shall be merged into a single corporation, and under section 3 of the Act it is provided that thereupon "all and singular the rights, privileges, franchises and interests of any kind belonging to and enjoyed by the said several corporations so consolidated and every species of property. . . shall be deemed to be transferred to and vested in and may be enjoyed by such new corporation. . . and such new corporation shall hold and enjoy the same. . . in the same manner and to the same extent as if the said several companies so consolidated had continued to retain and transact the business of such corporation."

The Committee is of the opinion that this Act would permit the consolidation of the two corporations without further legislation and that it is entirely feasible, in the agreement for consolidation to provide that the funds of the Astor Library shall be devoted to the purposes of a library of reference, thus providing and carrying out the obligation entered into with Mr. Astor and his family.

The number of Trustees of a consolidated corporation under this Act is limited to twelve, but the Committee is of opinion that any requisite legislation approving such a consolidation and increasing the number of the Board of Trustees, could readily be obtained and in fact an increase of Trustees could probably be made under existing law.

The Committee are informed that the body of the Trustees of the Tilden Trust are definitely in favor of consolidating as herein suggested, and Mr. Ledyard and Mr. Cadwalader have been appointed a sub-committee of the joint committee to report upon the details to carry out the suggested consolidation.

The Committee therefore recommend that steps be taken without delay to perfect the proposed consolidation.

Subsequent to the meetings of the two Committees and since the conclusions of this Committee have been reached, certain Trustees of the Lenox Library, learning what was in contemplation, have personally expressed a desire that the Lenox Library should join in such a consolidation and having brought the subject before the Trustees that body has adopted a resolution appointing a Committee to confer with the Committees already appointed by our body and the Tilden Trust.

The Lenox Library has some $500,000 as an invested fund. It is the owner of the entire block between 70th and 71st Streets and Fifth and Madison Avenues, upon the Fifth Avenue front of which a library building is erected, suited only however to the present needs of that corporation; and the corporation is possessed of some 80,000 volumes many of large value.

The Committee is not fully advised as to the views of the Trustees of the Lenox Library, nor whether a further consolidation would be possible or desirable but it appears wise, before a consolidation of the other two bodies is actually perfected that the views of the Trustees of the Lenox Library should be ascertained, and in that view the Committee recommends that power be given to them or to a Committee to be appointed, to confer on the same subject with the Trustees of the Lenox Library, with instructions however to report to this Board before an agreement is reached.

On March 13, 1895, the Astor trustees received the report of their committee of conference with the Lenox trustees and voted their approval of the proposed union in this form:

The Committee appointed by the resolution of the Board at its last meeting to confer with the Committee appointed by the Lenox Library with reference to a consolidation, and to report back to this Board, respectfully reports:

That the committee has met on several occasions with the Committee appointed by the Lenox Library, composed of John S. Kennedy, Alexander Maitland, and George L. Rives, with Mr. Frederick Sturges, as an alternate, at which meeting the members of the Committee of the Tilden Trust, heretofore appointed, consisting of Messrs. Green, Orr and Ledyard, have been present.

The committees of the Astor Library and the Tilden Trust have assumed in their negotiations with the Lenox Library that the basis of the consolidation between the Astor Library and the Tilden Trust was practically agreed on, and that nothing was left to carry out the same except the formalities.

Prior to any meeting with the representatives of the Lenox Library the committee, appointed to report upon the details necessary to complete the consolidation of the two libraries, consisting of Mr. Cadwalader and Mr. Ledyard had made its report, and the Committee of the Lenox Library was practically informed that the completion of the details for a consolidation of the two other bodies was delayed only for the purpose of considering the subject of making their body a part of the new corporation.

The Committee of the Lenox Library, after some negotiation at prior meetings, at a meeting held on the 22nd of February, 1895, at which the members of the three committees were present, presented to the joint meeting a report adopted by the Trustees of the Lenox Library at its meeting of February 21st, 1895, stating the conditions upon which they were prepared to consolidate, a copy of which is hereto annexed, marked "A."

Other and further conditions had theretofore been requested by the Committee of the Lenox Library; one in particular, that the special collections made by Mr. Lenox and which may be deemed characteristic of him, including pictures and all works of art and the library amounting to some 30,000 volumes, should be kept together and set apart as a special collection, to be called the Lenox Collection and to remain in the present building of the Lenox Library. This the Committees from the other two bodies declined to accede to. It was plain to your Committee that a perpetuation of the Lenox Library in this form was a continuation of the very condition of things the consolidation was intended to abolish. The Committee of the Lenox Library finally presented the conditions appearing on page one of the annexed report as the basis on which the Lenox Board was prepared to consolidate.

With reference to these conditions there appeared to be no question worthy of discussion as to articles one, four, five and six, but considerable discussion arose over articles two and three, resulting finally in an amendment to articles two and three in the form also hereto annexed on page 3, as the result of which the Committee agreed at the solicitation of the Committee of the Lenox Library, that the Bibles collected and annotated by Mr. Lenox in his life time, and thereafter added to should be set apart as a special collection to be known as the Lenox Collection, and in place of making a special collection of the Americana collected by Mr. Lenox that the Board should cause a plate, or other suitable statement, to be made in regard thereto, the same to be placed in the Library. With reference to article three, upon which great stress was laid by the Committee of the Lenox Library, the members of the committees of the other two bodies declined to definitely accept the site of the Lenox Library, as the site for the consolidated Library, unless the Trustees of the Lenox Library should be able to remove all restrictions upon the use of that property for any purpose whatever.

It appeared that the portion of the block occupied by the Lenox Library fronting on Fifth Avenue and the front on Madison Avenue were exempt from any restrictions whatever, the same having been conveyed to the Trustees of the Lenox Library for the purposes of the said Library; but that a portion of the entire lot, being 195 feet in width, commencing 125 feet easterly from Fifth Avenue and running to a point 100 feet westerly from Madison Avenue was restricted so that the same could not be built upon for any other purpose than for an extension of the present Library. The condition therefore is that the remainder of the property could be used for any purpose or could be sold, and the strip in question upon which the restrictions exist could remain as an adjunct to the other property, but the same under the conditions of its transfer could not be built upon except for library purposes.

Under this condition of things the joint Committee accepted as a basis of consolidation with the Lenox Library the propositions contained in the report above referred to, leaving numbers one, four, five and six, practically unchanged, and amending the second proposition so that the Bibles of the Lenox Library alone shall remain as a special collection, and amending article three in the form as shown on the exhibit marked A, hereto annexed, providing substantially that the present site of the Lenox Library shall be selected as the site of the consolidated corporation, on condition that all restrictions upon the title or use of the real estate be first removed, or provided the same be agreed to be removed by some competent action within ten years, and if no such removal can be made that the new Board shall have full discretion to select another site, and that the selection of such site shall not prevent the establishment and maintenance of branches for circulation or otherwise.

The Committee is informed that it will probably be quite difficult for the Trustees of the Lenox Library to obtain the removal of the restrictions, although it is possible that such may be done. The new Board of Directors of the consolidated library will therefore be able to merge the two libraries absolutely, and except as hereinbefore indicated, and to use the building of the Lenox Library in such form as will best conduce to the future purposes of a great Library and even to decline to use the site, should it be deemed wise to do so.

Upon the adoption by the joint committee of the above amendments and the propositions of the Trustees of the Lenox Library, the action of the joint committee was reported back to the board of Trustees of the Lenox Library and by a vote of that body the action of the committee in accepting these modifications was approved, and the board of Trustees of the Lenox Library are now prepared to enter into the consolidation upon the terms suggested in the attached report. The Tilden Trust has also approved the report made by its committee for a consolidation of the three corporations on this basis.

The Committee therefore reports the action of the joint committee in this respect and recommends that the consolidation be perfected between the three bodies on the terms as to the Lenox Library set out in exhibit A.

In making such recommendations the Committee begs leave to state that in reaching the conclusions there contained the Committee has been influenced by the following facts:

First: The Committee are of opinion that as the Lenox Library has expressed a desire to join in the consolidation, it is a public duty that the books and funds at their command should be utilized for the public benefit, and that the competition of another library on practically the same basis should be prevented. Moreover, it is plain to the Committee that a combination of the three existing bodies, provided the individual interests of each are abandoned for the success and prosperity of the whole, cannot fail to create a Public library in its best and enlarged sense.

Second: While the site occupied by the Lenox Library is not, in the opinion of the Committee, the best or the most desirable in the City of New York, it offers many advantages, and is perhaps as desirable a site as can now be obtained, unless by some extra-ordinary circumstances some public site should be offered or presented by the City. In that event it will probably be open to the new Board to avail of any such opportunity.

Third: The Committee are anxious that it should be borne in mind that they have intentionally made no demand looking to a recognition of the services to the public rendered by successive members of the Astor Family, because, in its opinion, the existing Library — the direct fruit of their benefactions, — is their best monument, and because the Committee is satisfied that the Board of the consolidated Library will take proper measures on the perfection of the consolidation to make public expression on these points.

Dated March 12th, 1895.

A meeting of the Committee on Consolidation of the Astor, Lenox and Tilden Libraries held at 271 Lexington Avenue, February 22nd, 1895.

Present: Messrs. MARKOE,
CADWALADER, and
KING, representing Astor Library.

Messrs. MAITLAND,
STURGES, and
RIVES, representing Lenox Library.

Messrs. LEDYARD,
GREEN, and
ORR, representing Tilden Trust.

Dr. Markoe withdrew before any questions reached a vote.

The subject of discussion was the report of the Committee of the Lenox Library to its Board of Trustees, dated February 21st, 1895.

This report stated certain points as the basis of consolidation as follows:

"1. That the name of the consolidated corporation shall be The New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox & Tilden Foundations."

"2. That the special collections made by Mr. Lenox and which may be deemed characteristic of him, amounting to some 30,000 volumes, should be kept together, and set apart as a special collection, to be called the Lenox Collection."

"3. That the present site of the Lenox Library shall be selected for the site of the consolidated corporation, it being understood that the Trustees of the Astor Library and the Tilden Trust strongly desire that releases be procured from the representatives of Mr. Lenox or Miss Lenox, or both, of any legal conditions or restrictions in respect to the complete ownership of the real estate, or the disposition to be made of it."

"4. That the Stuart collection should, in accordance with the terms of the gift, be kept together and set apart, and should not be exhibited on Sunday."

"5. That the Lenox collection, is not, for the present, at least, to be exhibited on Sunday, but it was agreed that it was inexpedient to make this a provision or condition of the agreement of consolidation, and that it had best be regulated by resolution of the Trustees of the consolidated corporation."

"6. That the Board of Trustees of the consolidated corporation should consist of twenty-one members, seven of whom should be nominated by each of the three constituent corporations."

A diagram was exhibited by the Lenox Committee showing that the only part of the block at 70th Street and 5th Avenue and constituting the present site of the Lenox Library, which is subject to restrictions is the strip through the block 195 feet in width and extending through the block from 70th to 71st streets and distant one hundred feet westerly from Madison Avenue and one hundred and twenty-five feet easterly from Fifth Avenue.

After a full discussion of the foregoing points and of the general subject, a vote was taken for the purpose of determining what conditions the committees were willing to recommend to their respective boards.

The vote upon each point was unanimous and resulted as follows:

- I. That Article I of the aforesaid report remain unchanged.
- II. That Article II be amended so as to read as follows:

That the Bibles of the present Lenox Library shall be kept together and set apart as a special collection to be known as "The Lenox Collection," and that after the consolidation the Board shall cause to be placed in the Library in some proper form, by a plate with inscription, or otherwise a general statement of the Americana collected by Mr. Lenox and contributed by him to the Library.

All of this item II to be carried out, not by provision in the articles of consolidation, but by resolutions of the new Board.

- III. That Article III be amended so as to read as follows:

After the consolidation the present site of the Lenox Library shall be selected as the site of the consolidated corporation and such additions or extensions of the present building shall be erected thereon, as may be suitable for the accommodation of the Library of the consolidated corporation, and any necessary alterations of the present building shall be made. Provided however, that this shall be only upon condition that all restrictions upon the title or use of the real estate be first removed or by some competent action provided to be removed within ten years. If such removal or provision be not had the Board shall have full discretion to select any other site.

And provided further that such selection of the present site of the Lenox Library and the erection of a building thereon shall not be deemed to commit the corporation to the permanent retention of said site, nor shall the same be deemed to prevent the establishment or maintenance of branches for the circulation of books or other purposes.

Articles IV, V and VI were left unchanged.

The meeting then adjourned subject to call, to allow the Lenox Committee to recommend the foregoing amendments to their Board for its approval.

On May 8 at the meeting of the Astor trustees Mr. Cadwalader further explained to the Board that it was the judgment of the Committee heretofore appointed to carry out the details of the reorganization that some step should be taken by which the consolidated Board, when appointed should assume the obligation heretofore entered into between the Trustees of the Astor Library and William B. Astor and the members of the Astor family as particularly shown by reference to the Minutes of the Board of Trustees under date of July 29, 1857, and the Annual Report made to the Legislature, bearing date January 27, 1858, by which it was agreed that the settled and unchangeable basis of administering the Astor Library and its contents should be that of a Library of reference. He further stated that the Committee had prepared a resolution to be adopted by the new Board agreeing to carry out this policy, which the Committee had reason to believe would be approved by the Trustees of the Lenox Library and the Tilden Trust. Such resolution was read and is as follows:

WHEREAS the Trustees of the Astor Library have heretofore entered into binding engagements with Mr. William B. Astor and the members of the Astor family under which the larger part of the endowment of the Astor Library has been received, to the effect that the settled and unchangeable basis on which the Astor Library should be administered should be that of a library of reference, and that its contents should not be loaned or taken from the building, and that the donations in money, land or otherwise received for the foundation and support of the library should be administered according to such plan and not otherwise, as appears from an extract from the minutes of the Trustees of the Astor Library of the 29th of July, 1857, and as further appears by an extract from the report of the said Trustees to the Legislature of the State of New York, dated January 28th, 1858, copies of each of which are attached hereto;

AND WHEREAS, the Trustees of the Astor Library, as a condition of the consolidation, and in order that such engagement so entered into may be fully performed, have requested some formal act on the part of the Consolidated corporation to that end:

THEREFORE RESOLVED, That the New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations hereby recognize and agree that the settled and unchangeable basis of administering so much of the Library of the consolidated corporation as consists of the Astor Library and its books and contents shall be a library of reference, as in said resolutions, of July 29, 1857 is provided, and that the real estate, funds and property, real and personal, contributed to the consolidated corporation by the Trustees of the Astor Library shall be administered and applied in support of such plan.

FURTHER RESOLVED, In order to perform such engagement at all times that a yearly amount from the joint funds of the New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations at least equal to the income of the Astor Library for the year, 1894 viz:

Forty seven thousand Dollars.

and such further amount as may fairly be the income from the purchase price of the real estate upon which the building of the Astor Library is situated, in Lafayette Place, if sold, or of such part thereof as may be sold or otherwise disposed of shall at all times and in each year be devoted to the care, maintenance and extension of such part of the Library of the consolidated corporation, as shall be solely a library of reference, as hereinbefore described.

EXTRACT from the Minutes of a meeting of the Trustees of the Astor Library, held July 29th, 1857.

"Mr. Astor stated, that the donations by him made and some intended to be hereafter made were on the understanding that it was the settled and unchangeable basis of administering the library, that its contents should remain in the library rooms, for use by readers there, and should not be lent out or allowed to be taken from the rooms, and he requested, that the views of the board be freely and fully expressed. It was thereupon RESOLVED, That the settled and unchangeable plan of administering the library is the one above expressed and understood by Mr. Astor; and that the donations in money, land and otherwise, received from Mr. Astor, and to be thereafter received from him, and from other friends of learning, are received and will be administered according to such plan, and not otherwise."

EXTRACT from Report of the Trustees of the Astor Library to the Legislature of the State of New York, dated January 28th, 1858.

"In former communications to the legislature, accompanied by the reports of the superintendent, the trustees deemed it their duty, to express their convictions, that not only the convenience of the public, but the preservation and safety of the library, absolutely demanded, that the books should not be lent out or taken from the library building under any circumstances. Several years of practical experience in the management of the institution have fully confirmed them in this opinion. In a library of reference, intended for students, properly economical of time, and often coming from a distance for consultation, the necessity for every book required being always ready for examination without delay, must be apparent. The trustees have therefore deemed it proper and necessary, to prevent any further agitation of the subject by entering on their records a stipulation expressing those views in such a form as to furnish a pledge not only to the public, but to every friend of learning, who may hereafter feel disposed to aid the library by donations or endowments."

On motion of Mr. King duly seconded, it was RESOLVED, that this Board approves the form of resolution herewith presented, as a means of insuring the performance of the obligations assumed by this Board to Mr. William B. Astor, the Astor family, and other persons who have made gifts to the Library, by the consolidated corporation, when formed to the effect that the Astor Library should be for all time a library of reference and that its funds should be administered in support thereof.

The Committee heretofore appointed to carry out the details of the consolidation of the three libraries, verbally reported that an agreement had been prepared for the consolidation of the three libraries, pursuant to the provisions of the Act to permit the consolidation of library companies, being Chapter 541 of the Laws of 1892 as amended by the Act of 1895, and that upon the execution of the agreement herewith presented and the naming of the Trustees to represent this Board, the said consolidation will be entirely accomplished.

On motion of Mr. Olin, duly seconded, it was RESOLVED, that the form of the agreement now presented, be approved; and that the President and Secretary of the Board of Trustees of the Astor Library be and they are hereby authorized and instructed, as soon as this Board and the other Boards shall respectively name their Trustees, to cause the names to be inserted, and thereupon to execute said agreement, and that the seal of the Astor Library be affixed thereto, and that the same be delivered, as soon as the Committee heretofore appointed to carry out the details of consolidation shall have satisfactory evidence that the resolutions this day approved in regard to the preservation of the Astor Library as a library of reference, will be adopted by the consolidated Board.

The first report of the Lenox conference committee read as follows:

TO THE TRUSTEES OF THE LENOX LIBRARY:

The undersigned Committee appointed at a meeting of the Trustees held on the 6th day of February, 1895, report as follows:

Your Committee has conferred with Committees of three appointed, respectively, by the Trustees of the Astor Library, and by the Tilden Trust; and, as the result of such conference, your Committee report that it was the unanimous opinion of the representatives of those institutions, who were present, that a consolidation of the three corporations ought to be effected, in the manner provided by Chapter 541 of the Laws of 1892.

This Act, in substance, provides that any two corporations organized to carry on a library in the City of New York may consolidate with any other corporation organized for the same purpose, by entering into an agreement prescribing the terms and conditions of such consolidation, the mode of carrying the same into effect, the name of the new corporation, the number of Trustees thereof (not less than five nor more than twelve), and the names of the Trustees who shall manage the concerns of the Company for the first year and until others shall be elected in their places. When such agreement has been approved by each of the corporations separately, the same must be filed in the offices of the County Clerk of New York, and with the Secretary of State; and thereupon the corporations agreed to be consolidated are merged into a new corporation, which, under the law, is entitled to all the rights, privileges, franchises and interests of every kind belonging to and enjoyed by the several corporations so consolidated; and every species of property belonging to them is transferred to and vested in the new corporation, without any other deed of transfer. The new corporation organized under this Act may maintain and carry on any form of library authorized by the Charter of any of the corporations which have been consolidated.

There are some questions which may arise under this Act in relation to the restrictions upon the rights of the several corporations to invest in particular kinds of property, and also in regard to the number of Trustees of the new Board, which will make it desirable to apply for further legislation which, it is assumed, may be obtained without difficulty.

Upon this assumption, the following points were agreed to by the members present at the conference:

I. That the name of the consolidated corporation shall be, The New York Public Library: Astor, Lenox, and Tilden Foundations.

II. That the special collections made by Mr. Lenox, and which may be deemed characteristic of him, amounting to some thirty thousand volumes, should be kept together, and set apart, as a special collection, to be called, "The Lenox Collections."

III. That the present site of the Lenox Library shall be selected for the site of the consolidated corporation; it being understood that the Trustees of the Astor Library, and of the Tilden Trust strongly desire that releases be procured from the representatives of Mr. Lenox, or Miss Lenox, or both, of any legal conditions or restrictions in respect to the complete ownership of the real estate, or the disposition to be made of it.

IV. That the Stuart Collection should, in accordance with the terms of the gift, be kept together and set apart, and should not be exhibited on Sunday.

V. That the Lenox Collections are not, for the present at least, to be exhibited on Sunday; but, it was agreed that it would be inexpedient to make this a provision or condition of the agreement of consolidation, and that it had best be regulated by Resolution of the Trustees of the consolidated corporation.

VI. That the Board of Trustees of the consolidated corporation should consist of twenty-one members, seven of whom should be nominated by each of the three constituent corporations.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN S. KENNEDY, ALEXANDER MAITLAND, G. L. RIVES,	}	Committee.
---	---	------------

This report was accepted at the meeting held February 21, the committee was continued with power to perfect arrangements for the proposed consolidation, and it was resolved to ask the second point to be modified to read "That the special collections made by Mr. Lenox, and which may be deemed characteristic of him, including pictures and all works of art, and the Library — amounting to some 30,000 volumes — should be kept together and set apart as a special collection, to be called 'The Lenox Collections,' and to remain in the present building of the Lenox Library."

The result of this attempt at modification is shown in the report of the committee dated February 25, submitted on February 27. The text follows:

The undersigned members of the Committee appointed to confer with representatives of the Trustees of the Astor Library and the Tilden Trust report:

That they have attended a further conference with those gentlemen at which the several propositions heretofore agreed upon as a basis of a consolidation were again carefully considered; that the propositions numbered I, IV, V, and VI in the report of this Committee dated February 21st, 1895, were re-affirmed, and that the propositions numbered II and III were modified so as to read as follows:

"II. That the Bibles of the present Lenox Library shall be kept together and set apart as a special collection to be known as 'The Lenox Collection,' and that after the consolidation the Board shall cause to be placed in the Library in some proper form, by a plate with inscription, or otherwise, a general statement of the Americana collected by Mr. Lenox and contributed by him to the Library.* All of this item II to be carried out, not by provision in the articles of consolidation but by resolutions of the new Board.

“III. After the consolidation, the present site of the Lenox Library shall be selected as the site of the consolidated corporation, and such additions or extensions of the present building shall be erected thereon as may be suitable for the accommodation of the Library of the consolidated corporation, and any necessary alterations of the present building shall be made. Provided, however, that this shall be only upon condition that all restrictions upon the title or use of the real estate be first removed, or by some competent action provided to be removed within ten years. If such removal or provision be not had, the Board shall have full discretion to select any other site. And provided further, that such selection of the present site of the Lenox Library and the erection of a building thereon shall not be deemed to commit the corporation to the permanent retention of said site; nor shall the same be deemed to prevent the establishment or maintenance of branches for the circulation of books or for other purposes.”

The trustees concurred in these modifications and continued the committee with power. The final report, dated May 23, read as follows:

The Committee appointed to arrange the details of the consolidation with the Trustees of the Astor Library and the Tilden Trust respectfully report as follows:

The Legislature of the State at their recent session passed a bill at the request of the representatives of the three consolidating corporations, which became a law by the approval of the Governor on April 2d, 1895. The law amends the previous statutes by permitting the formation of a new library corporation with a governing body of twenty-one trustees, and it also removes certain obscurities in relation to the mode of procedure and the powers of the new body. The amendatory Statute is known as Chapter 209 of the laws of 1895.

In accordance with the terms of this act, an agreement of consolidation has been drawn, which prescribes in general language the terms and conditions of consolidation, the mode of carrying it into effect, the name of the new corporation, and the names of the trustees who are to manage its affairs for the first year and until others are chosen in their place.

A copy of the proposed agreement is hereto annexed marked A.

In addition to the terms and conditions set forth in the formal agreement of consolidation there are various other matters which were agreed upon in the preliminary conferences with the other consolidating corporations, but which, for various reasons, it was thought desirable not to embody in the papers to be filed in the public offices.

It is proposed that a series of resolutions, covering the points in question, shall be adopted at the first meeting of the Board of Trustees of the new Library. Such resolutions are hereto annexed marked B.

* This plate was set in the floor of the American History reading room in the new central building in 1913, the inscription setting forth that “In memory of James Lenox, a native and resident of the city of New York, born August 19, 1800, died February 17, 1880, the Trustees of The New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox, and Tilden Foundations in performance of a grateful duty have caused this tablet to be placed here among the books he cherished as a memorial of his services to the history of America.”

Your committee recommend the adoption by this board of resolutions herewith submitted, marked 1 and 2, authorizing the execution and delivery of the agreement of consolidation, and approving the proposed action by the new board.

FREDK STURGES

These resolutions were adopted and, thus authorized, the officers of the Lenox Library joined the officers of the other corporations in signing the articles of consolidation on May 23, 1895.

The resolutions, adoption of which at the first meeting of the new board was recommended by the Lenox trustees, set forth that

Whereas, the Trustees of the Lenox Library are seized and possessed of a certain block of land in the City of New York, hereinafter more particularly described, but which is subject to certain restrictions in regard to the character of the buildings to be erected thereon, and upon a part of which there has heretofore been erected the building now used and occupied by the Lenox Library;

And Whereas, it has been heretofore agreed, as a condition of consolidation, that after the consolidation the present site of the Lenox Library shall be selected as the site of the consolidated corporation in the event and upon the conditions hereinafter mentioned, and that certain other acts shall be done as is hereinafter provided.

Now therefore be it Resolved, That if prior to the selection by this Board of a site for the principal library building of the New York Public Library: Astor, Lenox, and Tilden Foundations, there shall be delivered to the Board such legal instruments as shall in the opinion of its counsel effectually remove all conditions or restrictions upon the title or use of the real estate hereinafter described (other than covenants against nuisances), or which shall in the opinion of such counsel effectually provide for the removal of such conditions or restrictions on or before December 31, 1905, this Board shall and will thereupon forthwith select as the site of the principal library building of this corporation the block of land situate lying and being in the Nineteenth Ward of the City of New York, bounded by Seventieth and Seventy-first Streets, and Madison and Fifth Avenues, and shall and will thereupon erect on the said premises such building or buildings or additions to or extensions of the present building as may be suitable for the accommodation of the library of this corporation, and will make all necessary alterations of the present building;

Resolved, That the selection of the premises above described (whether before or after the delivery of such legal instruments as may be required to remove or provide for the removal of the conditions or restrictions on the said premises), and the erection of buildings upon the said site, shall not be deemed to commit this corporation to the permanent retention of the said site; nor shall the same be deemed to prevent the establishment or maintenance of branches for the circulation of books or other purposes;

Resolved, That the Bibles of the present Lenox Library shall forever be kept together and set apart as a special collection to be known as "The Lenox Collection";

Resolved, That when the library building of this corporation is erected, there shall be placed therein in some proper form, by a plate with inscription or otherwise, a general statement of the Americana collected by Mr. Lenox and contributed by him to the Library;

As originally drawn the resolutions called for a provision that "until further order of this Board the Lenox Collections shall not be open for public inspection by visitors on Sundays," but it was decided to omit this from the formal record. As a matter of fact the "collections" of the Library were all closed to "public inspection by visitors on Sundays" until the Astor and Lenox buildings had been closed and the new central building opened for use just sixteen years after consolidation.

The text of the agreement of consolidation runs as follows:

AGREEMENT OF CONSOLIDATION*

AN AGREEMENT TO CONSOLIDATE THE TRUSTEES OF THE ASTOR LIBRARY, THE TRUSTEES OF THE LENOX LIBRARY, AND THE TILDEN TRUST, INTO THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY, ASTOR, LENOX AND TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

DATED, 23 MAY, 1895.

FILED AND RECORDED IN THE OFFICES OF THE CLERK OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK AND OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE, 24 MAY, 1895,

This Agreement made this twenty-third day of May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five, by and between the respective Boards of Trustees of the corporations known as "THE TRUSTEES OF THE ASTOR LIBRARY," "THE TRUSTEES OF THE LENOX LIBRARY," AND "THE TILDEN TRUST."

Whereas, The Trustees of the Astor Library are a corporation heretofore organized under an Act of the Legislature of the State of New York, entitled "An Act to incorporate The Trustees of the Astor Library," approved January 18th, 1849, and the several amendments thereto, for the purpose (among others) of erecting, maintaining and carrying on a public library in the City of New York; and

Whereas, The Trustees of the Lenox Library are a corporation hereto-

* At the time this agreement was entered into the Boards of Trustees of the three constituent bodies were composed of the following members:

The Trustees of the Astor Library were: The Mayor of the City of New York (ex officio), Thomas M. Markoe, M.D. (President), Edward King (Treasurer), Henry Drisler, LL.D. (Secretary), John Cadwalader, Rt. Rev. Henry C. Potter, D.D., Stephen Van Rensselaer Cruger, Robbins Little, Stephen H. Olin, Charles H. Russell, and Philip Schuyler.

The Trustees of the Lenox Library were: John S. Kennedy (President), Alexander Maitland (Treasurer and Secretary), Daniel Huntington, Frederick Sturges, H. Van Rensselaer Kennedy, Stephen Baker, William S. Tod, Charles Scribner, John Sloane, William F. Havemeyer, George L. Rives, William Allen Butler, J. Henry Harper, Samuel P. Avery, and Nicholas Murray Butler.

The Trustees of the Tilden Trust were: John Bigelow, Andrew H. Green, George W. Smith, Alexander E. Orr, and Lewis Cass Ledyard.

fore organized under an Act of the Legislature of the State of New York, entitled, "An Act to incorporate the Trustees of the Lenox Library," approved January 20th, 1870, and the several amendments thereto, for the purpose (among others) of erecting, maintaining and carrying on a public library in the City of New York; and

Whereas, The Tilden Trust is a corporation heretofore organized under an Act of the Legislature of the State of New York, entitled "An Act to incorporate The Tilden Trust for the establishment and maintenance of a free Library and Reading Room in the City of New York," approved March 26th, 1887; and

Whereas, the said three corporations, being all organized as library companies or for the purpose of carrying on libraries in the City and County of New York, are desirous of consolidating with each other into a single corporation, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 541 of the Laws of 1892, being an Act of the Legislature of the State of New York entitled "An Act to permit the consolidation of library Companies in the City of New York," approved May 13th, 1892, and the amendments thereto, and particularly as the same is amended by Chapter 209 of the Laws of 1895, being an Act of the Legislature of the State of New York entitled "An Act to amend Chapter 541 of the Laws of 1892 entitled 'An Act to permit the consolidation of library companies in the City of New York;'" and

Whereas, neither of said three corporations is a stock company, and neither of the same has members or stockholders other than its Directors or Trustees;

Now Therefore, this Agreement of Consolidation Witnesseth that the respective Boards of Trustees of the said "The Trustees of the Astor Library," "The Trustees of the Lenox Library," and "The Tilden Trust," have agreed, and do hereby agree, with each other and with each of the others as follows:

First. The said several corporations shall be consolidated and hereby are consolidated into a single corporation.

Second. The terms and conditions of said consolidation are as follows: The said new corporation shall establish and maintain a free public library and reading-room in the City of New York, with such branches as may be deemed advisable, and shall continue and promote the several objects and purposes set forth in the respective acts of incorporation of "The Trustees of the Astor Library," "The Trustees of the Lenox Library," and "The Tilden Trust."

Third. The mode of carrying this agreement into effect is as follows: Immediately upon the execution of this agreement, duplicates or counterparts thereof shall be filed in the office of the Clerk of the City and County of New York and in the office of the Secretary of State. Thereafter, the first meeting of the Trustees of the new corporation shall be called by John L. Cadwalader, George L. Rives and Lewis Cass Ledyard, or any two of them, by giving a notice in person or by mail addressed to each Trustee at his place of residence, of the time and place of such meeting. The said Trustees, or a majority of them, being assembled, shall organize by the election of a President, one or more Vice-Presidents, a Treasurer and a Secretary, and of such other officers, if any, as shall be deemed necessary or proper; and the said Trustees, on behalf of the new corporation, shall thereupon receive, take over, and enter into possession, custody and management of the existing libraries of the said three several corporations and of all property, real or personal, owned by them or either of them of any description whatever. The several treasurers, superintendents, librarians or other persons having charge of any of the funds, books, works of art or other property, real or personal, of either of the said three corporations, parties hereto, shall on demand deliver all property in their respective custody to the persons appointed by the Trustees of the new corporation to receive the same.

The Board of Trustees of the said three existing corporations shall take such action as may be necessary for the purpose of transferring to the new corporation the title to all real estate, securities, and all other property of whatever kind, standing in their several names, or owned by them, respectively, and for that purpose, and for the purpose of adjusting and closing the affairs of said corporations respectively and the accounts of the respective officers thereof, the Boards of Trustees of the said three corporations, parties hereto, may meet, notwithstanding the merger of said corporations in the new corporation hereby created, and carry out the purposes of this agreement.

The Trustees of the said new corporation shall, as soon as may be, adopt suitable by-laws, which, among other things, shall provide for the manner of election of new Trustees after the expiration of the first year, their respective terms of office and the manner of filling vacancies in the Board; shall fix and define the duties of the Trustees, the appointment of Committees and the powers and duties thereof; the number, grade, duties, terms of office and compensation of the several persons employed by the new corporation; and shall provide proper regulations for the investment, safe keeping, management and expenditure of the funds of the corporation; and the said by-laws shall, moreover, provide for the general custody, care, conduct and management of the affairs and property of said new corporation, and a method by which the said by-laws may be altered, amended or repealed. The said new corporation shall by its by-laws or otherwise make appropriate provisions with reference to the limitations, conditions or restrictions under which any of the funds or property of the said several corporations are now held or are to be used or enjoyed by the said several corporations, or any of them, in order that the same may be fully kept and observed.

Fourth. The name of the new corporation is "The New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations."

Fifth. The number of Trustees of the new corporation shall be twenty-one.

Sixth. The names of the Trustees who shall manage the concerns of the new corporation for the first year, and until others shall be elected in their places are:

Thomas M. Markoe, Henry Drisler, John L. Cadwalader, Henry C. Potter, S. Van Rensselaer Cruger, Stephen H. Olin, Edward King, Daniel Huntington, Frederick Sturges, Alexander Maitland, John S. Kennedy, H. Van Rensselaer Kennedy, William Allen Butler, George L. Rives, John Bigelow, Andrew H. Green, George W. Smith, Alexander E. Orr, Lewis Cass Ledyard, Samuel P. Avery and Philip Schuyler.

In Witness Whereof, The several Boards of Trustees of the three corporations, parties hereto, have caused the corporate seals of the three several corporations to be affixed to these presents, in triplicate, and these presents to be attested by their respective Presidents and Secretaries, thereunto duly authorized, on the day and year first above written.

It was signed, as above set forth, on the twenty-third day of May, 1895, and was filed and recorded in the offices of the clerk of the city and county of New York and of the Secretary of State at Albany on the day following, thus opening a new chapter in the library history of the city.

It is interesting to see between the lines of the formal legal agreements what a spirit of public service, mutual accommodation, and interest for the common good ran through all the negotiations. Differences of opinion arose, of course, but they were settled without heart burning and without ill feeling because every one concerned felt that his fellow workers were honestly anxious to secure the best result possible for the community and that no one planned unfair reservations or provisos.

When the result was announced it received general approval. During the course of negotiations the advocates of a Columbia College-Tilden Trust union made a sturdy effort to check the movement and to put the Trust into academic fields. They enlisted the interest of Charles A. Dana and The Sun in two issues of which appeared strong pleas for a memorial monument to Governor Tilden in connection with the new developments at Columbia. The effort bore no fruit but the editorials in The Sun furnish interesting reading. The first appeared in the paper of January 8, 1895, just about the time the Astor and Tilden negotiations were approaching completion but before formal action had been taken by either Board. The text is given below:

THE TILDEN TRUST

Samuel J. Tilden left the great bulk of his large fortune for the benefit of the people of New York. If his will had been sustained judicially, something like $6,000,000 would have been received for the great public library which he designed to be his monument in the spirit of devotion to the popular welfare which distinguished him.

Unfortunately for the people, that splendid provision of his will for their lasting profit was set aside by the Court of Appeals, and the purpose of Mr. Tilden was defeated. Happily, however, one of his heirs under this judicial interpretation gave up $2,000,000 of the share thus inherited by her, in order that the purpose of her uncle might be fulfilled at least partially. That large sum received from Mrs. Hazard is now in the charge of trustees, but much time has passed since it came into their hands and they have done nothing toward carrying out Mr. Tilden's magnificent intentions and justifying his niece's renunciation of so large a sum of money for the public benefit. The Tilden Trust is not executed. The monument of the illustrious American statesman is not erected, and, so far as we know, the trustees have taken no steps to carry out practically the project he had at heart, which Mrs. Hazard, with commendable piety, has sought to further. Nothing is done, and apparently the trustees can agree on nothing to do; and in their incertitude they are inviting just reproach from the public.

When the removal of the old City Hall was authorized, they considered a project for transferring it to Bryant Park and there putting it up as a building for the Tilden Library, but the law having been repealed, they were unable to carry out any such plan; and fortunately, for the old City Hall is in no way adapted for the uses of such a library. Its transfer to Forty-second Street would have involved an expense as great as the cost of a new and original structure. The old City Hall is not fire-proof, and in its whole arrangement it is unsuitable.

Besides, what is the use of expending these two millions of dollars on the establishment of a new library? The sum, as diminished from the amount Mr. Tilden intended to bequeath, is too small to be of itself sufficient to create and maintain a great library deserving to be his monument. Of necessity, the collection of books would be in great part the same as is now provided in existing libraries. It would be a mere wasteful duplication. Mr. Tilden's money, released by the renunciation of Mrs. Hazard, would be squandered. It is plain, therefore, that his munificent design can be fulfilled to good purpose, to the degree that the interpretation of his will makes possible, only by the strengthening of a great library already existing, which fulfills in its special and distinguished public usefulness the aims of its benefactor.

Of the libraries of the city there is one, and one only, which satisfies this requirement. The Astor Library is already a monument to an individual, or an individual family, with which the name of Mr. Tilden could not be associated in a manner consistent with the dignity of his great fame. The Lenox Library also perpetuates the memory of James Lenox specifically, and, choice as its collection of books and manuscripts may be, it is not a library of general usefulness. If Mr. Tilden's benefaction, made available by the piety of his niece, were expended there, it would be buried out of sight, and culpably diverted from the purpose he wished to achieve. It would be an indignity to the memory of the great statesman. The Free Circulating Libraries are far away from satisfying the purpose conceived by Mr. Tilden in his attempt to make a splendid benefaction for the public. They serve a useful end in their distribution of light literature mainly, but that is not the end which Mr. Tilden had in view.

The only library which satisfies the requirements is the library of Columbia College, and it meets them in an eminent degree. Its collection of books, already about 200,000, is now more useful to the public than any other in New York, and in the precise direction toward which Mr. Tilden looked. Its doors are open for readers at all hours of the day and evening, and the general facilities for obtaining access to its treasures are more liberal and more enlightened than those of any other of the great libraries. It is a model in its administration, and so far as the public convenience is concerned, it far transcends in value both the Astor and the Lenox libraries. It is an institution whereof the aggrandizement will benefit the people for all time, in accordance with the desire and intention of Mr. Tilden.

Moreover, we do not doubt that the trustees of Columbia College would make it in its name the fitting monument to the memory of that illustrious man which a change of its designation to the Tilden Library would render it. The college has planned the erection of a magnificent library building on its new site at Morningside Heights, and there, on the most commanding position in New York, it would be a perpetual monument to the great statesman, standing on the very Acropolis, and surrounded by congruous and imposing architectural piles forever inviting the admiration of all critics.

There is the place to put the money of the Tilden Trust, and the trustees should not hesitate a moment when so rare an opportunity is so obviously before them. Every cent of the two millions of dollars would be spent to good purpose in enhancing the wealth of a library unexampled in New York for its usefulness to the public; and Mr. Tilden's great name would be associated with it with the distinction to which his fame is entitled. Let the Columbia Library become the Tilden Library, enriched and glorified by the gift and the name of the statesman.

The second article appeared in the Sun January 27, three weeks later, after the Tilden Trust had voted approval of its committee's work and just before the Astor board was to take like action:

THE TILDEN TRUST

It is reported that the five trustees of the Tilden Trust, or the majority of them, are considering favorably a plan for disposing of the $2,000,000 of Mr. Tilden's estate now in their hands, which will divert the money so completely from the purpose for which it ought to be expended that we cannot believe in the truth of the story.

This plan, as reported, is to expend the money upon an existing library which is the monument to another man, whose name it bears, or upon a system of libraries in which the individuality of Mr. Tilden's bequest would be destroyed. For instance, if the fund in the Tilden Trust were turned over to the Astor Library or the Lenox Library, established as memorials of two other citizens, it might serve a useful public service, but would not erect the monument to him specifically which is due to his superior distinction. It would be putting his larger and higher fame in a subordinate place, and the public would justly rebel against the proceeding as a breach of trust. So also if the benefaction were used by the trustees for strengthening and extending the existing system of circulating free libraries, endowed by other funds and as memorials of several other individuals, its purpose of providing a monument to Mr. Tilden personally and peculiarly would be sacrificed. He would be merged in a collection of benefactors increasing in number as years pass, and his name, so illustrious among American statesmen, would not receive the distinction which should always belong to it in the popular memory. Such a proceeding would be tantamount to erecting a composite statue.

The Astor Library was founded with a bequest of $400,000 left by the original John Jacob Astor, and the course of his son and grandson successively in supplementing that endowment with further gifts and bequests is likely to be continued by each generation of the Astor family, to whose name it is so conspicuous a monument, and with which it is wholly and indissolubly associated. The Lenox Library also is a monument to James Lenox peculiarly. Moreover, neither of these libraries, intrinsically valuable as they both are, serves the public interests fully, because of the restrictions as to their hours of opening and in other matters of their practical administration, which tend to defeat Mr. Tilden's purpose of making his benefaction of general use to mankind. The free circulating libraries are already increasing by other gifts and bequests to the extent required by their necessity, now much less than it used to be before the marvellous cheapness of the sort of literature chiefly sent out by them, and the recent development of the newspaper as the provider of instructive and entertaining reading for the people in great variety and of the best quality. The demand formerly supplied only by such libraries will be met increasingly by other agencies. A great benefaction like Mr. Tilden's can be made permanently and substantially profitable to the public, in accordance with his serious intention, only by using it for the benefit of a library for studious use. But in justice to his memory and in return for his magnificent endowment, magnificent though now it is reduced to only one-third of the amount he intended to leave, this library should bear his name, and his name only, and be his individual monument.

Undoubtedly the money would be expended injudiciously, and it would be used contrary to his own wise judgment, if it were employed in the mere duplication of collections of books or libraries already existing. That would be folly, and therefore his trustees are justified in considering plans for making the benefaction practically valuable to the people, and to the fullest extent possible, by using some one of these collections as the nucleus for the development of a great Tilden Library. As we have pointed out, none of the libraries we have named can be used for such a purpose. None of them can be made the Tilden Library specifically and peculiarly as a monument to the dead statesman. Hence we have suggested, and, apart from the trustees themselves, there has been general concurrence as to the advisability of the plan, that the $2,000,000 of the Tilden Trust should be used for the building up of the library of Columbia College, now the most useful in the city, and already containing about 200,000 well-selected volumes; but only on condition that its name should be changed to the Tilden Library, so that it should become a perpetual monument to that statesman personally and solely. The project is that the college shall give the site for the building on the most commanding elevation of its new grounds on Morningside Heights, that the structure shall be the centre and most imposing feature of the architectural scheme of improvement, and that it shall be erected by the Tilden Trust and designated for all time as the Tilden Library. Above the cost of a building of adequate and suitable grandeur there would remain an endowment of at least $1,000,000 whose entire income should be expended on the collection, the college being required to render compensation for its use by bearing all the cost of maintenance and administration.

If it be possible for the Trustees of the Tilden Trust to make such an arrangement with the trustees of Columbia College, a library which in its proportions and its usefulness to society satisfies the design of Mr. Tilden in all its magnificence and comprehensiveness, can be developed rapidly as a monument proportionate in dignity and importance to the fame of the statesman. It is, unquestionably, the best use to which to put the trust both for the public benefit and as a memorial to the great benefactor. Mr. Bigelow, the only one of the trustees who has published any dissent from the suggestion, says that if it had been Mr. Tilden's desire to establish a university library, he would have left his money for that express purpose; but he made the bequest for no other and for no specific purpose, and it was on that ground that it was set aside judicially. So far as his design was indicated in his will, it was consistent especially with a university system, for he spoke particularly of his desire to promote the advancement of science and art, in the promotion of which a university is primarily engaged.

The trustees of the Tilden Trust will be held accountable by severe public criticism for the manner in which they discharge their duty to the memory of Mr. Tilden and to the people for whose lasting benefit he desired to have his estate expended.

Notwithstanding the editorial disapproval of January The Sun carried on the first page of its issue of Sunday, March 3, 1895, a news story a column and a half long giving a fairly accurate account of the movement. It includes a statement that after the Tilden Trust had decided against union with Columbia came another suggestion for a union of Columbia "with the Tilden Trust and the Astor Library, but detailing such conditions that the committeemen from both of the other bodies rejected the offer. One specification was that the college students should have the preference over the general public in the use of books, which was regarded as conflicting with Mr. Tilden's desire that the library should be essentially for the use of all the people."

One of the conference committee is quoted as saying, "The spirit manifested throughout has been that of unselfish desire to carry out on the broadest lines Mr. Tilden's wishes, and to bring about the greatest possible benefits to the city, at the same time conserving as far as it lay in the power of the committee the interests of the different institutions."

Another said, apropos of the location of the new library, "What we must aim at is a people's library so situated that the greatest number of people, and particularly those who have not opportunities for reading at their homes, may avail themselves of it with the least amount of trouble. To locate the library where the Lenox Library now stands would be to put it practically out of the reach of the down-town working people."

Mr. Orr, of the Tilden board, said that "This proposed union will, I believe, be productive of the greatest good to the city and will give us one of the greatest public libraries in the world." His opinion was followed by that of George L. Rives who said: "There is little doubt in my mind that the plan will meet with little opposition, and will eventually obtain the approval of the Boards of Trustees. Independently these three libraries could do but little, while combined they would form a tremendous educational power. Personally I should have liked to see the Tilden fund united with Columbia College Library, but that would not have been in accordance with Mr. Tilden's views, as he wished to establish a free and public institution, and for certain reasons union with the Columbia Library would have thwarted this wish."

The observer twenty-five years after the event can say with emphasis that the high ideals of the men who conceived and brought forth the union were realized in full.

THE PILGRIM TERCENTENARY EXHIBITION IN THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

BY VICTOR HUGO PALTSITS

Chief of the American History Division and Keeper of Manuscripts

IN THE Main Exhibition Room (113), for a period of three months, ending about March 1, 1921, there is on free public view an extensive assemblage of books, pictures, personalia, maps, views, commemoration and celebration orations, medals, cards, programmes, etc., relating to the Mayflower Pilgrims in their homes and haunts, in England, Holland, and America, down through the entire period during which Plymouth Colony existed as a separate body politic.

This exhibition sharply differentiates the Pilgrims from the more extensive and better known Puritan Commonwealth of Massachusetts Bay, which absorbed the Plymouth entity under William and Mary. It endeavors to present, within its historical limitations and in systematic form, a birdseye view of the principal books and other evidences relating to the founders of the Plymouth Colony in New England, as more particularly hereafter described. The exhibition fills 28 large showcases and 8 large standards, the objects being accompanied, when necessary, by succinct yet appropriate descriptive labels.

Two showcases call attention to "Some background factors in Pilgrim history." Here are shown a manuscript of Wycliffe's New Testament, written about A. D. 1380, the earliest in America and believed to be the finest in existence of so early a date; the Coverdale Bible, the first complete printed English Bible, 1535; and the first edition of the Genevan or so-called Breeches Bible, 1560, a version which the Pilgrims commonly used. In this group one sees the works of Dr. John Whitgift, arch antagonist of the Puritan reformation, out of which the Pilgrims sprang, and the parliamentary journals under Queen Elizabeth's reign, which show the measures employed to hold in check the movement. Modern studies about the early English dissenters, leaders of different factions such as Robert Browne founder of the Brownists, John Smyth the Baptist; Henry Barrow the Separatist, and John Penry the Pilgrim Martyr, follow in succession. A large part of one showcase contains an array of the publications connected with the Martin Marprelate Controversy, in 1588-1590, which as a campaign of pamphleteering "clearly belongs to the great Puritan movement" in Elizabeth's reign and "was of a nature to have weight chiefly among the more ignorant classes." At least it had the masses of England by the ears. The title-pages are often quaint and the spurious places of printing are sometimes funny.

The "background factors" are followed by two cases of "General Works in Pilgrim History"; first place is given to the monumental bibliographical work of Dr. Henry Martyn Dexter, on "Congregationalism as seen in its Literature" (1880), followed by the works that treat of the Pilgrims in their three homes, arranged in chronological order from 1839 to the present year. Another showcase is devoted to "The Pilgrims in England," in which there is a small piece of wood from the railings in the old Town Hall court room of Boston, Lincolnshire, before which refugee Separatists, including Brewster and Bradford, were tried in 1609.

The two cases devoted to "The Pilgrims in Holland" are well worth careful study by students, because they show newly discovered or otherwise little known materials. A case is devoted to the Leyden congregation and John Robinson, their pastor. There are reproductions of manuscripts showing Robinson's genuine handwriting, only recently determined, and also what was formerly believed to be his signature but is now known to be otherwise. A part of his wife's will with her signature is shown, and also a document by two Dutch theologians, who make a declaration about Robinson's intentions for the removal of a goodly number of his flock from Leyden and his reasons for doing so. Robinson's own works are shown. The second Holland case is devoted entirely to Elder William Brewster and his Leyden printing press. Among the Pilgrim company which first fled from England to Amsterdam, then removed to Leyden, were three men who were printers, namely Elder William Brewster, Edward Winslow, and John Reynolds. Brewster's Leyden printery was in existence only 33 months, from October, 1616, to June, 1619, during which period some 19 books or tracts were issued from it and widely disseminated. The English monarch, James I, was wroth at some of these products and, through Sir Dudley Carleton, his ambassador to the States-General, sought the arrest of Brewster. However, through an error, Thomas Brewer, the financial backer of the press, was put under arrest, whilst Brewster escaped and his printing materials were removed from Choir Alley to a garret in Brewer's house, in Belfry Lane, which was near the Leyden residence of the Rev. John Robinson. Only four of the books Brewster issued, three in Latin and one in Dutch, bore his name as the printer, and these came from his shop in 1617. Later it was the part of wisdom in him not to reveal himself. Curiously enough, a copy of the only Dutch book he printed was once sold in New York at auction, then disappeared, and now apparently no copy is known even to the specialists. A rather unusual feature of the Brewster case is an inventory of his own private library, analyzed by such able scholars as Dr. Justin Winsor and Dr. Henry M. Dexter. The latter ascertained by laborious research that 75 per cent of the books in the library were printed before 1621, and that Brewster owned in his New England home at least as many as eleven books, products of his own Leyden shop.

The books which tell of the "Principles and Purposes of the Pilgrims" and describe their "Manners and Customs" fill two showcases. Here and in other parts of the exhibition may be seen pictures of their household furnishings, such as chairs, cradles, chests, pots, pewter dishes, and personal belongings as clocks, swords, spinning-wheels, and other relics.

The celebration of Forefathers' Day was first instituted in 1769 by a newly-organized "Old Colony Club." A celebration has since been held every year at Plymouth, Mass., with but few exceptions, under various auspices, mainly, however, the Town, one of its churches, or by the Pilgrim Society organized in 1820, and celebrations have become general in many other places. The most notable addresses delivered on these occasions are exhibited. The celebrations of the tercentenary recently concluded in Holland and England, and those more recently held in the United States, are well represented in the show.

The large standards are devoted to pictures, maps, and other media for visualizing the historical associations of the Pilgrims in their three homes and their other temporary stepping stones to the New World. Special attention is called to "The Pilgrims in Art," a rather comprehensive lot, including the fine original oil painting of "Pilgrims going to Church," by George Henry Boughton. A large painting of "The Mayflower," painted in oils in 1920, has been lent by the marine artist, James Gale Tyler.

The largest representation is, naturally, given to "The Pilgrims in New England," there being eleven showcases devoted to the Pilgrim colony. Before the Pilgrims came over and, in fact, before their leaders in Holland had planned a removal, Captain John Smith had fixed upon the naming of New England in his tract, "A Description of New England" (London, 1616) accompanied by the first map of New England. The Library devotes a case to those works of Smith that relate to the landfall of the Mayflower Pilgrims, and descriptive labels tell about them. Smith's writings also had a profound influence upon American exploration and settlement; they really constitute a group of factors in Pilgrim history.

Two showcases of popular interest are related to the ship "Mayflower." All pictures of the ship are merely artists' idealizations, since no original picture or model is known. There were at least forty vessels of the name which sailed from England between the years 1550 and 1770. Moreover, besides the "Mayflower" of the Pilgrims "at least three and probably more voyages were made by other 'Mayflowers' to America during the first half of the seventeenth century." An upright case shows a small ship's model, made from a beam of old Scrooby Manor House, the English home of Elder William Brewster. This model was lent by Pilgrim Church of New York City.

The rarest books in Plymouth Colony history are shown together in a case. "A briefe Relation of the Discovery and Plantation of New England," the "Sermon preached at Plimmoth," on December 9, 1621, by Robert Cushman, and the so-called Mourt's "Relation or Journall," all three were printed in London in 1622. Then there is the interesting tract of Edward Winslow, later the third governor of the colony, namely, his "Good Newes from New-England" (1624), which continues the story of events from November, 1621, to September 10, 1623. Other outstanding books in this section are John Cotton's "The Planters Plea" (1630); William Wood's "New Englands Prospect" (1635); Thomas Morton's antagonistic book on "New English Canaan" (1637); Governor Winslow's "Hypocrisie Unmasked" (1646), and its reissue as "Danger of Tolerating Levellers in a Civill State" (1649); also his "New Englands Salamander discovered" (1647).

Pilgrim singing or psalmody deserves a word. When the Pilgrims came over, they brought with them Henry Ainsworth's metrical version of the psalms and the edition of 1618, said to be the edition they used, is exhibited, side by side with the "Bay Psalm Book," so called because it originated in Massachusetts-Bay Colony, the first book printed in English America, and one of only ten copies known. The "Bay Psalm Book" was soon revised and was printed first in the new form at Cambridge, Mass., in 1651. The only known copy is exhibited. This version remained in use in New England down to about the end of the colonial era. Its connection with the Pilgrims and Plymouth is its adoption by the latter when the two colonies were merged into one body politic at the end of the seventeenth century.

Before 1669, when Nathaniel Morton's "New-Englands Memoriall," was published, down to 1767, when the second volume of Gov. Thomas Hutchinson's "History of the Province of Massachusetts-Bay" appeared from the press, there had been used for historical works by others, a most unusual and important unpublished history. This was Gov. William Bradford's "History of Plimouth Plantation." Morton who had used it freely was Bradford's nephew. The Rev. Dr. Thomas Prince who quoted from it in 1736, had it in his own library, from which it disappeared about the beginning of the American Revolution and its whereabouts was unknown for three quarters of a century, until discovered in the Bishop of London's Library at Fulham, England. It was, after previous unsuccessful trials, finally restored to Massachusetts in May, 1897, and is the most treasured possession of its kind in the State House. The books of the authors who had used the Bradford manuscript before its disappearance are represented in the Bradford group. A facsimile of the manuscript "History" is there, and books with texts of Bradford's other known writings, namely, his "Dialogue on Church Government" and his fragmentary letter book. The chief printed editions of his "History," from the first (1856) to the last (1912), both of these under the patronage of the Massachusetts Historical Society, are shown. Facsimiles of Bradford's baptismal record at Austerfield, England, of his intention of marriage at Amsterdam and the record of its taking place there, and a recently-discovered power of attorney dated at Leyden, July 24, 1620, are not without passing interest.

The Plymouth Colony records have been printed under competent editors. The court orders, laws, and judicial acts occupy the larger space; but there are volumes devoted to the lands, Indians, commissioners of the United Colonies, and miscellanea. All are shown, as are also the printed town records, wills, and epitaphs.

A case is devoted to Capt. Myles Standish. The Standish portrait shown is not authentic, although often given as his picture in books. The only undisputed portrait of a Mayflower Pilgrim is the painting made in 1651, in England, of Governor Edward Winslow. In the Standish group are also shown forgeries of letters purporting to have been written by him. John Alden, Francis Cooke, Isaac Allerton, Capt. Richard More, Peregrine White, and other Pilgrims have representation in another showcase. The last cases devoted to their history in New England present in chronological order the compiled histories of Cape Cod, the county and town of Plymouth, and the guide books pictured for the tourist.

Finally, two cases show "The Pilgrims in Literature." Here are the Pilgrim novels of Jane Austin, Hezekiah Butterworth, Mrs. Cheney, Frank M. Gregg, Miss Dix, Motley, and others; another growing group is the Pilgrim in drama or pageantry; and the last is the chief literary group, namely the Pilgrim in poetry, which includes Mrs. Hemans, Holmes, Longfellow, Lowell, Whittier, and other poets of lesser distinction.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of December, 1920, the Library received as gifts a total of 24,853 volumes, 3,766 pamphlets, 16 maps and 219 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

From the University of Texas came the five volumes of the catalogue of the library of the late John Henry Wrenn, compiled by Harold B. Wrenn and edited by Thomas J. Wise; published by the University of Texas, Austin, 1920. Mrs. T. B. Blackstone, of Branford, Conn., gave a facsimile reproduction of "An Eulogy on the Death of George Washington, delivered at Guilford, February 22, 1800, by Doctor David S. Brooks" (No. 17 of 40 copies printed at Branford, Conn., 1920). From Mr. Ralph D. Mershon came 27 volumes of the "Transactions of the American Society of Civil Engineers," 1908-1918. From Sr. Gustavo Arboleda came a collection of 17 volumes, 14 pamphlets, and other material, including several of his own biographical and historical studies relating to Ecuador and Colombia, also Spanish books, pamphlets, lists of South American periodicals and copies of early Spanish-American newspapers.

Mr. Albert Sterner gave six of his own lithographs as follows: "Head of a young negro," "The Passion," "The Cards," "Portrait of E. T. Quinn," "Homeless" and "Âme malade." From Mr. Louis Orr came four of his etchings — "La rue Haute-feuille," "Street in Avignon," "L'Odéon," and "St. Gilles du Gard."

Interesting miscellaneous collections were received from the following: From Mr. Howard Mansfield, 31 volumes, 2 pamphlets and 49 periodicals; from Mrs. William Patterson and Miss Rose W. Terry, Forest Hills Gardens, 328 volumes and 120 periodicals; from Dr. T. Mitchell Prudden, 41 volumes and 58 pamphlets; and from Mrs. Frank Sullivan Smith, 15 volumes, including the "National Cyclopaedia of American Biography," New York, 1898.

Nineteen additions were made by gift to the Library's collection of divisional and regimental histories.

The accessions to Map Room included an Official Topographical Map of the province of Kwangtung (China), published by the Provincial Government in Chinese; with historical and descriptive notes; 2 vol. Canton: 1897. This was presented to the Library by Mr. T. Y. Leo.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN DECEMBER, 1920

DURING the month of December, 1920, there were received at the Library 40,522 volumes and 9,340 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 97,447. They consulted 216,935 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 275,236.

the dimensioning, reading and checking of working drawings, numbering and filing systems for drawings, and general drafting room practice. New York: The Industrial Press, 1920. ix, 342 p. illus. 8°.

"Presents the subject in a way that will enable the student to understand what the term mechanical drawing really means in its broadest sense, the essential features of modern drafting practice and the difference between the mere representation of a design by a suitable drawing and the more valuable work of originating and developing the design itself." — Preface.

Jones, T. H., and J. D. FRIER. Aeroplane structural design, a book for designers, draughtsmen and students. London and New York: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., 1920. xii, 267 p. illus. 8°. VDY (121)

Avoids advanced mathematics and endeavors to present this complex subject in "as palatable a form as possible," omitting much that is usually found in standard text-books on structures, graphics, and strength of materials.

"From the point of view of the draughtsman and student the ground is fairly well covered, and modern methods have been appropriately 'boiled down' for the easy comprehension and use of such readers." — Times engineering supplement, Nov., 1920.

*Lange, Otto. Die Zwischenprodukte der Teerfarbenfabrikation. Ein Tabellenwerk für den praktischen Gebrauch nach der Patentliteratur. Leipzig: Otto Spamer, 1920. xxiv, 645 p. VOR (118)

"It is a splendidly printed volume, with clear type on good paper. The enormous amount of information is made readily accessible by careful classification, largely based on an alphabetical arrangement and supplemented by an extensive index. 3,627 substances are described, arranged in four series, the derivatives, respectively of benzene, naphthalene, anthracene and phenanthrene... Brief statements are made as to the methods of producing the intermediates, and references to the patent literature... are given... The book is a most important and valuable contribution to the field of coal-tar chemistry and will be an indispensable guide to all who are engaged in either practical or theoretical work." — Henry Lefmann in Journal of the Franklin Institute, Jan., 1921.

Levy, S. I. Modern explosives. London: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd. [1920.] ix, 109 p. illus. 12°. VOG (118)

This addition to the series "Common commodities and industries," is intended to give the lay reader an untechnical account of the development of explosives during the war with special reference to the famous British factories at Gretna and Queen's Ferry. Deals with the raw materials, chemistry, acids, propellant and high explosives, explosives in war and peace, and the relation of chemistry to the national welfare. Interesting factory views.

"Although avoiding technical details, the author has given a reasonable and well-balanced treatment." — Nature, Nov. 11, 1920.

Also reviewed in Arms and explosives, Oct. 1, 1920; Chemical trade journal, Sept. 4, 1920; Mining journal, Oct. 30, 1920; Chemical age, London, Oct. 2, 1920.

Marquand, H. S. Electric welding; its theory, practice, application and economics. London: Benn Brothers, Ltd., 1920. 204 p. illus. 8°. VID (117)

Comprehensive and practical study of all sides of the subject, including processes, equipment, machinery, applications, testing and strength of welds. Contains diagrams, illustrations, and a bibliography.

"Chapter 2, referring to The properties of metals considered from the welding point of view is particularly good and should be closely studied as it contains information of the greatest value to those seeking to improve the quality of their work." — Electrician, Nov. 19, 1920.

Entertaining, popular account of coral and volcanic formations, pearl and salt islands, in tropical and frozen seas, the vegetation, the life, and the romance.

Young, A. P. The elements of electro-technics. London: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., 1920. viii, 348 p. illus. 12°.

VGC (121)

The beginner, or general reader, desiring simple explanations with examples of industrial application will find this volume "full of meat," yet free from a formal text-book style. There are many historical references and brief descriptions of various materials. Would be improved by a chapter on alternating currents.

"The painters about whom these chapters are written... have passed on. We are now beginning to see them in something like historical perspective... They wrought during a period of great material development, making an epoch in art history and leaving a tradition. And their trail is worth following, for eventually it may become a broad national highway." — Preface.

"The chapters on the individual painters, while informative and broadly critical, abound in touches of personal reminiscence and make delightful reading." — N. Y. Evening Post, Dec. 13, 1919.

"The period of Roman-Florentine painting which extends from Raphael to the Carracci... is steeped in a semi-darkness. Hitherto... one had to go back to Lanzi's work, the only place in which to find a connected account... The author hopes that he will be able to show that the artistic efforts of the cinquecento deserve more attention... than they have received." — Preface.

Bahr, Hermann. Expressionismus... München: Delphin-Verlag, 1919. 152 p. illus. 3. ed. 12°. MAS

"Bahr could not keep from writing a book on expressionism and, with prophetic gesture, singing a funeral hymn to impressionism. His book is written with esprit... but it might better not have been written. For it hurts art, since its attitude is fundamentally wrong... He who writes on art cannot be definite enough... Bahr has never really 'lived' the pictures of the great impressionists. Therefore his book will not convince. Nor what he says about impressionism. That on which he bases has nothing to do with painting." — Kunst und Künstler, Dec., 1916.

"What expressionism would like to paint, draw, model, is the metaphysical, the divine trace in things." — p. 49. "All that expressionism has produced is in any event — in so far as it has moral and artistic value — consciously or unconsciously a bridge to the metaphysical." — p. 51.

"In taking up the practice of painting, it is a question what pigments to use, how to arrange them on the palette, and when not to use the palette... It is difficult to decide, in view of the great number and variety of pigments, and the infinite possibilities of mixing them together. Most painters get over the difficulty by acquiring a habit... I am fully persuaded that it is perfectly possible to make of the palette an instrument of precision." — Preface.

THE KENNAN COLLECTION

BY ABRAHAM YARMOLINSKY
Chief of the Slavonic Division

LAST autumn the Library received the final instalment of a notable collection of manuscript, pictorial, and printed material, the gift of Mr. George Kennan of Medina, N. Y., until lately a resident of this city. A distinguished traveler and author, Mr. Kennan is perhaps best known as an investigator of the Siberian prison system, and as an expert generally on Russia. The collection, naturally enough, deals chiefly with the country which has been the object of the donor's active interest ever since he first visited Siberia over half a century ago. In fact, it is one of the most important assemblages of Russian material ever presented to the Library.

MANUSCRIPTS

The manuscript material contains a mass of documents which will be of immediate interest to the student of the Russian revolutionary movement in its early phases, and, especially, of the prison and exile system as it affected the political criminals in Siberia. A closer examination reveals the fact that these time-worn pages, penned in the prison cells of Yakutsk or in the attics of Paris, have a wider appeal. Many of them are moving human documents, as well as material of purely historical value.

The epistolary art is one of the few accomplishments which thrive in the solitude of prison cells and in the desolation of exile. The collection comprises a large number of letters, written mostly in the '80's and early '90's, by political convicts and other people connected with the emancipatory movement. First of all, there are letters addressed to Mr. Kennan himself. In the course of his study of the Russian political prison system in Siberia in 1885-

86, Mr. Kennan formed many friendships among the revolutionists and liberals, and laid the foundation for a correspondence which in some cases lasted for years. Furthermore, his public activities and numerous writings, notably "Siberia and the Exile System" (New York: Century Company, 1891) in which he exposed the unspeakable horrors of the system, made his name a household word among the Russian liberals, — which circumstance naturally served to increase the volume of his Russian correspondence.

Thus we have here letters, mostly written in the '80's, by Lesevich, the philosopher, Peter Lavrov, the great theorist of populism, Stepniak (Kravchinski), Shishko, Lobanovski, Burtzev, Klementz, Bialoveski, Stanyukovich, Machtet, Drahomanov, — to mention only the better known names. There are also about twenty letters by Yegor Lazarev, a revolutionist, written in this country, to which their author had escaped from Siberia; and several letters to Mr. Kennan from Shlikerman, another revolutionist who found refuge in this country and who at one time resided in Brooklyn. Among his papers there is a copy from a pathetic farewell note addressed by him to his infant son, and his "Last Prayer," penned in his own hand in self-taught English, apparently in expectation of imminent death.

Some of these letters are long and contain substantial information on prison conditions and Russian affairs generally. Not content to record their own experiences, Mr. Kennan's correspondents sent him all manner of documents relating to the life of the political prisoners, principally letters by the convicts to their relatives and friends, some of them in the original, others in copy. These letters exceed in volume the donor's personal correspondence with the revolutionists. There are about forty letters from Catherine Breshkovskaya, known as the Grandmother (Babushka) of the Russian Revolution, to her American friends, together with three letters by the aged revolutionist N. V. Chaikovski about the Babushka. The letters are written in her quaintly solecistic English. Barring one, which is in her original handwriting, the letters are complete and faithful typewritten transcripts from the originals. The collection seems not to have been utilized in compiling the American edition of Madame Breshkovskaya's letters ("The Little Grandmother of the Russian Revolution," edited by Alice Stone Blackwell. Boston: Little, Brown & Co., 1917), some of these letters thus remaining unpublished.

The Babushka's letters cover the period of 1910 to 1912. Most of the other letters relate to the '80's and '90's of the past century. There is, for instance, a group of letters by a young exile, Peter Peshekaroy, 116 pages in all, written to a friend of his in the period 1888-1890. Many letters describe prison conditions and give eye-witnesses' accounts of the outstanding events of the life of the "politicals" in Siberia in the '80s. There are fully a dozen such accounts of the so-called Yakutsk Massacre, in addition to clippings on the same subject from English papers and Russian "underground" publications. The affair (it took place in 1889) consisted in a clash between a group of exasperated convicts and the military, resulting in the slaughter of several innocent prisoners and the subsequent execution of a few others. Among the material relating to the massacre there are copies of the farewell letters written by Kohan-Bernstein, Zotov, and Hausman, all of whom were hanged. There is also Kohan-Bernstein's last will, in the form of a letter addressed to his little son. Enclosing an account of the massacre by one of the executed prisoners, Mr. Kennan's correspondent, writing, from Paris, said in part: "The narrative needs no commentary. Your name, as you will yourself see, occurs in the last lines written by those who were executed on August 6, 1889. In fulfilment of the last wish of my dead comrade, I am sending you his detailed account of this terrible massacre, and I trust that, as always, you will tell your compatriots and the whole civilized world about the horrors and sufferings caused by the inhumanity and brutality of Russian Czarism, which commits its crimes in the security afforded by the silence of the Yakutsk wastes in Siberia and the watchfulness of its censors in European Russia."

The materials for the biography of the convicts may be considered as a separate group. There is a relatively extensive manuscript (55 pages) coming from the pen of Shlikerman, who was mentioned above, and composed apparently in New York. It contains a biography of Kohan-Bernstein who was hanged at Yakutsk. Shlikerman is also responsible for another biographical writing dealing with the exile years of the famous Russian author Korolenko. There are also biographies of Neustroyev, Sipovich (by Dr. Belogolovy), A. P. Korba, Kutitonskaya, Linev (with his letters to his sister in America, written before he died). Here properly belong two remarkable documents, which Mr. Kennan brought from Siberia in 1886. One contains the names of 1,006 political exiles and prisoners in Siberia in 1886, with information on each prisoner's term of penal servitude. The other is an additional list, containing some 300 names, with brief biographical data. Referring to the former document, Mr. Kennan says (in a letter to me of Aug. 14, 1919): "This list was compiled for me through the cooperation of a large number of politicals, and I don't think there is another such list in existence anywhere in the world." In this connection, of some importance is also an old address book of Mr. Kennan's, listing some of the Russian revolutionists of his acquaintance.

The official documents relating to the life of the exiles form another group. "The documents," says Mr. Kennan in a later letter to me, "are largely copies, but in most cases there are no other copies in existence." To this group belong, for example, the following characteristic items: an official report on the transportation of a party of convicts in 1884 (original, some 30 large-sized pages); reply (negative) to a petition from Mrs. Lyubovetz to the authorities asking permission to continue her practice as a midwife in spite of her marriage to a political exile; copy of a confidential letter, dated 1890, from Galkin-Vrasskoy,

Chief of the Prison Administration, to Baron Korff, the Governor of Sakhalin, regarding the treatment of prisoners there (according to a written statement made by Mr. Kennan to me, the original document was intercepted in the mail and sent to him in Washington, so that the Governor never received it).

Below are listed a few more individual manuscripts, which deserve mention either for their historic importance or as curiosities.

1. A study on the history of the development of social-revolutionary ideas in Russia, bringing the story down to the year 1866; by an unknown author (138 large-sized pages).

2. A work entitled "The Oriol Central Prison," by Vladimir Voitinski, author of a number of sketches of Russian prison life. It is accompanied by two extensive appeals of the prisoners to the public and contains striking revelations of prison atrocities. Written in 1912, it was offered to the monthly Russkoye Bogatstvo for publication, but its account of the shocking conditions made it, apparently, unfit for a magazine in Russia, and the manuscript was sent abroad, finally getting into Mr. Kennan's hands. (70 large typewritten pages.)

3. A manuscript entitled "Sketches of Administrative Exile," prepared for publication by S. A. Prikloński, on the basis of a more extensive writing coming from the pen of a nameless exile. The editor intended to use it as a chapter in his serial on the prison system which appeared in the Moscow daily Russkiya Vvedomosti, in the years 1880 and 1881. The growing rigors of censorship forced him to discontinue his articles and, unable to make use of the manuscript, Prikloński sent it to Mr. Kennan, together with two books of his own making, as a token of his respect for the American friend of Russian freedom.

4. An essay on the revolutionary movement, by V. Debogori-Mokriyevich.

5. A synchronistic table showing the acts of the Government and those of the revolutionists, for the period 1873 to 1881; author unknown.

6. Anonymous manuscript, dealing with the wave of riots after the publication of the manifesto of October 17, 1905.

7. A collection of seventeen mostly unpublished poems by the convict Sergey S. Sinogub, whose verse is represented in Yakubovich's anthology of Russian poetry. He was tried and convicted in 1878 (trial of 193) and died in 1907. (27 neatly typewritten pages.)

8. Song of the Kara convicts, in 46 three-line stanzas, the first two lines rhyming; a curious specimen (unpublished) of a thriving literary genre, the prison ballad.

9. "Secret" report, dated 1903, by Grand-Duke Sergey, Governor General of Moscow, on the suppression of the Moscow Juridical Society (English translation).

10. Excerpt from the minutes of a session of a censorship committee in 1874.

11. A police report, dated 1856, on an order to compel certain people to partake of Holy Communion.

Upon the receipt of the last instalment of the manuscript collection, I wrote to the donor asking him to what extent the material had been utilized for purposes of research. Mr. Kennan's answer follows in part: "No one except myself has ever used any of the manuscript and pictorial material that I sent you, and I have used a part of it only in one of my books, viz. 'Siberia and the Exile System.' How much of it I have used I can't certainly tell you; probably not more than a quarter of it, possibly much less than that. . . . Most of the manuscript material is new, that is, it has never been used by me or by anybody else, and of some of it there is no duplicate in existence, so far as I know." It may be added that the manuscripts consulted by Mr. Kennan in the preparation of his "Siberia and the Exile System" are listed in the second volume of that work (see Appendix A).

PICTORIAL MATERIAL

The pictorial material forms a fitting complement to the manuscripts, for it contains a collection of over 200 photographs of early Russian political exiles and convicts. Most of the pictures the donor brought back from Siberia in 1886. Some are probably the only portraits in existence of the older revolutionists. "When the complete history of the Russian revolutionary movement comes to be written," says Mr. Kennan in a letter to me, "these portraits of the early revolutionists will be of great interest and value. I doubt whether there is a larger collection of them in existence."

Practically every race and every section of the Russian Empire is represented in this impressive portrait gallery. There are men and women of all social conditions and of all ages, including the tender age of three (see the photograph of Master Martyn Yakimov, born in the famous prison known as the Fortress of Peter and Paul). There are both those who impressed their personalities upon their generation, and obscure nameless workingmen, princes and peasants, sturdy laborers and frail girls, but the type of the fine-featured intellectual predominates. The collection opens with a picture of what Mr. Kennan calls "one of the earliest exiles to Siberia." It is a photograph of the church bell of the City of Uglich, which was rung when Czarevich Dmitry, the son of Ivan the Terrible and his seventh wife, was assassinated in that city in the year 1591. The bell was exiled to the city of Tobolsk, where it hung in the belfry of the Church of the Savior, in the market-place. At present it hangs at Uglich and bears an engraved inscription describing its troubled career.

Each portrait, except for a few unidentified pieces, has on the back a biographical note penned in most cases by Mr. Kennan, while some photographs are autographed. "Siberia tenders its hand to America" is written on the portrait of Yadrintzev, an old exile and an authority on Siberia.

Beside the portraits there are some thirty photographs which help one to visualize the life of both political and common prisoners and exiles in Siberia in the eighties. Thus there are views of forwarding prisons, convict-steamers and barges, jails and barracks in various Siberian cities, penal settlements, mines where the convicts served their terms, and several drawings by political prisoners. A sketch made by Vladimir Korolenko, and given by him to Mr. Kennan, represents the type of houses in which exiles lived in the province of Yakutsk, Eastern Siberia. Another sketch, also by a political exile, shows a part of the village of Turukhansk, in Arctic Siberia, suggesting the kind of places to which the exiles were sent.

All of these photographs have been mounted in the Library bindery and bound together, forming an album entitled: "Portraits of Russian Political Exiles and Convicts." The remaining pictures, some 200 in number, with the exception of a group of pogrom photographs taken in Kishinev in 1903, all relate to Siberia. Fourteen reproductions from paintings or drawings illustrate with harrowing realism the sufferings of the bands of peasants who in 1892 left their impoverished home districts in quest of new lands in distant Siberia. The latter group was sent to Mr. Kennan by Korolenko. Numerous views of Siberian cities, such as Omsk, Tomsk, Yakutsk, Irkutsk, Krasnoyarsk, form a substantial part of the collection. Photographs of mining settlements, gold mine placers and types of river craft used in Siberia are here too. Especially interesting is the material of ethnographic importance, bearing upon the life of the native semi-civilized tribes. There are picturesque Kirghizs, Tatars from Kazan and East Siberia, Yakoots, Buriats, the Orochens of Transbaikal, Mongol types from the desert of Gobi; as well as pictures of native dwellings, costumes, and religious ceremonies. Views of scenery complete the collection. Among these are seventeen sketches, distinguished by their accuracy, of Altai mountain scenery in Tomsk province, which were made by Adam Bialoveski, a political exile who lived in Ust-Kamenogorsk, and given by him to Mr. Kennan. As a rule, these photographs were taken in the '80s of the past century. Some of them were made by Mr. Kennan himself and by his companion, Frost, an artist and photographer; others were given them by political exiles, while yet others the donor purchased when he was in Siberia.

PRINTED MATTER

The books, pamphlets, and magazines, some 300 titles in all, are mostly in Russian. Like the manuscripts and photographs, they date back, in most cases, to the '80s and '90s of the past century. This circumstance adds considerably to the value of the collection, inasmuch as Russian books of that period are at present very hard to obtain. A great many volumes are presentation copies to Mr. Kennan from their authors. They are autographed and in some cases provided with elaborate dedications, in Russian or English.

The printed material deals with a wide variety of subjects, from bibliographical studies to song books. There are several excellent reference works and general descriptions of Russia, of which "Russia at the End of the 19th Century," a large volume published under the auspices of the Ministry of Finance, is perhaps the most valuable item. Therewith are a number of substantial works on Russian history, jurisprudence, government, especially the Zemstvos and other forms of self-government, and economics, including Vorontzov's classical treatise on the development of capitalism in Russia, and Prince Vasilchikov's voluminous study, "Land Ownership and Agriculture" (2 volumes, 1876). A very valuable accession is also the monumental statistical study on elementary public education in Russia, in 2 volumes, published in 1900 under the auspices of the Free Economic Society of Petrograd, supplemented by two standard works on education in Russia, by Falbork and Charnoluski, well-known authorities on that subject.

A group of books deals with the status of the Russian Jews and with the border regions, particularly Finland and the Caucasus. The latter has interested Mr. Kennan from the early days of his scientific career. In 1870 he explored that picturesque part of the former Russian empire, particularly, the Eastern Caucasus. Accordingly, we find in our collection a number of solid works on the Caucasus. There is, first of all, Dubrovin's "History of the War and Dominion of the Russians in the Caucasus," in six large volumes (1886-88). Besides describing the region and its variegated population, this monumental work traces, with great abundance of detail and documentation, the course of the conquest of the Caucasus, as well as the history of the native States before the Russian annexation. A "History of the Eightieth Kabarda Infantry Regiment" (of the Caucasian Army), in three volumes, and a "Life of Field-Marshal Prince Baryatynski," the man who was closely identified in the conquest of the Caucasus, both works by Zisserman, contain additional material on the military and administrative history of that region. There is also a sumptuous description of it, forming the ninth volume of Semionov's "Zhivopisnaya Rossiya."

The collection includes the works of several Russian classical writers and some specimens of drama and poetry; also the volume of biographical material on Dostoyevski, published in 1883, which is the basis of our knowledge of the life of that man, and a curious mimeographed tract (in Russian) entitled "The Correspondence and Personal Interviews of William Frey with L. N. Tolstoy, 1886" (100 pages, in quarto). The place of publication is not given, but the work was obviously published outside of Russia, probably at Geneva.

Both the personality and the career of William Frey were very unusual. Leo Tolstoy wrote about him that for his moral qualities he was "one of the most remarkable men of our time and, perhaps, of all times." Vladimir Konstantinovich Heins (William Frey was the name he assumed when he became a citizen of the United States) was born in Russia, in 1839. At the age of twenty-nine he gave up a brilliant academic career and came to the United States with a view to joining a communist agricultural colony. After a taste of American urban life, in New York among other cities, he founded a farm commune in Oregon. It is told that while following the calling of a driver, in St. Louis, he chanced upon the works of Spencer and Comte and became a convert to Positivism. He came to America as a Communist, but was destined to leave it as an apostle of "the religion of humanity." In 1885 he returned to Russia to preach his faith there. He entered into a correspondence with Leo Tolstoy and visited him at Yasnaya Polyana. He died in 1888.

It is known that Frey addressed three letters to his celebrated correspondent. The present volume contains the supplement to the first letter, the text of the second, and the third with its two supplements. There exists a Geneva edition of the first two letters (Elpidine, 1887), and recently Gershenzon reprinted the third letter in the first volume of his Propilei (Moscow, 1915), but he had to omit the first supplement to this letter for the reason that it contained passages objectionable to the censor. Thus "The Correspondence and Personal Interviews" is the only edition of Frey's works in existence containing the full text of the third letter (its original is kept in the Library of the Imperial Academy of Sciences, Division of Manuscripts). It is also the earliest edition of the letters. That it is exceedingly rare may be seen from the fact that not a single copy of it seems to be known in Russia. It is not listed in the bibliography prepared for his reprint by Gershenzon, who is a highly competent and conscientious scholar, nor is it mentioned by the earlier writers on Frey.

In spite of its largely miscellaneous character, the printed material nevertheless clearly reflects the collector's chief interest: Siberia and its prison population. The largest group of books in the collection relates to Siberia itself. There is a series of local yearbooks containing excellent compilations of data on some of the Siberian provinces, such as the Governments of Irkutsk (1881),* Tobolsk (1884),* Tomsk (1884-85),* Yeniseisk (1885),* the Semirechensk region (1876),* the Amur region (1876),* as well as some larger territorial units. To this should be added descriptive studies on various parts of the country, the oldest volume being a description of the Government of Yeniseisk in two parts dated 1835, and a number of travel books by Przewalski, Pavlov, Polyakov, Stakheyev, in addition to Russian translations from the works of foreign travelers in Siberia.

The rest of the Siberica comprises monographs on different phases of Siberian life, sketches of the prison and exile system, specimens of indigenous fiction and poetry, and files of several local weeklies for the period 1883-1885. Some one hundred proof-sheets, apparently of Sibirskaya Gazeta for 1885, in the form in which they came back from the censor, will be of unusual interest to the student of Russian censorship. The following works deserve individual mention: "A Historical Survey of Siberia," two volumes, 1886; Yadrintzev's "Siberia as a Colony," with marginal pencil notes by Mr. Kennan; a monograph entitled "The Economic Status of the Urban Settlements in Siberia," published under the auspices of the Minister of the Interior; a handsome description of Western Siberia (volume XI of Zhivopisnaya Rossiya); a collection of valuable historical and statistical material on Siberia, two volumes, 1875-76; Tikhmenev's "History of the Russian-American Company." Here may also be mentioned a little tract in Aleutian, entitled "Guide to the Heavenly Kingdom, A Sermon..." Printed in Moscow in 1840, it was composed in 1833, by Father Ioann Veniaminov, who is also the author of an Aleutian grammar.

A great many items have to do with the political prisoners and the revolutionary movement generally. The "underground" literature, issued as a rule abroad, is represented by a number of pamphlets and copies of old periodicals. Not a few of them are curious and rather rare. Such are: first issue of The Bulletin of the Society for the Aid of Political Exiles and Prisoners (March, 1886, St. Petersburg, hectographed); two leaflets by Sidoratzki, published by the author in 1890 in Paris; Dr. Russel's "Thoughts Aloud," published at Nagasaki, Japan; and a pamphlet entitled "Free Russian Songs," Kronstadt, 1863. The latter bears the censor's permission and is so arranged as to convey the impression of a legitimate publication. Both the date and the place of publication are of course spurious. The Library possesses two or three other specimens of this unusual type of pamphlet.

By far the most important item in this group is a volume apparently published in 1826 and entitled "Doneseniye Sledstvennoi Kommissii" (Report of the Investigation Commission), 130 pages, in quarto. It is the report of the Commission appointed by Emperor Nicholas I, under the presidency of War

Minister Tatishchev, to investigate the conspiracy which culminated in the military uprising of December, 1825. The volume also includes the following documents: two lists of those arraigned, one in the order of the importance of the crime, the other grouped according to the secret societies of which they were members; report of the Supreme Criminal Court to the Emperor; two imperial ukases; the imperial manifesto on the subject. Aside from being a bibliographical rarity, the volume is of the highest importance for the history of the Decembrists. In passing, it may be mentioned that the Library possesses also a French version of the report, published at Paris in 1826.

Another important volume (over 300 pages, in quarto) contains the full text of the indictment in the famous political process known as the trial of 193 (1878). It is supplemented by a smaller publication containing the verdict, the authenticity of both pieces being duly certified by seal and signature. Needless to say, that these documents were of a strictly confidential nature, and that they were printed for the exclusive use of the Court magistrates and the accused. For that reason it is doubtful whether copies of them are preserved anywhere but in the Russian Court archives. A similar work, but published regularly, is a volume dated 1881, presenting a record of the trial of the revolutionists who assassinated Emperor Alexander II. It contains the text of the indictment, the speeches of the prosecution and defence, and the verdict. The provisions of the Russian law, relating to political offenders, are the subject of several volumes, and there are also some reports of the Chief Prison Administration and similar official publications.

There remain to be mentioned some seventy-five clipped magazine articles, both Russian and English, either written by Mr. Kennan or upon subjects which were of interest to him.

Both the Library and the reading public remain deeply indebted to Mr. Kennan for a gift of permanent and unique value.

THE PLACE OF DUERER'S APOCALYPSE

BY FRANK WEITENKAMPF

THE significance of the acquisition, by the Library, of a set of Duerer's illustrations to the Apocalypse rests not only on the aesthetic and technical qualities of these wood-cuts, but on the fact that they reflect the racial, mental, religious and political aspects of the artist's time and surroundings.

The Renaissance (a word generally identified with a glorious period in Italian art, literature and life) found different expression north and south of the Alps. North, there was vigor, often uncouth, a seriousness often heavy, and characterization; South, there was grace, beauty of line, ornamental quality. As Lippmann said, in regard to the specialty of book-illustration, "In Germany, the proper function was instruction; in Italy, ornament." The spirit of the Northern countries, born of hard thinking, worrying over the meaning of things, didactic in tendency, fairly forcing from itself and its environment an admission of finer graces. In the South, on the other hand, the Italian Renaissance, in its rich, ripe flower, easy in its exercise of the cult of beauty. Yet one can trace interrelation and reciprocal influence, sometimes superficial, again going down deeply. Although, indeed, in the best work, those influences do not affect the fundamental characteristics on each side. In the North this period of the "rebirth" was, as one authority says, "disquieted within itself, still striving, without definite aim, for something new." Moreover, there was a feeling that the end of things was at hand. The ear was trained to catch portents. In that state of mind the mysterious prophecies of the Apocalypse, lending themselves to various interpretations, must have had a strong appeal. They did so appeal to Duerer, who in this series of fifteen large wood-cuts showed how the "strange, awe-inspiring, almost bizarre, imagery of the Apocalypse" had stirred his imagination. The illustration of this Revelation was the first great subject approached by Duerer. He was not the first. The enormous significance of the book at that time naturally called forth attempts to elucidate in pictures the difficulties of the text. Wölfflin points out that the subject was treated in miniatures and in block-books and that the German Bible of 1480 (Cologne) is especially explicit in illustration of that section. Technically, artistically and mentally, however, Duerer went far beyond anything of the kind that had been done. That is evident even if we manage to detach ourselves from the glamor of his name and consider the prints quite apart from any thought of the man who produced them.

Duerer kept closely to the text, indeed, so that, for instance, in the vision of the "seven chandeliers," an actual sword is issuing from the mouth. To us, to-day, the flaming text might very well stimulate the fancy more than the pictures. Perhaps, as one critic points out, Duerer's drawings may even seem dry, too linear, too little visionary. And yet there is in these designs a tremendous energy which is impressive in itself, and a creative enthusiasm which gave pregnant interpretation to the "obscure prophetic utterances of the Evangelist." Campbell Dodgson points out that "there is a certain exaggeration and over-emphasis of gesture . . . , but Duerer never invented anything more sublime than the celebrated Four Riders or the St. Michael defeating the Rebel Angels," which latter he regards as "at least equal to the subject more frequently praised." Though one may find oddity and even insufficiency in parts, the bold conception of the series fairly carries you along with the artist. That is as it should be. It's a matter of adjustment to time and personality. You have to learn Duerer's language in order to appreciate what he says.

Of course, this work does not represent twentieth-century ideas, — but neither do many other great works of art before which we have to detach ourselves more or less from our time and place and point of view in order to insure as full an appreciation as possible. You cannot get at the inner significance of a Ming vase or a seventeenth-century Japanese print or a Gothic cathedral or an etching by Goya with purely twentieth-century eyes.

Duerer was not only intrigued by the subject of this book of St. John; he was likewise much engrossed by aesthetic and technical problems. He brought a new, strong element into wood-engraved illustration. The early work of the wood-cutters was mainly in outline, intended to be colored by hand. With Duerer, refinement of technique became very notable. Spaces between outlines now were filled with lines to indicate shadows, tones, color-suggestions. Hand-coloring was no longer necessary, nor applied. It is well, perhaps, to recall also that in those days the wood was cut with the grain (on the plank), not engraved across the grain (as in the modern reproductive work of men such as Timothy Cole). The exceeding delicacy which the latter method attained, was beyond the possibilities of the old one, which had characteristic qualities quite its own, of strength and simplicity. The new wood engraving developed into the most sensitive translation of painted tones into black-and-white ones. The old wood-cutting was a matter of straight facsimile work, and of linear work. That is why, though the actual cutting was usually not done by the artist himself, — not, it appears, in Duerer's case, — it was so faithful to the original design that had been drawn on the block (plank), that these old prints are practically autographic. It is the artist's work that you see, carefully rendered by the cutter.

Duerer understood all this, understood the resources as well as the restraints of the wood block, the difficulties of the cutter in faithfully preserving the lines of the design. In view of all this, Duerer's expression was, of course, linear. One of the analyzing school of criticism wrote: "One must be sensitive to the line in order to understand the young Duerer. For him, all visibility is translated into linear motion. . . . In these drawings one must not make the single figure the point d'appui. . . . These plates draw their mood from the general movement of line and the rhythm in the distribution of light and dark. They are to be considered as a decorative entity."

It is a significant fact that even here Duerer indulged his love for nature. Whenever there is an opportunity, it is shown both in big sweep of landscape and in the loving delineation of foreground grass and leaf and flower. Campbell Dodgson tells us that "the landscape at the foot of St. John's Vision of the Four-and-twenty Elders is a complete picture by itself, and there is a rare early copy of this portion alone, which is itself a beautiful print, and doubtless the earliest pure landscape wood-cut in existence." Or we can enjoy with Lionel Cust the "beautiful serene landscape in the lower part of The Throne set in Heaven and The Archangel Michael's Combat with the Dragon." And these very qualities of artistic temperament form so strong a note in the entire make-up of these prints, that the appeal is compelling apart from the religious and other motives that evidently gave Duerer the urge toward the expression of thought which these prints represent.

At the end, the circle of comment returns to the initial proposition. Duerer's Apocalypse, — a milestone in the history of wood engraving and book illustration — stands for a whole period of regional view-point, the Northern Renaissance, with its interesting and characteristic contrasts to that of the South. It is a document toward the history of culture.

FRENCH PRINTS AND JAPANESE

EVEN the most concise review of the production of French printmakers, from the earliest to the men of to-day, calls up a wealth of rich expression, of distinction of style and elegance of gesture, of all the association of time and place and event and personality. The Library is rich in modern examples of that art, and it was thus fitting that the newly-projected monthly exhibitions in the Stuart Gallery were opened with a series of French shows. Designed to bring the public into the byways as well as the highways of prints, these exhibitions give opportunity to study the work of artists not often seen. And some idea may be formed of the resources of the print room. Such exhibitions, easy to see in a short time, are a sort of bonne-bouche, a sample of good things. There is offered, according to the visitor's point of view, the unfamiliar or the old acquaintance long unseen, — an interesting review for one, an educational matter for another. In the opening series of French shows, December was devoted to old prints, 16th to 18th century, — Callot, Claude Lorraine, portraitists of the 17th century, the estampe de mœurs of the 18th. In January, landscape etchings of the 19th century and after: Corot, Daubigny, Rousseau, Appian (weaver of patterns of gnarled trees), Jacque, Lalanne, Lopisgich (new to many), and the rest of the revivalists of etching, whose works S. P. Avery Sr. collected assiduously. And Legros, Lepère, and the men of to-day. A variety of temperaments! February is given over to portraits in etching and lithography, Deveria, Desboutin, Gavarni, Bracquemond, Rajon, Flameng and Helleu serving to emphasize difference in approach. In March, the floor will be given to Manet, with a representation apparently unrivalled in any public collection. In April, "Paris in Prints," a theme performed with many variations. Indeed, throughout these French shows, the dominant racial or national note is embroidered with the melodic detail of individual song.

It is a different world into which we are transported in the exhibition in the print gallery from January 15th to April 15th, — "The Making of a Japanese Print." Technique is illustrated by tools and pictures, and the application of the process is shown in the choicest color prints given to the Library by the late Charles Stewart Smith. There are early actor prints, and Harunobu, Kiyonaga, Koriusai, and especially Utamaro, are strongly represented. Beside their fine artistic qualities, these prints, with all their exotic appearance, come close to us in their observation of every-day life. And they form a perfect expression of the ideas and ideals of the time and place that brought them forth. All these exhibitions again emphasize the great variety implied in the term "prints." There is something for many tastes, and perhaps the taste for prints may be extended to a larger circle.

THE AVERYS

BY E. G. KENNEDY

WHEN S. P. Avery, the elder, died, the general public was not aware that it lost a somewhat original benefactor; original because contrary to custom then, his donations were made during his lifetime. Perhaps the most remarkable of his benefactions was the gift to the Prints Division of The New York Public Library of his unrivalled collection of about 19,000 etchings, lithographs and other prints, including a complete collection of Seymour Haden and a fine lot of early Whistlers, perhaps the finest in existence. His son of the same name — Samuel Putnam Avery — who died in September last, added to this collection during his life, and saw to it that the Print Room was enabled to procure twentieth-century work. Thus he carried on the original donor's intentions with regard to the collection. But in other fields also he was a worthy successor to his father. He built a library for Columbia University to house the books on architecture given to the University by the elder Avery in memory of another son, Henry Ogden Avery, a talented architect, whose early death was deplored by all who knew him. His benefactions indeed took a wide range. One day he would help build or endow a college in Tennessee and the next day a camp for boys on Lake Champlain. Sixty institutions thus far are known to have received large contributions from him, but a complete list will probably never be ascertained, since he observed as much as possible the Scriptural admonition, "Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth." This modesty which caused him to shrink from publicity was natural.

He gave freely and unostentatiously, and like his father he gave during his lifetime, thus enjoying with the public the good he was doing. Moreover, he always gave with discrimination and after careful investigation, which may be partly explained by the fact that he was an excellent man of affairs, besides being a collector of fine taste.

Something of a sportsman in his earlier days (if sailing a boat with skill, and fishing with enthusiasm can be called sport), and a lover of nature who enjoyed his island home on Lake Champlain, his life was a happy one, passed among objects that he loved and relatives who were devoted to him.

Those who knew him cannot easily forget the sureness of his knowledge in art matters, his good sense and fine judgment, the kindly humanity of the man and his droll humor, — all qualities subdued under an outward manner, to the stranger apparently unresponsive, to the initiate full of delicate nuances of interest and sympathy.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of January, 1921, the Library received as gifts a total of 3,417 volumes, 5,305 pamphlets, 34 maps and 95 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

From the Jenny Lind Centennial Celebration Committee came two bound volumes of press comments on the Jenny Lind Centennial Celebration, October 6, 1920 (one of two sets made especially for The New York Public Library and the Royal Swedish Library). From Mr. Worthington C. Ford of the Massachusetts Historical Society came a copy of "A Rough List of a Collection of Transcripts relating to the History of New England in possession of Frederick Lewis Gay." Privately printed, Brookline, Mass., 1913. Mr. William Sloane gave the Library a collection of menus and cards of invitation from various patriotic societies in New York; also six stereoscopic views of the residence of Robert L. Stuart, 20th Street and Fifth Avenue, New York City, taken about 1883.

From Miss Grace Bigelow came a large collection of old documents, book catalogues, periodicals, etc., comprising 168 volumes, 503 pamphlets, 38 periodicals and 1 map. Mr. Theodore P. Ion gave a collection of books and pamphlets relating to Greek and Balkan questions (36 volumes and 4 pamphlets). From Mrs. James M. Fuller of Warwick, N. Y., came 30 volumes of "The Garden Magazine," 1905-1920. From Mrs. S. Guggenheim came a collection of German books for children (44 volumes and 3 pamphlets).

The following gifts of prints were received: From Mr. Bolton Brown, 10 woodcuts by J. J. Lankis; from Mr. Merton C. Hansen of Hartford, two of his wood-engravings of Hartford buildings; and from Mr. William Simmons, two of his etchings ("Cub and Tortoise" and "Young African Horned Eagle").

The following gifts of music were received: From Mr. Emil Ascher, a miscellaneous collection of music, including vocal scores of operas and band music, Ascher Edition; from Dr. Anselm Goetzl, came a copy of "The Royal Vagabond" . . . by Wm. Cary Duncan, George M. Cohan, Music by Dr. Anselm Goetzl; and from Miss Rosalie Housmann, a miscellaneous collection of sheet music.

Eleven additions were made through gift to the Library's collection of regimental and divisional histories of the war.

Technical discussion of electric motors, intermittent rating, controllers, resistors, brake releasing, electro-magnets, lifting-magnets, switchgear, collectors, power distribution and wiring, power required load equalizers. Contains illustrations and many charts and tables.

Emmons, William Harvey. Geology of petroleum. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc., 1921. xiv, 610 p. illus. 8°. VHY (117)

Expansion and revision of lectures delivered at the University of Minnesota by the head of the department of geology and mineralogy. First half deals in a general way with the origin, occurrence, accumulation, and distribution of gas and oil. Second half gives perspective and salient characteristics of the world's important fields. Well supplied with maps and source references.

Freshfield, Douglas William. The life of Benedict de Saussure... with the collaboration of Henry F. Montagnier. London: Edward Arnold, 1920. xii, 479 p. illus. 8°. PSO (120)

Exhaustive biography of the famous pioneer mountain climber, who spent much time between the years 1774 and 1784 in the exploration of the Alps. Finely illustrated and includes a bibliography of his principal published works and scientific papers.

"I have tried to deal with de Saussure's life as a whole; to present him not only in the two capacities in which his fame is best established as a geologist and Alpine explorer, but also as a member of society, a citizen and a philosopher — in the wider eighteenth-century acceptance of that word." — Preface.

Gibson, Walcot. Coal in Great Britain; the composition, structure, and resources of the coal fields, visible and concealed, of Great Britain. London: Edward Arnold, 1920. viii, 311 p. illus. 8°. VHW

"We have, therefore... an entirely new treatment of British coal field geology from the pen of an experienced field geologist, who can justly claim to be in a position to interpret observed facts in the light of modern principles of geological reasoning; and, what is perhaps more important, to assess them at their proper value... The figures are clearly drawn, and the half-tone plates of fossil plants are exquisitely reproduced. The index, extending to 34 columns, is ample; and the whole volume, in matter and get-up, is a most worthy production, fully meriting its assured success." — Colliery guardian, Dec. 10, 1920.

Revision of work published in 1902, with considerable re-writing by Professor E. Midgley, head of the Textile Department of Bradford (England) Technical College. Covers microscopical, chemical and mechanical examination. Appendix gives official specifications for the supply of materials for use in the German army.

Hovgaard, William. Modern history of warships, comprising a discussion of present standpoint and recent war experiences, for the use of students of naval construction, naval constructors, naval officers, and others interested in naval matters. London: E. & F. N. Spon, Ltd., 1920. xiii, 502 p. illus. 4°.

VXR (121)

An introduction to the author's Structural design of warships. Describes developments beginning in the early part of the nineteenth century, dealing with each class of vessel and in general with each one of the various navies. Later chapters are more or less technical, giving separately the history of the development of the design and construction of the hull, machinery, ordnance, mines, torpedoes, and armor. Over 200 illustrations. Author is professor of naval design and construction in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

VOP (118)

Author believes that basic carbonate white lead is superior to all other white paint pigments. Tells of the various methods of preparation, its properties and application. Designed rather for the user than for the chemist or scientific expert.

"Reasons are given for the practice recommended, and the book should be useful to students as well as to the practical workers for whom it is primarily intended. Fundamental principles are explained very clearly, and this is of special importance because working by rule of thumb is quite unsatisfactory as a means of securing fuel economy."—*R. E. Aims to steer a middle course between the technical and the elementary, covering general and detailed design. Based upon articles originally contributed to Aeronautics. Excellent diagrams and illustrations.

REFERENCE BOOKS

Henderson, J. F., and M. A. HENDERSON. A dictionary of scientific terms; pronunciation, derivation, and definition of terms in biology, botany, zoology, anatomy, cytology, embryology, physiology. Edinburgh and London: Oliver and Boyd, 1920. 354 p. 8°. QAC

The editors state that the work was undertaken to provide an up-to-date work somewhat on the lines of Stormonth's Manual of scientific terms, the last edition of which appeared in 1903. "It contains definitions of 10,000 terms including several hundred lately coined expressions, many of which have not heretofore appeared in any dictionary. Greek words have been transliterated. The branch of science in which the word is used is also designated.

Hispanic Society of America. Hispanic notes and monographs, essays, studies and brief biographies issued by the Hispanic Society of America. Hispanic American series. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons; Buenos Aires: The Hispanic Society of America, 1919-20. 8 v. AGU

A useful series in English containing the biographies of South Americans. Edited by William Belmont Parker. Titles so far published or announced are: Argentines of today (2 v.); Paraguayans of today; Cubans of today; Bolivians of today; Peruvians of today; Chilians of today. Contain on an average 600 pages to a volume, with from 100 to 400 brief biographies of the leading living men, and many portraits.

Malaret, Augusto. Diccionario de provincialismos de Puerto Rico. San Juan, P. R.: Tip. Cantero Fernandez and Company, 1917. 151 p. 8°.

Porto Rican provincialisms defined in the Spanish language. Also tells by whom and on what occasions used. Those which have been recognized by the Academy are so designated.

Muzzio, Julio A. Diccionario histórico y biográfico de la República Argentina. Buenos Aires: Librería "La facultad" de Juan Roldan, 1920. 2 v. 8°. HKB

A useful but somewhat popular historical and biographical dictionary of Argentine, with more emphasis on the biographical than the historical. Articles are brief and unsigned. No bibliographies. Contains some good maps and many portraits. Arranged alphabetically, with no index.

Sanchez Alonso, B. Fuentes de la historia española; ensayo de bibliografía sistemática de las monografías impresas que ilustran la historia política nacional de España excluidas sus relaciones con América. Madrid: Junta para ampliación de estudios é investigaciones científicas, Centro de estudios históricos, 1919. 448 p. 8°. BX

A bibliography which the compiler hopes will do for the student of sources of Spanish history what Dahlmann's Quellenkunde der deutschen Geschichte does for the student of German sources or Langlois's Manuel de bibliographie historique for the French. The character of the work is selective and critical rather than inclusive, and is arranged with evident care. It lists 6,783 titles, or considerably less material than the works above mentioned.

It excludes histories of a general character, but takes in special material which is arranged under chronological period headings. Includes monographs, documents, and some legends, romances and historical fiction, and works about historical personages. Excludes manuscripts of questionable authority. Catalogued after the practice followed by Spanish libraries. Compiler attempted to examine all material listed and has preferred original to translation. Many analyticals from serials are given to which exact reference is made. Separate indexes for authors, subjects, and abbreviations and a detailed table of contents. Items are numbered. As indicated by title it includes Spanish foreign relations, excepting those with the Americas.

Tercentenary handlist of English and Welsh newspapers, magazines and reviews. London: The Times, 1920. [213], 1, 216-324, xxxv p. 8°. D

A checklist of English and Welsh newspapers, magazines and reviews appearing between 1620 and 1920, arranged chronologically, giving date of issue of vol. 1, no. 1, and expiration date, or indicating if still in progress. In two sections: I, London and suburban; II, Provincial. Each section is indexed separately, the first section in the middle of the volume. Printer or distributor given in case of some of the earlier corantos. Omits annuals and year-books; periodicals classed under the heading "Academies, etc." in the British Museum Catalog; local church magazines of limited appeal; and official periodicals printed during the war. "In no case has a conjectural date been given to a periodical."

"Bulk of the data has been taken from the British Museum catalogues." "The list is believed to be practically exhaustive as regards the seventeenth and nineteenth centuries. The eighteenth-century list, however, is far from complete." List is based upon collections at the Museum, which are divided into two main sections: periodicals and newspapers. The historical collections of Thomason and Burney, the first extending from 1641-1660, and the other from the earliest times to 1812 have been used fully.

Vicaire, Georges. Manuel de l'amateur de livres du XIX^e siècle, 1801-1893; tome huitième, table des ouvrages cités. Paris: Librairie A. Rouquette, 1920. 646 p. 8°.

Ref. Cat. Div.

A title index to Vicaire's well-known work, the seventh volume of which appeared in 1910. Inasmuch as Vicaire lists the more important French works of the nineteenth century, at least from a collector's point of view, this index should prove useful to the bibliographer and reference worker.

Who's who in Philadelphia in war time. v. 1, 1920. Philadelphia: Stafford's National News Service, 1920. 248 p. 8°. (Keystone State notables. The Philadelphian and his city.)

Brief biographies and photographs of prominent Philadelphia professional and business men. Five names and photographs to a page. Indexed.

Wise, Thomas J. A bibliography of the writings of Joseph Conrad (1895-1920). London: Printed for private circulation only by Richard Clay and Sons, 1920. 107 p. 8°. NCC (Conrad)

Necessarily incomplete, but very carefully prepared bibliography giving full description of all Conrad's writings which have appeared to date. Includes editions principles, uncollected contributions to periodical literature and "Conradiana," consisting of complete volumes of biography and criticism. Information by Conrad himself sent in response to the author's request is given for some of the more important works. One of a series of bibliographies of English men of letters prepared by Mr. Wise, who announces six more in preparation.

A HISTORY OF
THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

BY HARRY MILLER LYDENBERG

CHAPTER XVI

New Wine in Old Bottles, 1895-1911

The new corporation was born when the agreement of consolidation was signed May 23, 1895. The first meeting of the new board of trustees was held at the Astor Library building on Monday, May 27 following, at 4.00 p. m. The meeting was opened by Mr. Cadwalader who stated that it was called according to the articles of agreement which had now been duly signed and filed as required by law. Dr. Markoe was chosen president pro tempore and Mr. Rives secretary. All the trustees were present except Messrs. Bigelow, Huntington, and H. Van Rensselaer Kennedy. Tentative by-laws were adopted, and the following officers elected: John Bigelow, President; Bishop Henry C. Potter, First Vice-President; John S. Kennedy, Second Vice-President; Edward King, Treasurer; and George L. Rives, Secretary. A finance committee consisting of Frederick Sturges, Andrew H. Green, Alexander Maitland, Alexander E. Orr, and the Treasurer, ex officio, was appointed. Also an executive committee consisting of John L. Cadwalader, John S. Kennedy, Lewis Cass Ledyard, S. Van Rensselaer Cruger, George L. Rives, and the President, ex officio. John Bigelow, Thomas M. Markoe, Alexander Maitland, Henry Drisler, and Samuel P. Avery made the library committee.

The explanatory resolutions proposed by the trustees of the Astor and Lenox libraries were adopted without question; also a resolution offered by Mr. Green directing the executive committee to examine into and report upon the expediency of affiliating with other local libraries; it was decided to continue until further notice present employees, and, after other routine matters, the board adjourned for the summer.

The members realized they had important questions to settle. One of their first problems was the fixing of the character of the new library. They might decide to emphasize the popular side of its function and devote its entire resources to developing a system of circulation centres, subject only to the proviso that the Astor collections were to be maintained as a reference library. Or they might forsake utterly the circulation field and devote the institution entirely to development of the needs of the scholar. They might by federation bring within its fold the whole circle of scientific and learned societies within the city gates.

On its character would depend to a certain extent its location. If circulation features were excluded accessibility of location would be less important. If books for home use were to be provided a central and accessible site was of greatest importance. The question of site was complicated also by the fact that the block on which the Lenox Library stood, Fifth to Madison avenues, 70th to 71st streets, though owned by the library had restrictions imposed on its central plot in the will of Henrietta Lenox, sister of James. These forbade use of the land for any purpose except additions to, or extensions of, the Lenox Library building. The Lenox site was well fitted for a reference library; neither it nor the Astor site was in the proper location for a circulation collection; the changing currents of trade indicated that the Astor site would become increasingly ill fitted for library work.

Not only were the questions of site and character complex, but the relations between the Library and the City presented problems of some perplexity and uncertainty. If the City chose to help, and showed itself friendly, great possibilities lay open for both. If the City should prove indifferent to its opportunities the Library could go its own way, sell the Astor site, use part of its funds for an addition to the Lenox building, and develop its collections in the way it deemed best.

Another problem was the choice of an executive officer. Much would depend on him, and whether the right man was already in the service or was to be found outside, deserved careful consideration. It was indeed most fortunate for the institution and the community that the services of the one man in the country ideally fitted for the task by temperament, training, equipment, achievement, and experience lay readily at hand. Dr. John S. Billings, creator of the Surgeon General's Library at Washington, had but recently been retired from the army at his own request. He was then engaged in establishing the Pepper laboratory of hygiene at the University of Pennsylvania. A life-long friendship with Dr. S. Weir Mitchell had led to an acquaintance with John L. Cadwalader, Dr. Mitchell's brother-in-law. Mr. Cadwalader's appreciation of the calibre of the executive demanded by the new library, and his knowledge of the position held by Dr. Billings in the world of scholarship, left no doubt in his mind that Dr. Billings was indeed the man they needed. Selection of a "Superintendent in Chief" had been referred to the Executive Committee by the Trustees at their meeting on November 6. At their meeting held December 6 the Executive Committee, on recommendation of Mr. Cadwalader, decided to suggest Dr. Billings to the trustees, and the board approved their action by choosing him as the executive officer on December 11.

Dr. Billings was then fifty-eight years old, at the top of his power, in fullest possession of a most unusual combination of characteristics that fitted him for his new task. He had entered the army as a surgeon at the outbreak of the Civil War, had served throughout the conflict both in the field and on the staff, and when peace came he had — instead of succumbing to the deadening routine of official Washington — created a library for the Surgeon General's Office that took first rank among the world's medical libraries. He accomplished this because he was in every fibre of his being a "book man," because he saw the necessity of a great medical library for American medical research, and because he was wise enough to secure departmental and congressional support for his vision.

He had not been content, however, merely with amassing a great collection of medical books, but he had conceived and executed — and therein lay one of his qualifications for enrollment in the rank of great men, for he succeeded in executing most of his conceptions — an important advance in bibliography with his "Index Catalogue of the Surgeon General's Library."

Either of these achievements might well have been credited as a mark of merit for an ordinary man, but not so with this man. Besides his routine duties he had found time to make investigations that gave him high standing among statisticians, sanitary engineers, ventilating engineers, hospital engineers, bacteriologists, and when he left the army he found waiting for him in Philadelphia the chair of professor of hygiene and the post of director of the Pepper laboratory of hygiene.

His university position was most congenial and would probably have held him against any ordinary change. The chance for public service offered him in New York, however, made a call too insistent for declination. It was not easy for him to secure a release from the University, indeed it was impossible for him to do more at that time than to promise to give two or three days a week to consideration of library problems until after the close of the academic year in June, 1896.

During the first six months of the year he spent several days of each week at the library, attended the monthly meetings of the Board of Trustees, and found enough problems awaiting solution to keep his versatile mind free from stagnation, to say the least. In June he sailed for Europe, partly as a delegate from the United States to the Royal Society conference on an international catalogue of scientific literature held in London, July 14–17, and partly to buy books and establish connections for the library. On his return in September he took up in detail the work that was to occupy his full time till death released him seventeen years later.

During the early winter of 1895/6 a special committee of the trustees had been considering the question of a site, with which was, of course, closely bound up the question of the character and future development of the library.

This committee made a report on February 5 in which it recalled how in the negotiations preliminary to consolidation it was decided that if, before selection of a site for the new library, there should be delivered releases of the restrictions affecting the Lenox block, then that property should be selected as the site and a building was to be erected as quickly as possible. The committee, by this time, had become convinced that removal of these restrictions was unlikely, not to say impossible. The Lenox site was therefore out of the question. But if not that site, what other site? To answer that question one must first ask what kind of a library is to occupy the site. The report went on to say:

“Your Committee are of the opinion that, if the present resources of the Corporation are alone to be relied upon, they would not be justified in recommending to the Board an attempt to do more than to establish and maintain a library of reference. To establish a library of reference of a high class very important additions would have to be made to our present valuable collections. These additions, necessary to fill gaps in the existing collections, would involve a large expenditure, and the expense of maintenance, together with the amounts necessary to be expended from year to year in keeping abreast of literary production, would, in our opinion, tax our resources to the utmost.

“In their consideration of the subject, however, and in their conferences with other members of the Board, your Committee have been deeply impressed by the necessity of attempting to do more than merely to establish a library of reference. Useful as such a library would be, they cannot remain indifferent to the much larger measure of usefulness which would be gained by the adoption of a plan involving a broader scope for the work of the library. They are convinced that the public would take a much more active interest in the library and its affairs if its policy were so shaped as to make reaching and serving the people one of its principal objects. They feel that the announcement that the New York Public Library was to be solely or mainly a library of reference for scholars and persons engaged in the higher order of literary work, would be met by the public at large with a distinct feeling of disappointment. They believe that the public interest which was aroused by the great step in advance taken in the consolidation of these libraries has not abated, but is merely in suspense, awaiting the announcement by the Trustees of some definite plan by which it may be made most productive of good to the public.

"With these views, your Committee think that the opportunity which is now presented for adopting a policy for rendering the work of the library of the highest use to the public should not be allowed to pass without an earnest effort to take advantage of it.

"It seems but just that public aid should be extended to those higher forms of public instruction, designed solely for the benefit of the public, which are embodied in the work performed by public libraries; and the great existing libraries of the world owe their development and growth to governmental or municipal aid extended in recognition of the propriety of this principle. The Bibliothèque Nationale and the British Museum are instances of the first, while the Boston Public Library is a conspicuous example of a library maintained by the municipality. The appropriations by the City of Boston for the new building of the Boston Public Library amount to about $2,500,000, and it annually appropriates for the maintenance of the library about $200,000.

"Up to the present time New York alone has done little or nothing for the support of public libraries. The small appropriation for the benefit of free circulating libraries is, we believe, its only contribution to such work.

"Your Committee believe that the time has now come when at least an opportunity should be extended to the city for doing its part in this great work. Unlike the Boston Public Library, we do not ask the city to do the whole or the greater part. By far the larger part has already been done by private munificence, and your Committee believe that if this Board, representing the great gifts of the founders of the Astor, Lenox and Tilden libraries should now appeal to the authorities of the City for such aid as might be necessary to render those benefactions of the greatest benefit and usefulness to the people, their appeal would be met by the public authorities in a liberal spirit, in which they would be cordially sustained by public opinion.

"Your Committee recommend that an application be made to the city authorities for their approval of such legislation as will enable the City to grant to or vest in the Corporation by some permanent tenure, a proper site for its library building, and for such pecuniary aid as may be necessary to enable it to construct and equip the building, and that such application be accompanied by an offer on the part of the Corporation to adopt for the conduct of the library and the scope of its work the broadest and most enlarged plan which its resources and such aid as the City may extend to it will permit it to carry out. Your Committee suggest that this should include the maintenance of a reference library and reading rooms; the establishment and conduct of a circulating library in connection with its main building or by branches conveniently located throughout the city, either directly or through a consolidation or control of such existing circulating libraries as may be found practicable; and it should also contemplate an alliance or affiliation with the principal scientific societies of the city and the gathering together of their libraries and collections in the main building, and the furnishing to them of facilities for meetings, and that arrangements be made for the giving of scientific, literary and popular lectures.

"If the above views of your Committee meet with the approval of the Board, the Committee further recommend that the site of the present reservoir on Fifth Avenue, between 40th and 42d Streets, be selected as the site of the principal building, and application be made to the city authorities for such site, and to the Legislature for such legislation as will enable the City to furnish that site for the Corporation.

"In view of its central location, its large area, its immunity from fire and its convenience of access from all parts of the city and the suburbs, your Committee believe that it presents special advantages to a greater degree than any other locality in the city for the site of a great library."

This report was approved by the Board on February 14, 1896, and the Executive Committee was requested to prepare an address to the city authorities and the legislature. A draft address was approved in its general features by the Board on March 11 and referred back to the Executive Committee for such revisions and corrections as they might think proper.

The address in final form was read to Mayor William L. Strong in his office in the City Hall at three o'clock in the afternoon of Wednesday, March 25, 1896.* In reply the Mayor stated that he cordially approved of the views of the Trustees and believed that their request should in time be granted. So far as concerned the reservoir site he felt that there would be no objection from the city. He felt there would be serious objections to granting funds for a building because the city was bound to heavy outlays for new schools, for sewer extensions, for small parks and for other purposes. He suggested that the request be divided, at present asking only for legislation to authorize granting the reservoir site. The trustees present intimated that if they took the Mayor's advice it would be with the distinct understanding that they reserved the liberty of applying at a future date for public funds necessary for the building.

And thus matters rested for the summer. The work of the library went on with little change from former routine. The Lenox building was closed for the first three weeks in August, as usual, and the Astor for the following three weeks.

The Director returned from Europe in September with some interesting manuscripts, a large collection of Dutch pamphlets, several geographical atlases, and other miscellaneous purchases. From his return date the extensive administrative changes, reorganization of the staff, and other readjustments necessary for the coördination and progress that gave the new birth such distinction.

At that time both buildings opened at ten o'clock and closed at five, except when darkness came at an earlier hour. The opening hour was moved forward to nine and the introduction of electric lights in each building made it possible to keep open till six. The forty employees were more than doubled in number and every member of the staff felt the impulses of the new spirit that now animated these venerable organizations.

Mr. Robbins Little, who had been superintendent of the Astor Library for eighteen years, was retired on pension at the end of 1896* and Mr. Frederick Saunders, who had been employed as a librarian in the Astor since 1858, was at the same time retired on full pay.† Mr. I. Ferris Lockwood who had been Superintendent of the Lenox Library since 1894, moved to the Astor building with title of Business Superintendent. The staff was organized into the executive department, a cataloguing and accessions department, shelf department and a readers' department.

For the younger members who were not graduates of library schools and who had not been with the library long enough to have demonstrated their abilities an examination was held in October, the results of which helped materially in fixing their duties and positions. The ordering of books was centered in the Director's office, and cataloguing and other forms of routine practice were standardized.

During the summer of 1896 a beginning was made towards a subject catalogue by cutting up the entries in the Cogswell and Nelson printed catalogues of the Astor collection and pasting them on cards. The "pasted cards," as we used to call them in those distant days, were roughly grouped in classes; on each was written in pencil a subject heading, after which the location mark — both libraries then had "fixed" locations — was copied from the sets of the printed catalogues used by the public. The cards were then ready to serve as the nucleus of the subject catalogue the new Director had in mind and also as the backbone around which would be developed the classification scheme the combined collections would need.

It has been stated in previous chapters that neither library had in one place a complete author record of its collections, nor had either an adequate subject index. At the Astor building were kept two sets of the printed catalogues, one for public use and one for the staff, in which were noted in pencil the location, by press and shelf number, of each work catalogued. These were supplemented by several alphabets of entries on cards of various sizes including a fragmentary record by subject of some of the more recent additions. For author entries the public had three separate catalogues to examine and for subject entries three other separate catalogues. At the Lenox building public and staff both used a card catalogue that included author and subject entries of recent additions and also of a few of the older books.

Under the reorganization all cataloguing of new additions was done at the Astor building; at the Lenox building a force of cataloguers started to complete the record of books owned by the library. It was decided to keep one official author record in the cataloguing room at the Astor building and to begin for each building a public catalogue recording by author and subject all titles newly acquired, cards for the older books to be added as fast as they were recatalogued and reclassified.

It was impossible — however desirable — at once to put away the older catalogues. Haste had to be made slowly. The “official catalogue” started at once with a clean slate. The public catalogues developed as new books were handled or old books recatalogued. It was not until the autumn of 1897 that the new “Index Catalogue” was put on the floor of the Astor building for public consultation. This contained an author and subject (title records also for a few classes) record of all books newly catalogued since 1897, subject cards for all books and pamphlets in reclassified sections, and subject cards for the more important articles found in a selection of two to three hundred periodicals of which current issues were available for use.

This last feature gave the catalogue an unusual character. The need of some such index had long been felt by the readers in the Astor building and some of the severest criticism to which the Astor had been subjected in the eighties pointed out the lack of indexes to the very important field of periodical literature. The appearance of Dr. Poole’s Index in 1882 provided a limited remedy but still left untouched the current issues. Dr. Billings had included entries for articles in periodicals as well as author and subject entries for books in his Index Catalogue of the Surgeon General’s Library, and he took over both name and idea for the new catalogue he now put at the use of the public in the Astor building.

He called it an “Index Catalogue” and in it he filed cards for what he called “journal articles.” In 1897 he enlarged greatly the subscription list to periodicals, adding hundreds of titles in the fields of commerce, finance, trade, industry, technology and other similar lines. From these new (and old) friends he made a selection of two to three hundred titles, the current issues of which were sent to him as soon as received. He glanced through each number and marked by a pencil check such articles as he thought would be helpful for present-day or future readers. For these articles a cataloguer wrote subject cards which then took their place in the Index Catalogue with the orthodox cards for books and pamphlets.

Dr. Billings was one of the moving spirits in the cooperative indexing of periodicals begun early in 1898 by the Boston and New York public libraries, the John Crerar Library in Chicago, the Library of Congress, and Harvard, forerunner of the cooperative indexing later taken over by the American Library Association. The printed cards thus produced were filed in the public catalogue and they, with the manuscript “index cards” made solely for our own use, gave the public a guide to the contents of the periodicals it had never enjoyed before.

The new catalogue grew apace. In October, 1897, the Director estimated it at 45,000 cards; by January, 1898, it had grown to 80,000, by January, 1899, to 308,649, and for the next dozen years it increased in like measure so that at the time of removal to the new building in 1911 it contained over a million and a quarter cards. At the Lenox branch corresponding catalogues were made for the main reading room (and, in time, for the music and local history collections) numbering about four hundred thousand cards at the time of removal.

We have followed here the development of the new catalogue as a unit rather than attempting to show its progress in narrative form year by year. Dr. Billings drove ahead on it against discouraging difficulties. He had hoped to recatalogue and reclassify the entire collection within four years, but circumstances seemed to conspire against him. Cataloguers fell sick when they were needed; arrivals of large collections, such as that of the Ford library, forced him to put as much of the force as possible at the task of sorting, "searching," and cataloguing the new arrivals, with consequent slowing up in the attack on back work; the old catalogues were frequently found unreliable on points where they should have been accurate; books were occasionally misplaced or lost or changed with no record of the fact in the catalogue and with consequent confusion; mishaps such as these sprang up with malevolent unexpectedness and delayed progress in a way that would have discouraged a less stout-hearted warrior than the gray haired man who sat in the Director's office and took the disappointments as calmly as the not infrequent successes.

Let us turn back now to the summer of 1896. At the Lenox building the Astor printed catalogues were being cut up, pasted on cards, and arranged by author. The Tilden books had been moved to the Lenox building shortly after consolidation and during this summer they were roughly grouped after the decimal classification, to stand thus until the new classification scheme should be worked out for the combined collections. Work went forward also on the Robinson collection of American genealogies and local histories recently bought by the Library and now combined with similar material in the Bancroft and other collections.

So too were the books classified or roughly grouped in the Emmet collection. This came as a gift from Mr. John S. Kennedy and consisted of manuscripts, maps, prints, views brought together by Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet, of this city, gynecologist of high rank, a born "collector," and a constant protagonist of the claims of Ireland. Dr. Emmet had begun his collecting at an early date, in the first half of the century, and by zeal, determination, a keen hunting sense, a comfortably filled purse, had seen his manuscripts take high rank among the most important American collections. The spirit of James Granger entered into his soul and led him to arrange his manuscripts, prints, maps, and other pieces not according to their subject matter, but according to their value as "extra illustrations" to Sanderson's "Lives of the Signers" or Lossing's "Field Book of the Revolution" or Mrs. Booth's "History of the City of New York," or as illustrating such groups as the members of the Continental Congress, generals of the Revolution, etc.

For the "extra-illustrator" the collection had a very high rank. For the ordinary librarian or mere student of history it had a real significance because of the importance of many of the manuscripts independent of their interest as autographs. It included also many maps, scenes, views, some in manuscript and some engraved, not to speak of numerous specimens of the best work of James McArdell, James Watson, Raphael Smith, Valentine Green, and the other British mezzotint engravers of the eighteenth century. Altogether it formed an impressive gift for the early days of the new institution.

An index to the extra illustrations in the greater part of the bound volumes was printed in the Bulletin between April, 1897, and April, 1899. This record was supplemented by a calendar of the remaining portion printed independently of the Bulletin, the whole being issued in July, 1900, as a volume of 563 pages.

During the summer of 1896 were removed to the Lenox building the paintings and other works of art in the Astor building, as well as the incunabula and other book rarities formerly displayed in cases near the main stairway.

In the early autumn of 1896 at each building open shelves were set apart for dictionaries, encyclopædias and the other more obvious works of reference, thus freeing readers from the necessity of filing a slip for each title they wanted. At the Astor building was introduced a "new book rack" and the congestion at the delivery desk was lessened by transferring the files of periodicals to the south hall.

In addition to this change was accomplished a real revolution in the handling of periodicals. Heretofore they had been acquired when the volume was completed and bound, a method certainly much freer from care on the part of the librarian than the new arrangement by which the periodicals were secured week by week or month by month as they were issued and were made available for use by the reader immediately on receipt. A hundred or so of the more popular titles were put outside the delivery counter on shelves to which the public were freely invited.

Such radical innovations caused some of the older regular readers to rub their eyes, to be sure, and some of these habitués were by no means pleased, so the rumor ran, at the influx of new faces these changes caused. The older readers had soon an additional reason for sighing for the "good old days" when at the end of 1896 it was decided to abolish "alcove readers." The "alcove reader" was an Astor institution. If you could convince a trustee or some other person of equal dignity and importance that you were engaged in research that required access to a large number of books you might secure a card admitting you to certain alcoves where the books you sought were shelved. To these books you had immediate access so long as your card was valid, subject only to the formality of signing your name in a book each time you entered. And these records of "alcove readers" included the names of many of the men and women doing important research work in this part of the country during the last few decades of the nineteenth century.

Space for the new periodicals was provided at the Astor building by sending the cataloguers from the main floor to a large room at the northeast corner of the first floor, formerly unoccupied. Other rooms on this first floor were fitted up with shelving to accommodate the new additions that soon began to arrive as evidence of the trustees' wisdom in granting the new Director $50,000 a year for books.

At the Lenox building a large room on the third floor, hitherto unused, was fitted with shelves, and several rooms on the mezzanine floor, occupied as living quarters by Dr. Moore, were rearranged to house the large collection of early American newspapers, bought a few years past, and the manuscripts and extra illustrated books.

Mr. Appleton P. C. Griffin left the Boston Public Library about this time and came to The New York Public Library as keeper of manuscripts. He made a rough grouping of the various collections that had come into the Lenox from time to time, incorporating the Hardwicke papers and other collections recently transferred from the Astor building, and he began a calendar of the entire collection. His work in this field lasted but a few months, however, as he left for Washington early in 1897 to become an assistant to Mr. John Russell Young, just appointed Librarian of Congress.

The new shelving on the Lenox third floor was soon occupied. In May, 1896, the American Bible Society had suggested that its collection of Bibles be taken over by the Library, and after negotiations that ran through the summer the trustees voted in October to accept the deposit. The form of agreement, dated October 14, provided that the Library would make the collections available to the public under such restrictions as governed the use of books in the Lenox branch, that the Bible Society was to bear the expense of transfer, that a representative of the society might have access to them at reasonable hours, that the society might withdraw temporarily any volumes it might desire, and that if the society terminated the agreement within twenty-five years, the Library was to be paid a reasonable amount for cataloguing expenses. The books, some 4,000 in number, were transferred early in 1897. This addition to the Lenox Bibles made a total of about 10,000 volumes. The Lenox collection was strongest in the early editions, particularly English texts before 1700; the Society collection was more miscellaneous, its greatest interest being perhaps in the texts it added in the lesser known languages.

A survey of resources of the Library taken at the end of 1896 showed 283,207 volumes in the Astor building and about 30,000 pamphlets. At the Lenox building were shelved 109,577 volumes and 39,159 pamphlets, giving a total record of 392,784 volumes and 69,159 pamphlets. At the time of consolidation the Astor count was supposed to show 267,147 volumes, the Lenox 86,000, and the Tilden 12,000 volumes and 30,000 pamphlets. The accessions for this first year numbered 27,637 volumes and 39,159 pamphlets. At the Astor building the use of the library as reflected in the number of readers recorded and of volumes consulted increased from 85,182 readers and 225,477 volumes in 1895 to 96,260 readers and 236,513 volumes in 1896. For the Lenox building the records showed 9,149 readers and 35,217 volumes in 1895, increasing to 13,228 readers and 55,692 volumes in 1896. Clearly the new life was becoming evident.

By the early part of 1897 the Director found his hands free to take up the matter of classification. It has been said before that both branches had in general fixed locations for their books. At the Lenox building all books relating to America, printed before 1801, were shelved in the gallery of the south reading room, arranged chronologically by date of issue. This provided a simple, flexible, automatic classification scheme for a large and important group. In this same gallery were also arranged some of the incunabula and other early printed books as well as several of the smaller special collections of unusual interest or rarity, such as the Aldines, "Index Librorum Prohibitorum," etc. Some of the larger collections of rarities such as the Bibles, Shakespeare, Bunyan, Milton were shelved in other parts of the building. For the rest of the library books were in general shelved according to the source or collection. The Bancroft, Astoin, Duyckinck books were kept together, each volume bearing on one of its rear flyleaves a pencil note of the press number and shelf letter that marked its location. In the Stuart room the primary principle concerned itself with keeping sets together and in full view if they were well bound, arranging other books in good bindings so as to make a good appearance, and shelving behind these front ranks books in poor condition or less attractive binding.

At the Astor building location of books was indicated likewise by press numbers and shelf letters, but the classification had been worked out on a more logical scheme. The south hall was given up to the sciences, the north hall to the humanities, the middle hall serving as a sort of neutral ground or overflow from the others. Each alcove contained ten presses and the shelves in these presses were lettered from A onwards. About three feet from the floor ran a ledge (except on the wall sides) below which were two or three deep shelves for folios or large size books. The shelves above the ledge were about a foot deep and were lettered from C onwards, the ledge shelf always being C. The location of books was marked in the printed catalogues and from these catalogues the reader copied author, title, location mark when he called for his books.

To change this fixed location for a collection of 400,000 pieces was in itself no slight task. More important, however, was the task of deciding whether the Decimal or the Cutter classification schemes should be used, or, if neither, what other system. The Dewey and the Cutter systems both had the decidedly important initial advantage of being printed, in whole or part. They had the disadvantage of having been devised as universal schemes, applicable to any collection of books, but with no particular adaptation to a collection possessing so many peculiarities as did that of The New York Public Library.

After careful consideration of the difficulties that beset his path whatever his decision Dr. Billings concluded to develop a classification scheme for the particular collection entrusted to his care, basing it primarily upon the books he found before him. This work of reclassification was combined with the recataloguing, for which there was sore need in many fields, and with the development of the subject catalogue, which heretofore had existed in no adequate form.

We have heard before how two sets of the Astor printed catalogues had been cut up during the summer of 1896, the slips thus produced then being pasted on standard catalogue cards and alphabetized. When this work was finished Mr. C. H. A. Bjerregaard (helped by the Director as his other duties allowed) grouped these cards into several large classes, such as technology, physical and mathematical sciences, biological sciences, literature, history, philology, and so on.

When the time came to work out the classification of a given subject the classifier took the cards thus grouped for that subject, together with a rough outline of the main heads suggested by the Director, and with cards and outline sat himself down with the books on that subject. From the books he found before him he was supposed to work out a classification scheme that possessed the general advantages of the two universal systems and the additional advantage of precise adaptation to the particular books owned here. These draft schemes so developed were submitted to the Director and, when approved, served as the basis for changing the location marks. As each book was handled and rearranged it was identified with its subject card and the new class mark was penciled on book and card. If no card was found one was made, so that no book could pass into the newly classified sections without being provided with a subject card for the public catalogue. If the card was present but no book was found, search was made for a reasonable length of time, after which, if unsuccessful, the card was set aside in the hope that the volume would turn up in some other section or at the end regretfully be put in the record as missing and unaccounted for.

The cards representing these reclassified volumes went first into the hands of clerks who corrected the entries in the printed author catalogues and then passed them on for filing in the newly-established public card catalogue. Looking back with the wisdom of experience we can see now it would have been better then to have added to this public subject card an author card as well, and also to have provided a shelf list record. Dr. Billings was anxious to get before the public at the earliest possible moment an adequate index to the treasures the library possessed and to this primary, fundamental object he sacrificed everything that savored of the incidental. He was not distressed by the fact that some cards were cut from printed catalogues and some were in manuscript, that some of the manuscript entries were in the so-called "library hand" and many others were not, that some of the author entries left much to be desired if judged by critical bibliographical niceties, that the form of imprint varied greatly, that in some cases the collation was given and in others it was not. He would have preferred to have had uniform entries, entries of the same character and high standards as to accuracy and form that distinguished those in the Surgeon General's Catalogue he had conceived and executed. But he had set himself the task of reclassifying and recataloguing this library within a few years and he would not see that end deferred by what Cogswell had called "bibliographical quiddling." Unquestionably — as we see it now, I must repeat — it would have been better to have provided "full sets" for the public catalogue and a satisfactory shelf list card when books and subject cards were first handled, but it is equally unquestionable that the delay entailed by this extra work would not have impressed on the staff the necessity for speedy results in the way this insistence on fundamentals affected them.

A further complication lay in the fact that for a year or two the so-called "small card" catalogue at the Astor was kept as a reservoir. Experience shows us that it would have been better to have scrapped it at once as the other Astor card records were scrapped, but here again it is easy to be wise after the event.

In developing his system of classification Dr. Billings showed characteristic independence, self reliance, clearness of vision. He began first on the three groups of sociology and economics, technology, history. In the course of two years the scheme had been developed far enough to justify printing. This was done on loose leaves, printed on the recto only, and the first sheets were prefaced by a "Memorandum on classification in The New York Public Library," dated January 1, 1899.

Here he pointed out that "the main principle kept in view in the classification is the convenience of the readers in the library, including both those who are allowed access to the shelves and those to whom books are delivered in the general reading rooms, and in endeavoring to provide for this convenience we have relied on the experience gained with our own readers as to what books or groups of books are most frequently called for. The books relating to the subjects which are most studied by our visitors we wish to have either on the open reference shelves or near the delivery desk, while those that are rarely called for may be placed in the stack at a greater distance. The relative importance of different subjects as they would appear in a scheme of the divisions of human knowledge has, therefore, very little weight in our classification.

“The second principle which governs the classification is the fact that in our new building special accommodations are to be provided for readers engaged in the study of certain special subjects, for which purposes the books relating to those subjects are to be placed in special rooms, to which access will be given by admission cards. These books can be obtained for the use of readers in the general reading rooms, but they will be used mainly by specialists, and the wants of these specialists will be chiefly considered in the classification.

“In assigning a book to a place upon the shelves two questions often come up: first, in what class does it belong by its main subject? second, in what class will it probably be most useful in this particular library? For example, one of the special collections of this library is that which pertains to American history, and it seems best to place in this collection in proper chronological order a considerable number of sermons and controversial tracts which, from their main subject, would go into the department of Theology, but which would probably never be consulted by the readers in that department. In like manner there are some poems which do not go to the department of literature, but to that of history, being of the nature of political satires.”

He pointed out that the books fell into three great groups, first the special collections, books to go into special rooms, books on the free reference shelves; these were to be called the star groups because they were indicated by a star prefixed to the letters indicating the group or class. Second was the group of books to be shelved in the main stack room; this included the fourteen classes of biography, history, geography, art, literature, science, philology, sociology, economics, technology, law, philosophy, religion, medicine. The third group was to include the books in the circulation department and determination of the system for this collection was deferred until the department should be established, at which time it was decided to use the Decimal classification.

In the first two groups the subdivisions were indicated by combinations of letters. “Upon this classification,” he went on to say, “it may be remarked that it is not a copy of any classification used elsewhere; that it is not specially original; that it is not logical so far as the succession of different departments in relation to the operations of the human mind is concerned; that it is not recommended for any other library; and that no librarian of another library would approve of it. As to the system of marking it is not mnemonic, and its chief recommendation is that it indicates the classes with a comparatively small number of signs. By its means books in the library are divided into about 12,000 groups, with an average of less than forty (40) books in each group, and the average number of letters in the mark for each of these 12,000 groups is three. Where more minute classification proves desirable another letter can be added; four-letter groups would give us 250,000 groups. I do not think, however, that such close classification is desirable in the majority of the departments; it is most useful in the industrial arts, and least useful in history, literature and science, in which last department the periodical literature is of special importance."

Reclassification began in 1897 and was pushed forward with good speed for the larger and more important sections. It was not, however, until after the new building had been occupied for fully a year that reclassification of some of the out of the way groups and less significant divisions was completed. The task was, of course, complicated by the fact that the collections were divided between two buildings three miles apart, that work had to be carried on while the books were being used by the public, and that assistants of varying degrees of learning, ability, and interest developed the details. As we look at it today we see that the system has not the polished completeness of perfection of the Library of Congress scheme or the Dewey or Cutter schemes. It is uneven and open to adverse criticism on several points. I doubt if library schools include it in the systems they set before their students for study and am sure any recent library school graduate could suggest numerous improvements. When all is said and done, however, we must admit that it has worked well for the reference department of The New York Public Library, that it has proven flexible, practical, and well adapted to the needs of staff and readers. And if Dr. Billings could look back on his work today, almost a quarter of a century after he began it and after a severe daily testing for almost a decade in the new building, he would probably say that was about what he had in mind and nearly all any one could demand or expect.

By the end of his first two years Dr. Billings had the new index catalogue well established and the work of reclassification in full swing. In the meantime the plans for the new Central Building were being developed and soon he was to have the task of organizing the Circulation Department of the library and planning for its growth and its buildings. So far as the Reference Department is concerned the record from now on is mainly a narrative of growth, a chronicle of administrative changes. A department of public documents was established in 1897, with Miss Adelaide R. Hasse in charge; an Oriental Department about the same time with Dr. Richard Gottheil of Columbia University in charge; a Slavonic Department in 1899 with Mr. Herman Rosenthal in charge. In November, 1897, Mr. Jacob H. Schiff offered $10,000 for the purchase of Semitic literature on condition that a competent librarian be secured, and Mr. A. S. Freidus, who had for six months past been cataloguing and classifying the Hebrew books owned by the library and largely increased by purchase since consolidation, was put in charge of the Jewish Department. A small bindery was established at the Astor building in July, 1897. In the spring of 1898 the north hall on the first floor at the Lenox building was fitted with shelving to house the books relating to local history and genealogy, and the books on music were moved from the Astor building to be shelved in this room near the Drexel musical library. This north reading room was opened for readers in November, 1898. The exhibition cases for display of rare books were moved to the hallway on the second floor. About this same time a Map Department was opened in one of the mezzanine rooms at the Lenox building in charge of Mr. Thomas Letts, son of the London publisher of maps and diaries. A year or so later when the print room was opened the maps were moved a half flight higher to the south end of the Fifth Avenue corridor on the second floor.

In May, 1897, began the first of the monthly meetings of the staff called by the Director for discussion of various phases of the daily work, for increase of the esprit de corps, and for providing a common meeting-ground for consideration of library problems in a way that could not well be handled during the day. In one form or another these meetings have been held continuously since they began, to the no small benefit of the staff as a whole and as individuals.

In these same early days an apprentice class was begun, to provide some form of training for applicants for positions who were possessed of sufficient general training, education, and aptitude for library work but had not had the technical training of library schools. Between January, 1897, and July, 1898, thirty pupils were accepted and fourteen received appointment to the staff. At first no systematic formal instruction was provided; pupils were detailed to one department after the other and were supposed in this fashion to get an idea of the work of the whole institution. It soon became evident, however, that some department heads were better teachers than others, and that some apprentices were possessed of minds more naturally acquisitive than others. To systematize the work, give all an even chance, and secure more uniform results for library and pupils the task of teaching, which hitherto had been in the hands of several members of the staff who had had library school training, was given to Miss Elizabeth L. Foote. After the establishment of the circulation department in 1901 the plan and scope of the apprentice class widened with the opportunities for service newly opened. Miss Foote remained in charge of this work until after the new building was opened, and the library school was begun through Mr. Carnegie's gift and with Miss Plummer as principal. Miss Foote then took charge of one of the circulation branches.

The earliest large gift to the Library had been the Emmet collection of extra illustrated books, manuscripts, prints presented by Mr. Kennedy in 1896. The next gift of more than ordinary importance came in January, 1899, when Worthington Chauncey Ford and Paul Leicester Ford offered the Library their entire collection of printed books as a memorial to their father, Gordon Lester Ford,* estimated at over 30,000 books, 70,000 pamphlets, with a large number of maps and prints. The gift came partly as the result of the purchase by Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan of the Ford collection of manuscripts for $35,000. From these manuscripts Mr. Morgan selected such as he wished for his own collection and turned the remainder over to the Library as a gift. Mr. Ford was a collector by instinct and he was fortunate in the possibilities that lay open to him by reason of his family connections and business relations. Through his own family and that of his wife, a granddaughter of Noah Webster, he touched many lines of book-loving New Englanders who tilled their fields, sent large families to school and college, and collected and preserved their local books, sermons, pamphlets, newspapers, all with equal intenseness. Associated for many years with Horace Greeley on the Tribune, he saw that frequently the trivial, ephemeral pamphlet of to-day is the important historical document of to-morrow. He ranked with Tefft, Cist, and Sprague as an early collector of autographs and historical manuscripts. His library of printed books was strong in American political, constitutional, and economic history in the widest sense, and in the fields of finance, taxation, and economics the interest spread to England and the Continent. The father's interests as a collector met hearty response in the tastes and abilities of his sons Worthington and Paul. They were historians, bibliographers, editors of historical manuscripts as well as collectors. They were the "Historical Printing Club," which issued in the eighties such a significant series of documents and bibliographies relating to American history, most of which were based on the library begun by their father and further developed by themselves. It was through acquaintance with the treasures there contained that Worthington fitted himself to edit the Washington papers, and Paul the Jefferson papers in the Putnam's series of "Writings of the Fathers." Worthington served twice as chief of the Bureau of Statistics at Washington and, through his interest in economics, added largely to this rather unusual feature of a private library. As a whole the collection did for American history in the 18th and 19th centuries what the Lenox and Bancroft collections had done for the earlier periods. In size, comprehensiveness, and importance the Ford collection ranks high among the special collections belonging to the Library.

This year of 1899 brought another important gift when Miss Helen Miller Gould presented in December the Berrian collection of books and pamphlets on Mormonism, 451 volumes, 325 pamphlets, 52 volumes of newspapers, and 500 unbound numbers of newspapers.† It represented many years' collecting by William C. Berrian of Brooklyn and ranks among the three or four most important collections on this subject in the country.

In December, 1899, the trustees decided to establish a department of prints, and for this purpose the maps were moved from the mezzanine floor at the Lenox building to the south end of the second floor hall, the manuscript collections were moved to the south end of the mezzanine floor and the two rooms at the north end fitted up as print rooms. "It is believed," so the first official announcement stated,* "that a good representative collection of prints, in the broadest sense of the term, i. e., as including photographs, lithographs, and all forms of illustration of the graphic arts, will be of special interest and value in this Library, where it can be closely associated with the large collection of the literature of art which has been formed, and where it will also be available for the student of social history and of the manners, customs, costumes, etc., of a particular place or period in connection with the literature of those subjects" — altogether a very characteristic Billings conception, description, and phrase.

The Library already possessed in the Lenox, Bancroft, Duyckinck, Tilden collections a sufficient number of prints, of varying degrees of artistic importance, to justify the step taken. These could serve as a nucleus, but, individually or collectively, they could do little more than stand as evidence of good will and good intent. An opportunity of rare merit was offered in May following when Mr. Samuel P. Avery presented his entire collection of prints.† In making the gift he said:

"I have for a long time intended to bequeath to some institution of my native city my collection of etchings, lithographs and photographs and large volumes illustrated by the same works. Circumstances have made me conclude to make this gift in my life time and my investigations have convinced me that great libraries like the British Museum, the National Library of Paris and The New York Public Library possess the best facilities for accommodating readers and students. Fortunately the establishment of a department of prints in The New York Public Library, with a very competent curator, permits me to put my design at once into execution. I have, therefore, transferred to the Lenox [building] and now present to The New York Public Library, these works of art, the collection of which has been a labor of love for over thirty years.

"The etchings are by artists of our own era, such as Haden, Jacque, Whistler, Millet, Fortuny, Meryon, Flameng, Bracquemond, Israels, Rajon and many others, whose personal acquaintance enabled me to gather in many cases complete productions. They are contained in 164 portfolios of various sizes and number, by actual count, 12,182 subjects and 14,931 pieces. Apart from these, but one of the most important and valuable items in the collection, is a unique set (at least in this country) of Turner's Liber Studiorum, consisting of very rare outline etchings, first states, mezzotints, published and unpublished, and photographs from original drawings, in all 226 pieces.

* Bulletin, December, 1899, v. 3, p. 480.

† For his letter of May 9, 1900, see the Bulletin for May, 1900, v. 4, p. 152-153.

"The lithographs are in 23 portfolios and number 2,291 subjects and 2,384 pieces that illustrate the art of lithography from the time of its inventor, Senefelder, to the present day.

"The photographs, contained in seven portfolios, number 324 subjects and 335 pieces, mostly with autographic inscriptions and from paintings by recent artists with whom I have had intimate relations.

"The total count amounts to 194 portfolios, 14,890 different subjects, with 'states' of the same, numbering in all 17,557 pieces.

"The bound volumes, folio and quarto, represent sixty-nine works in eighty-two volumes, illustrated with etchings, engravings, lithographs, etc., the plates not counted or included in the above enumeration; also many printed catalogues, essays on the arts employed, portraits, biographical sketches and other material relating to the artists in the collection.

"The collections are presented upon the condition that they shall always form a part of the print department of The New York Public Library, each print to bear a stamp reading 'S. P. Avery Collection' and the books to have my book-plate inserted, all of the collections to be subject to the rules made by the Trustees with regard to such collection."

The addition of such an extensive, important, and choice collection marked the first step in the development of the print room. Mr. Frank Weitenkamp, who had been appointed Curator and who for several years divided his time between his duties as Curator of Prints at the Lenox building and Chief of the Accessions Department at the Astor building, made as the first public exhibition of prints a selection from the Liber Studiorum in the front hall on the second floor at the Lenox building. From that date on exhibitions have been given without a break and they undoubtedly have had great influence in educating the public to the beauty of prints and to the important and inherent connection between books and prints.

Mr. Avery printed at his own expense at the De Vinne Press in 1901 a handbook to the collection, a pamphlet of 84 pages listing by artist's name and number of pieces, the etchings, lithographs, photographs, miscellaneous prints, as well as the books included in the collection. The "Introductory statement" explains how Mr. Avery's interest in prints began as a boy, developed into his choosing wood-engraving as a vocation, from which he expanded his interests into dealing in works of art. In this way he became acquainted with all European and American artists of his day and from these friends he secured one or more examples of all their important works. As a result he acquired practically complete sets of such men as Jacque, Haden, Whistler and other artists of their time, and this intimate connection between artist, print, and collector, this unusual element of contemporaneity, serves to give his collection a character and a personality common to few others.

With the print room once established and its importance justified by the Avery gift other tributes of recognition came quickly and from widely scattered fields. Mr. James D. Smillie gave a collection of 628 pieces engraved by his father, James Smillie, between 1825 and 1885, with 295 prints engraved by contemporaries. Mr. J. Durand gave a collection of drawings designed for bank note vignettes by Asher B. Durand, his father; Mr. Charles Stewart Smith, a collection of Japanese prints, formed by Captain Brinckley, numbering over 1,700 pieces, and including good specimens of the most important men of the 1750-1850 period. Numerous other gifts from living artists, from collectors like Mr. Charles B. Curtis, from dealers like Mr. Frederick Keppel, who added largely to the group of American artists, served to keep the print room in the public eye and to connect the Library with a large and important portion of the community who hitherto had used it but little.

Mr. Avery lived until August 12, 1904, and during these five years, few months passed without recording the addition of some print or book or autograph. After his death Mr. Cadwalader and Mr. Halsey gradually came to take his place as the members of the Board who showed greatest zeal for the print room. Mr. Cadwalader had taken an interest in the print collections of the Library even before the room was established, and he kept up this interest throughout his life. After his death on March 11, 1914, it was found that his will left to the Library his entire collection of engravings, mainly stipple and mezzotint, as well as the sum of $50,000. The income from this fund he suggested — without in any way making it a condition — might well be spent in buying old prints, a field in which he had given many noteworthy additions for several years. Mr. Halsey served long on the advisory committee on prints and was a constant source of help and advice on all phases of print collecting.

This sketch of the establishment and development of the print room has carried us far from the year 1900, but no story of the Library would be complete without an adequate appreciation of this phase of the work. In any mention of the work of the print room, the names of Avery and Cadwalader stand high above the rest, and to give them proper appreciation by mere mention in a chronicle or annalistic compilation would indeed be inadequate, not to say impossible.

By the turn of the century the reorganization of what later came to be called the "Reference Department" of the Library had been pretty well effected, the machinery had got into the habit of running much as Doctor Billings planned it should run, and the record of this portion of the Library simmers down to a record of gifts, and of administrative changes of minor importance. Most members of the reference staff resigned themselves to their daily task with little expectation of radical change until that removal to the new building brought that increase in salary, that happier adaptation of work to personality, ambition, capability, that general readjustment of our little world which we all without consciousness and without justification had come to assume. I do not mean to imply discontent. Some there was, of course, and what seemed important then seems happily slight and trivial to-day in retrospect. It meant simply that most of us who had seen and lived the stirring days of the first few years saw the thrill of reorganization, expansion, adaptation swinging off to the field of the Circulation Department and realized that for us life offered no such charm until the new world and the new heaven was opened to us in the new building.

Before, however, we take up the narrative of the establishment of the Circulation Department and its development under the Carnegie gift it may be best to put down here with some semblance of chronological sequence a record of some of the more important and significant gifts received by the Reference Department in these next few years and a record of some of the changes in routine brought about by time.

Paul Leicester Ford continued his interest after the Brooklyn house on Clark Street was freed from its books and after he had moved to Manhattan and married. He was a frequent visitor to the Director's office as well as to the American history sources in the Lenox building, and the sight of his cheerful face on the slight body that accomplished such wonderful things, his keen interest in all phases of our work, his triumphant glee at discovering an unexpected treasure in a catalogue and the real pleasure he took in offering to buy these treasures if we would only assure him they were not in the Library — such traits endeared him to many of us and left behind him many sincere mourners after his untimely death in the summer of 1902.

It was about this time, too, that Mrs. Henry Draper began to take such an active interest in the Library and the staff. From now on her name appears with increasing frequency among the donors. Her gifts always showed the impress of her personality, a far-sighted, comprehensive interest in science and in art. During her life she began a collection in memory of her father, Courtlandt Palmer, and soon after the death of Doctor Billings she planned for a collection as a tribute to a friendship of several decades. In her will she made provision for continuation of both these collections. A detailed list of her numerous benefactions would swell this record beyond any semblance of readability, but we must not fail to stop a moment to pay a tribute to her memory as a firm and true friend of the Library for many years.

In February, 1900, the Library received the collection of autographs, books, prints brought together by Colonel Theodorus Bailey Myers (1821–1888) of New York City and presented by his widow, his daughter, Mrs. James, and his daughter-in-law Mrs. Mason, as a memorial of him and his son, Theodorus Bailey Myers Mason, Lieutenant Commander, U. S. N. Colonel Myers was long a friendly rival of Dr. Emmet and the Myers and Emmet collections have much in common. The Myers manuscripts are arranged in a dozen or more quarto volumes, one including the letters, portraits, etc., of the signers of the Declaration of Independence; another the papers of Gen. Daniel Morgan, 1777–1808; other relating to governors of New Netherlands and of the colony and state of New York; prominent officials and civilians of the colonial period; generals and other officers of the Revolution; prominent civilians during the Revolution, including members of the Continental congress; autographs of distinguished Americans, British and Frenchmen not included above. There were also numerous extra-illustrated volumes and over 3,000 volumes and 1,600 pamphlets relating to American history in general and to New York City and State in particular.

At a later date the following tablet was set in the new building as a tribute to the collection, its makers and its donors:

Another important gift of this period consisted of a set of the "Official Guide of the Railways," complete in 123 volumes, from January, 1868, given by the National Railway Publication Company, followed by a collection of letters, manuscripts, circulars, pamphlets relating to the movement that led to the establishment of a national system of standard railway time on November 18, 1883, in which movement the donor, Mr. W. F. Allen, had an important part.

In 1902 the number of trustees was increased from twenty-one to twenty-five (by Chapter 21 of the laws of 1902), of which number three served ex officio, the Mayor, the Comptroller, the President of the Board of Aldermen. Mr. Huntington resigned as a trustee on December 11, 1901, and in January following Mr. Carnegie was elected as his successor. In April, 1902, Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan was elected to one of the new vacancies. In January, 1902, Mr. Rives resigned his office as Secretary because of his appointment as Corporation Counsel under Mayor Low, and Mr. Charles Howland Russell was elected Secretary in his place.

About this same time Mrs. Henry R. Hoyt gave a portion of the library of Judge Charles P. Daly, and in March, 1902, Mrs. Simon Sterne presented about 5,000 volumes and pamphlets from the library of her late husband, furnishing a very important addition to our material on economics, finance, statistics, and railroad and labor problems with which Mr. Sterne had so much to do.

The "Library Americana" belongs to this period also. This embodied the devotion to an idea that filled the soul of Henry Baldwin of New Haven. Mr. Baldwin believed that various anti-American organizations existed in Europe and anti-Protestant organizations in this country, having for their sole object the overthrow of representative republican government as here established. He believed that one way of combating this movement was by forming patriotic and nativistic societies, such as the Sons of the Revolution, Sons of the American Revolution, Daughters of the American Revolution, etc. Another method of combat was the collecting of every scrap of printed matter that cast light on American history and government in general and on these nativistic movements in particular. The vastness of his plans, so far as the collecting of books was concerned, ensured the eclipse of all existing collections of Americana and entailed an expenditure of more than the combined incomes of the dozen richest libraries then existent. However, Doctor Billings was able to convince him and Mr. William O. McDowell and his other associates in the Library Americana that as a practical measure it would be better for them to turn their collections over to The New York Public Library rather than to attempt at their stage of life to surpass our collections in size and comprehensiveness. When their books were turned over the count showed about 1,000 bound volumes, 5,000 pamphlets, a series of scrap-books relating to such matters as the Chile-Peru war, the presidential election of 1884, the Spanish-American war, as well as much material relating to the various nativistic orders and organizations formed in this country from time to time.

In December, 1901, the George William Curtis Memorial Association presented a bronze bust of Curtis, done by Mr. J. Q. A. Ward. The formal ceremony of presentation was held at the Lenox branch on the evening of December 7, 1903, when Mayor Seth Low made the presentation address on behalf of the Association. Doctor Billings responded on behalf of the Library, and Carl Schurz made an address on Curtis and his political, literary, and other activities.

In February, 1904, came as a bequest from the late Isaac Meyer over 2,000 volumes and pamphlets relating mainly to Egyptian and Hebrew mysticism, the Kabbala, scarabs, and related topics.

A year later, in January, 1905, came by bequest from George Becks, a collection of 1,224 prompt books. Mr. Becks, who died in St. Louis in May, 1904, was born in Manchester, England, came to this country at the age of 19, and played for many years in stock and travelling companies such as Niblo's, Laura Keene's, Booth's, Mrs. Lander's. His collection comprised mainly the British and American theatre of the 19th century, but included also a number of classical plays of earlier date.*

Towards the end of 1905 it became evident that the closing of the Astor building at 6 p. m. entailed a serious hardship on many who needed to use the collections, but could not get away from their business in the day-time. On recommendation of the Director the Board voted on December 13, 1905, a special appropriation to permit opening the Astor building till 9.00 p. m. on week days, to extend the closing hours of reading rooms in six circulation branches from 9 to 10 p. m., and to open twelve reading rooms in circulation branches on Sunday afternoon and evening, the change in each case to be effective January 1, 1906. Funds were still too limited to open either the Astor or Lenox building on Sunday. That the change was welcome soon became evident. For the first six months the evening readers numbered 11,856, or 13 per cent. of the total registered at the Astor branch. They called for 23,201 volumes, 5.5 per cent. of the total number of volumes consulted. The average number of volumes per reader was 1.9 at night, compared with 4.9 during the day. The use of the library during these evening hours increased steadily. For 1910 — the last complete year before the removal to the new building — 28,357 readers used 75,584 volumes at night, as compared to the 121,586 readers who used 505,751 volumes from 9.00 a. m. to 6.00 p. m. The percentage of evening readers rose from 13 in the first six months to 18.6 in 1910.

Then, as now, the day use seemed to record a larger number of volumes per reader than night use. Later, in the new building when all rooms were open at night and on Sundays, the same observation seemed to hold for the readers on holidays or Sundays. They seemed to have definite ideas as to what they wanted, and to be able to satisfy those wants quickly, using fewer volumes in general than the readers during the day time.

About this time we had the experience of packing and storing away in boxes about one tenth of the library. Mr. Henry Clay Frick bought the Lenox library building and site by contract dated December 3, 1906. For it he agreed to pay $2,250,000.† If he called for possession by written notice before October 1, 1907 the Library agreed to move its collections before January 2, 1908; if before October 1, 1908, to give possession January 2, 1909; if neither of these options was taken the purchaser might take possession at any time after three months' written notice.

This meant that provision had to be made at the Astor building for caring for the entire stock of the Lenox building. No one could foresee what Mr. Frick would do, and if he chose to call for possession in October, three months would be none too long a time for removal, let alone the task of preparation. If the Library rented space outside for storage the price would be prohibitive if near enough to allow books to be consulted; if we went to a distance where space was cheaper the lessened price was offset by the unavailability for consultation. If books were to be unavailable it seemed best to keep them within our own walls and our own control. It was decided, therefore, to box, for storage in the Astor basement, certain little-used classes such as foreign government documents before 1900, theological periodicals, missions, college catalogues, charities reports, portions of the Oriental and Slavonic collections. In those cavernous "Annexes" at the Astor building whence came a goodly portion of the classes put in boxes, platforms were erected half way between floor and ceiling, in which way 3,528 square feet were gained. In 1907 the record of boxed material numbered 69,289 volumes and pamphlets, and in 1908 an additional 14,362 were so stored, 83,651 in all.

* A complete list of the collection was printed in the Bulletin for February, 1906, v. 10, p. 100-148.

† On April 30, 1907, he bought another parcel for $600,000. The entire block brought $5,024,250.

It was not an ideal arrangement but under the circumstances nothing else could have been done. It is a pleasure to be able to report that both readers and staff accepted the inconveniences with philosophic cheerfulness and good will.

The year 1907 was marked by several gifts of more than ordinary interest: some 315 handsomely-bound volumes on folk lore from Mrs. Frederick Ferris Thompson, over 636 pieces of Russian public documents through the interest of Miss Isabel F. Hapgood and Count Mikhail Mikhailovitch Perovsky-Petrovo-Solovovo. Mrs. F. A. Sorge gave the remaining portion of the library of the late F. A. Sorge, including his musical scores and textbooks, and a collection of 239 manuscript letters addressed to Sorge by Karl Marx, Friedrich Engels, Johann Philip Becker, Joseph Dietzgen, and others. 1867-1895. They formed an important complement to the collection of books, pamphlets, newspapers relating to the labor, socialist, and political movements in England and the Continent during the last quarter-century given by Mr. Sorge in November and December, 1898, and January, 1899.

Hon. Elihu Root gave nearly 400 volumes, reports, orders, and documents relating to the connection between the United States and Porto Rico, Cuba, the Philippines, the China Relief Expedition of 1900, and various other features of our insular policy and affairs. Impressed by a conviction of the historical importance of the events immediately following the Spanish-American war, Mr. Root set aside copies of the documents issued by his office while he was secretary of war and secretary of state, and now turned them over to the Library.

Mention should be made here, too, of the efforts of Mr. Richard Helbig, of the Lenox staff, to develop our files of publications relating to German-Americans and their interests. From July, 1906, to December, 1908, there came in nearly 2,500 volumes and pamphlets for this collection. Its importance was perceived even then, but it took the stirring years of 1914-1918 to emphasize the advantage of the collection.

The most important event of 1908 was the election on April 8 of Mr. Edwin H. Anderson as Assistant Director. Mr. Anderson had attended the New York State Library School, had served as a cataloguer at the Newberry Library, as librarian of the Carnegie Library at Braddock in 1892-1895, and in 1895 organized the Carnegie Library at Pittsburgh, serving as librarian for ten years until he resigned for a business life. In 1906 he was called to Albany as State Librarian, leaving that post to come to New York. He began his duties with us on June 1.

In 1909 the Library lost a friend and benefactor when Mr. John Stewart Kennedy died on Sunday, October 31. He had served as a trustee of the Lenox Library since 1887, becoming its president in 1887. With Messrs. Rives and Maitland he had taken an important part, on behalf of the Lenox interests, in the councils that led to the consolidation of 1895. He served as trustee and second vice-president of the new library from 1895 until his death, and by his will left to the Library three sixty-fourths of his residual estate, which amounted to over $2,500,000. This was the largest single bequest in the history of the institution.

On March 17, 1909, Mr. Jacob H. Schiff presented the Tissot collection of 317 water color illustrations of the Old Testament. Mr. Schiff asked to have the collection displayed in one of the exhibition rooms when the new building was opened; after several months here it was to be divided into small units to be sent to the various circulation branches in succession.

The year following Mrs. Henry Draper gave the collection on magic brought together by Dr. Saram R. Ellison, numbering 664 volumes and 433 pamphlets, with numerous scrapbooks of newspaper clippings, programmes, etc., and a large collection of magicians' wands, models, apparatus. It included all phases of the literature, but was particularly strong on manipulative magic. After we moved to the new building Dr. Ellison bought back the wands and models, distressed because we had no place in which to give them proper display, and in 1915 he reimbursed the Library for the amount Mrs. Draper had originally spent for the collection, so that it might stand on our records as a gift from himself. His interest continued until his death a few years later, and he was a frequent visitor with gifts of books or of money.

From Mrs. Draper came in 1911 one of the most extensive gifts received while in the old buildings, a collection of some 32,236 colored plates, sketches, etc., illustrating military costumes of all nations, brought together by the late Dr. Vinkhuizen of The Hague.

Another gift of unusual interest consisted of a collection of 428 works relating to penmanship, specimens of school copy books and similar material on the history of handwriting, brought together by George H. Shattuck, of Medina, New York. The titles ranged in date from 1659 to recent years, and covered very fully the period after 1850, the latter date marking approximately the change from manuscript copy books prepared by the individual teacher to engraved books issued by publishers.

In these last few years the cataloguing routine had become fairly definitely fixed, the most important groups had all come under the new classification, and time allowed us to engage in such luxuries as preparation of an index to the classification system. Most important of all, however, was the preparation for the removal to the new building. As first preliminary step we had the measurement in feet and inches of each separate group in the classification scheme. With these figures in hand we planned on paper the distribution of these various groups in the stack floors and the special rooms in the new building. The problem was complicated by the fact that nearly 100,000 volumes at the Astor building were stored away in boxes unavailable until they had been taken to 42nd Street and opened, but requiring most careful calculation as to the linear space to be allotted them. Such tasks as this, the planning for furniture and special equipment in the new building, and other preparatory steps for the removal brought day by day nearer to our hopeful eyes the time when crowded quarters should be replaced by comfort.

The Lenox building was closed on Saturday, March 18, 1911, shipment of the paintings and other contents of the picture galleries having begun on March 15. By Wednesday, April 12, the Lenox collections were all within their new home, and shipments from the Astor building began on April 13. The Astor building was not closed to readers until 9.00 p. m. on the evening of Saturday, April 15. The last load from Astor was delivered on May 18.

At the Lenox branch the books were taken from the shelves by the movers and placed in boxes about three feet long, one foot wide, one foot deep, which were then carried to the wagons on the backs of the men or dropped by means of block and tackle.

At the Astor building slides were rigged by means of which the loaded boxes were shot from top floor to first, from galleries to first floor, from first floor to street level, by force of gravity. Handling of boxes was confined solely to delivery to the slides or chutes, transfer from the bottom of one to the nearby top of the other, moving from the bottom chute to the waiting wagon. An endless chain conveyor carried the empty boxes from first floor to second.

As each box was packed a paper label (3" × 5" in size) was pasted on its end, bearing in pencil the classification number of the group on one line, the room number or stack floor to which the shipment was consigned on the second line, and the third line bore a combination of letters and figures indicating the precise shelf on which the contents were to be put. Thus $\begin{matrix} XYZ \\ IV \\ 4NW3B \end{matrix}$ indicated that a given box contained three feet of books belonging to algebra or Swedish poetry or whatever the classification group XYZ included; it was to go to stack four and there to be placed on the second shelf from the top of the third press in the fourth stack of the northwest quadrant.

The stack floors were numbered from bottom to top I to VII. Each floor was divided into four sections, northeast, northwest, southeast, southwest. In each quadrant the stack faces were numbered along the centre aisle, 1 to 58, beginning at the centre and running north and south. Each stack face was divided into ten presses, and each press was divided into a varying number of shelves, seven to eight for small books, two to three for folios, newspapers, etc. The top shelf in each case was named A, the others following alphabetically.

The stack floors were each seven feet six inches on centres. The presses are three feet wide, the stacks thirty feet long, some eighteen and some twenty-four inches deep. At the north and south ends of each stack floor were sliding shelves twenty-four or thirty inches deep for folios so tall they must lie flat. In these cases the presses were lettered on each floor, the shelves numbered from top to bottom. Thus $\begin{matrix} \text{IV} \\ \text{North} \\ \text{B12} \end{matrix}$ indicated that a folio volume went to stack four, north end, second folio press, twelfth shelf from the top.

In the special rooms the stacks on the floor were given odd numbers, those in the galleries even numbers. The presses were lettered and the shelves numbered.

In this way every box bore its precise destination. The notation symbols were easy to read, for figures always followed letters or letters figures.

The boxes were stacked on top of one another about six high in each pile in the locked van.

Before moving a schedule was prepared showing the order of packing for each class and indicating whether delivery was to be made at 40th Street or 42nd Street.

At the shipping point the Library had an inspector to see that classes were kept together and at each entrance in the new building an inspector to examine each box and make certain it followed its schedule.

The mover's men carried the boxes from the vans, loaded them on "trolleys" — trucks about two feet square, running on rubber-tired wheels about two inches in diameter — and trundled these loads of five or ten boxes to the elevators. Delivered at the proper stack or room floor, another set of men ran the loads to their destination, where the trucks were unloaded and started on their return with a lot of empty boxes. A third set of men took the books from the boxes and placed them on the shelves. Two library assistants in the stacks and two in the special rooms supervised this unpacking and cancelled with blue pencil the markings on the label. As soon as a section or a group was finished as many of the library staff as could be spared from routine duties were set to work alphabetizing. It was a pleasant disappointment to see how little serious damage was done by this jolting over three miles of city streets.

Some sections went into place with little trouble, others, of course, met difficulties. In general, however, measuring had been done with care, and the shelves properly adjusted, the books settled down into place with satisfactory precision. The number of times serious trouble arose was surprisingly small when it is remembered that the number of pieces handled amounted to more than eleven hundred thousand.

The average number of boxes per load was about eighty, of loads per day eighteen, of boxes per day 1,400, each box holding about twenty volumes. From the Lenox building 220 loads were shipped, from Astor 500.

The cost of moving the Astor books was $10,890.23, the Lenox books $3,873.31, a total of $14,763.54. Taking 1,120,000 as the total number of volumes and pamphlets in the reference department at the time of moving, the cost per volume or piece was 1.3 cents. Moving the Lenox paintings, statuary, shells, etc., cost $1,708.30. The net total was $16,471.84.

This sum represents only the amount paid for outside labor and omits entirely a charge for services of the library staff, which were rendered most willingly and uncomplainingly in the long period of planning before actual moving began, and in the severely trying period of the fifty-six days of moving. It omits also account of various expenses contingent on moving and adjustment to new quarters and conditions, but not absolutely a part of the transfer of books. It omits also account of the expense of moving the office equipment of the circulation department headquarters from the Muhlenberg branch, the Travelling Libraries stock of books and office equipment from the Riverside branch, the Library for the Blind from the St. Agnes branch, the circulation department bindery equipment from the Ottendorfer branch. The expenses for this work, $259.05, were borne by the circulation department.

With the Astor and Lenox buildings free from books our interest in them is almost at an end. The sentimental interest in these buildings and their sites, so full of suggestion for the antiquarian, the historian, any one interested in the intellectual life of the city or the people who have taken part in that phase of the city's life, will not pass away, even with the passing of the structure. The Lenox building was the first to go. The Library gave possession to the new owner in June, 1912. Demolition of the building began on July 8 and was finished by November 1. In the spring of 1915 Mr. Frick moved into the new structure erected for him by Carrère & Hastings as a home for himself and his art treasures. The Hunt memorial is now the only tangible reminder of the former Lenox library building.

The Astor building remained longer in the hands of the Library. After the Central Building was opened the Astor was put on the market for sale. Two generations had passed since Lafayette Place had been chosen as the site for the Astor Library as having "a refined, classic air . . . exempt from the throng and noise and bustle of business streets," and in these years Lafayette Place and its successor, Lafayette Street, lost sadly and irretrievably their literary atmosphere. They saw the book trade move away from the neighborhood, they saw their residences and homes give way to boarding-houses and loft buildings, they saw printing plants and clothing factories cover the region. When the Astor site was offered for sale the section just below 14th Street held no great inducements for buyers. The future character of the neighborhood was too uncertain. Consequently the Library held the Astor building tenantless until after the great war swept down upon us. After the armistice, friends of the 77th Division (New York City draft troops) leased the building for a club-house for the newly-returned division. Less than a year was necessary to show there was no demand for a continuation of the club, and the government took the building over for the sale of army and navy food. On March 16, 1920, it was bought by the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America, for $325,000, and with little outward change was remodelled to meet their needs. Its dingy brown stone front still stands, an eloquent tribute to the mutations of the life of the great city, full of the memories of the men who gave its books high rank among the collections of the country, full of memories of the scholars, statesmen, school boys, who had drawn help and inspiration from its treasures.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of February, 1921, the Library received as gifts a total of 2,367 volumes, 4,417 pamphlets, 534 maps and 97 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

From Col. Walter Scott came 54 bound volumes of "The Scottish-American Journal," 1865-1916. Mr. William Bruhn gave a set (two volumes in solander cases) of "Types et Uniformes, L'Armée Française," illustrated by Édouard Détaillé, texte by Jules Richard. Mr. Louis V. Bell gave 23 bound volumes mainly of the "Sphere," with some volumes of "The Graphic" and "The Illustrated News," covering the period of the war, August 8, 1914, to June 28, 1919. From Mr. Ted Shawn of Los Angeles came the two volumes (No. 121 of 350 printed) of his work "Ruth St. Denis: Pioneer and Prophet, being a history of her cycle of Oriental dances." Mr. Bernard M. Baruch gave the Library two copies of his work, "The Making of the Reparation and Economic Sections of the Treaty," New York, 1920.

From the American Agriculturist, New York, came 343 volumes and 35 pamphlets, mainly bound volumes of American agricultural periodicals; from Mr. William G. DeWitt came a miscellaneous collection of historical and religious publications, American editions, and school text-books of the period 1790-1850, comprising 814 volumes and 59 pamphlets.

The following gifts of prints were received: From Miss Gladys Baldwin, London, an etched portrait of the Rev. Dr. Joseph Barry, by Anne Goldthwaite; from Mr. Bolton Brown, ten woodcuts by J. J. Lankes; from Mr. George Elmer Browne, two of his lithographs; from Miss Rebecca Williams Hawes, a miscellaneous collection of engravings and lithographs, including portraits of French, English and American celebrities, in all 69 prints and two watercolors; from Mr. J. J. Lankes, six of his woodcuts; from Mr. William Oberhardt, three of his lithographs (portraits); from Mr. W. G. Reindel, Euclid, Ohio, six of his etchings; from Mr. Henry B. Shope, two of his etchings; from Mr. Harold R. Shurtleff, an original pencil drawing of The New York Public Library, Fifth Avenue entrance, illuminated (reproduced as frontispiece in Architectural Forum, 1920); and from Mr. Adolph Treidler, two of his lithographs (self-portraits).

Fourteen additions were made through gift to the Library's collection of regimental and divisional histories of the war.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN FEBRUARY, 1921

DURING the month of February, 1921, there were received at the Library 13,690 volumes and 5,325 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 98,170. They consulted 244,612 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 241,081.

*Auerbach, Felix. Wörterbuch der Physik... mit 267 Figuren. Berlin und Leipzig: Walter de Gruyter & Co., 1920. x, 466 p. illus. 12°. PAC (117)

The best compliment to be paid this welcome volume is to hope for its early translation into English. The definitions are ample and the subject matter is up-to-date. Well supplied with cross references.

Bancroft, Wilder D. Applied colloid chemistry. General theory. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc., 1921. viii, 345 p. 8°. (International chemical series.) PLD (118)

Reviews the present knowledge of adsorption, surface tension, Brownian movements, coalescence, preparation and properties of solutions. Later chapters deal with jellies and gelatinous precipitates, emulsions and foams, non-aqueous solutions, fog and smoke, gases and solids in solids, and the thickness of surface films. Author, who is professor of physical chemistry at Cornell University, states that it is his hope to publish other volumes on practical applications. Abundant foot-note citations.

Beaumont, Roberts. Union textile fabrication, with numerous original diagrams, sectional drawings, and photographic reproductions of spun and woven specimens in the text. London: Sir I. Pitman & Sons [pref. 1919]. xxii, 354 p. illus. 8°. VLD (121)

"The treatise is a welcome addition to the literature of the subject and though addressed mainly to technical students, yet the author has given his work such a character that many unconnected with the industry will be intelligently interested in learning by what means the decorative features that lend attractiveness to the products of the loom are created, and in gaining a precise knowledge of the improvements that it is possible to introduce into this class of fabric." — Engineering, Oct. 29, 1920.

Bird, Harold Hughes. The practical design of plate girder bridges. London: Charles Griffin & Co., Ltd., 1920. viii, 180 p. illus. 8°. VEK (121)

"The portions which attracted us most were the excellent sketches of details, such as the waterproofing and protection of bridges, provision for dealing with rain, provision for inspection and painting, and practical matters of this kind. In regard to the actual design, though everything appears to be clear and good there is nothing here which adds at all to our knowledge on the subject, and the most attractive features are rather those dealing with general arrangement and matters of this kind... We think it will be appreciated by students leaving college who are likely to be largely engaged in the design of plate girder bridges, particularly for railways." — Concrete and constructional engineering, Dec., 1920.

*Callendar, H. L. Properties of steam and thermodynamic theory of turbines. New York: Longmans, Green & Co., 1920. xi, 531 p. diagrs. 8°. VFN (121)

"Professor Callendar has made accessible to engineers in general the results of the revolutionary improvements, in the thermodynamic treatment of vapours in general and steam in particular, which were described in papers contributed to the Royal Society some twenty years ago and, as regards most practical purposes, decently buried in the Transactions of that learned corporation. These papers undoubtedly constitute the most illuminating and reliable work on the properties of steam accomplished by any engineer or physicist since the pioneering labours of Regnault, Rankine and Kelvin." — Engineering, Jan. 21, 1921.

Camp, J. M., and C. B. FRANCIS. The making, shaping and treating of steel. Pittsburgh: The Carnegie Steel Co., 1920. 614 p. illus. 2. ed. 12°. VIR (117)

A mine of condensed, clearly-written information, free from technicalities. Tells of the chemistry and physics of steel making, and the materials, fuels, and equipment used. Part 2 treats of steel shaping, rolling-mill construction, and rolling and forging processes. Part 3 discusses constitution, heat treatment, and composition of steel.

"In the reviewer's forty years of active experience in the making of fine steels, there has always been apparent the utter lack of a book so elementary that it could be given to a man not specifically trained in the art... The book under review, primarily prepared to instruct the large sales force of the U. S. Steel Corporation, has largely a local application in its descriptions of plants and equipment. However, it has been broadened and amplified so that it almost covers the requirements noted. The definitions are in plain language and are complete and highly informative." — Engineering news-record, Jan. 20, 1921.

"He [the author] first became known to the scientific world in 1881 by reason of his experimental work on voltaic cells, a subject on which in later years he was a world authority, and he was one of the pioneers of electro-chemistry in the United States." — Obituary notice in Journal of the Institution of Electrical Engineers, Sept., 1920.

Carr, H. Wildon. The general principle of relativity in its philosophical and historical aspect. London: Macmillan & Co., Ltd., 1920. x, 165 p. 12°. PAT (117)

"The metaphysical foundations of this further view of Einstein's doctrine are made apparent in Prof. Carr's book. That is what makes it important for scientific readers, as well as for the general public, who will gather from it what the principle of relativity means. Like all books on this subject, it requires careful reading and unbroken attention, but the time these necessitate, even for this short book, will, I think, be found to have been thoroughly well spent." — Viscount Haldane in Nature, Dec. 2, 1920.

*Caven, R. M. The foundations of chemical theory; an introductory textbook. London: Blackie & Son, Ltd., 1920. viii, 266 p. illus. 8°. PLB (118)

"The author hopes that the general reader, who wishes to know what modern chemistry really means, will find within these pages the information he desires; and that the student to whom chemical science offers an open field of glowing possibilities will find the chapters of this book a not unwelcome guide in his earlier excursions. Briefly, it is suggested that the book may be read by the student during or at the end of his second year's course, for the purpose of knitting together his chemical knowledge in view of the more advanced studies which lie before him later." — Preface.

Codd, M. A. Induction coil design... with 169 illustrations, including 14 plates. New York: Spon & Chamberlain, 1920. 238 p. illus. 8°. VGGB (121)

Chapter 1 (45 p.), discussing theory, precedes chapters on the spark, the construction of the different parts, measuring instruments, mountings and connections, coil testing, insulating materials, and some practical hints on design. Short bibliography at end of book. Illustrations and plates are noteworthy. Thorough and practical.

"It avoids the inclusion of the chemicals and devotes itself to those descriptive terms and chemical nomenclatures which are of frequent, or infrequent, occurrence. The definitions are clear and concise and are presented in an understandable manner... As a book of reliable reference it is unequalled by any other publication." — Textile colorist, Feb., 1921.

Nearly one half of this volume treats of instruments and their manipulation. Chapter 3 discusses the identification of structure; and chapter 4 covers practical instruction in field operation. Glossary of 27 pages.

"The book makes no attempt to give a popular presentation of field procedure. It is written for those who have at least moderate familiarity with the fundamental principles of geology, surveying, and mathematics, including at least trigonometry." — Preface.

Crehore, Albert C. The atom. New York: D. Van Nostrand Co., 1920. xvi, 161 p. 12°. PAW (117)

Author states that the Einstein theory deals with a single phase of a broader comprehensive theory and makes no attempt to assign a cause for gravitational force. It is into the latter mystery that Mr. Crehore delves. It is not easy reading, although the mathematics are not beyond the college undergraduate.

Devillers, René. The dynamics of the aeroplane... Translated by Wm. John Walker. New York: Spon & Chamberlain, 1920. viii, 302 p. diags. 8°. VDY (121)

Discusses the several kinds of flight, the propeller, wind influence, radius of action, stability, and effect of altitude on engine performance. Formulae have been reduced to the nomographic form and heavy mathematics are avoided.

"The chapter on stability is not good, and will seem very inadequate to readers familiar with the English treatment of the subject... The technical man and the student will certainly find the book interesting, and the reading of it is rendered the more easy by the translator's noble effort in converting from metric to English units throughout." — Aeronautics, Jan. 6, 1921.

Freund, Ida. The experimental basis of chemistry. Suggestions for a series of experiments illustrative of the fundamental principles of chemistry... Edited by A. Hutchinson and M. Beatrice Thomas. Cambridge [England]: University Press, 1920. xvi, 408 p. illus. 8°. PKW (118)

For 25 years Miss Freund was a teacher in Newnham College, Cambridge. In 1904 she published an important work The study of chemical composition. The present volume, based upon a first-year course supplemented by short lectures, experiments, and discussions, is marked by a simple, delightful style and an appeal for accuracy in thinking and manipulation.

"Miss Freund had a dread of thoughtless experimenting and slipshod thinking. She felt strongly that much that passes for training in science has little relation to scientific method and is of small educational value... By directing special attention to the sources of error inherent in the methods employed, by distinguishing carefully between what was taken for granted and what was really proved, and by getting her students to compare the accuracy attained... with that of the most trustworthy work on the subject, she was able to arouse the critical faculty..." — Preface.

Fyfe, Charles F. Steamship coefficients, speeds and powers... New York: Spon & Chamberlain, 1920. xii, 399 p., 68 pl. 2 ed. 12°. VXHD (121)

"The work is presented in nine chapters, dealing with practically every phase of the determination of the most suitable form of hull for given dimensions and speed, the whole being illustrated by a vast number of tables of numerical values and curves giving experimental results. It should form an invaluable adjunct to the library of the ship draughtsman, giving him in a condensed form the results of a large number of the most recent papers and articles." — Shipbuilding and shipping record, June 3, 1920.

Matthews, J. Merritt. Application of dyestuffs to textiles, paper, leather and other materials. New York: John Wiley & Sons, Inc., 1920. xvi, 768 p. illus. 8°.

This extension of the author's Laboratory manual of dyeing and textile chemistry makes its appeal not only to the student but to all concerned in the application of dyestuffs. In addition to the scope indicated by the title, there are chapters on dyestuff testing, on the chemical reactions of dyestuffs, and the analysis of textile fibres. Bibliography of 18 pages.

"This new work covers much ground, and may be looked upon as a worthy supplement to the Manual of dyeing, of Knecht, Rawson and Lowenthal... The method of presentation shows the author to be a teacher of great experience, as well as an experienced practitioner in the fields of applied chemistry. These combined characteristics result in a simplicity of style together with a thoroughness of attention to detail." — Dyer and calico printer, Dec. 15, 1920.

"The domain and the aims of Art have for many centuries extended far beyond the mere expression of Formal Beauty...down into the regions of the Useful. They have blended and united in effort and purpose with the wide and high spheres and objects of Truth and Goodness... Still the fundamental truth of Art is that it has arisen out of man's need for harmony and beauty... The artist may be a skilful craftsman, a most acute observer...but he is therefore not yet an artist... It is this primary sense of beauty...that makes him an artist."—Preface.

The details of the work and operations of the Library during the past year are shown, as usual, in the accompanying reports of the Treasurer and Director.

In the Reference Department, in the Central Building, 976,164 readers consulted 2,243,131 books — an increase, as compared with 1919, of about nine per cent in readers and a decrease of about one-twentieth of one per cent in the number of volumes consulted. These statistics, however, relate only to the use of volumes for which regular call slips were filed, as no count is kept of the many thousands of volumes which readers use from the open shelves in the various rooms, especially the Main Reading Room. The number of visitors to the Central Building during the year was 2,696,609, an increase of about nine per cent as compared with the previous year. The daily average of visitors was 7,388.

In the Circulation Department, the number of books issued for home use was 9,658,977 — a decrease of 233,671 volumes, or about two per cent, as compared with the previous year. Toward the end of the year, however, there were substantial increases in the circulation of volumes, as compared with the corresponding period of the preceding year. One of the causes of decreased circulation is the lack of funds with which to buy new books and replace old ones. In spite of the purchases for the Circulation Department in the year 1920, the book stocks of that Department decreased by 20,482 volumes.

The book stocks of the Branch Libraries have become depleted and badly worn and the cost of books has increased enormously in the last few years; and the appropriations in the City Budget for the purchase of books have not been sufficient to enable the Circulation Department to keep pace with the demands upon it.

In their last annual report the Trustees called attention to the absolute necessity of substantial additions to the endowment funds of the Library from the income of which the Reference Department is supported.

Toward the end of the year now under review they found themselves confronted with a very serious situation. Notwithstanding recent increases in the payroll, it was absolutely necessary, owing to the high cost of living, to make further increases in order to retain the Staff with its present efficient service. A thorough and careful examination of the proposed budget for 1921 expenditures for the Reference Department resulted in the conclusion that it could not be reduced below the sum of about $984,000, while the estimated income of the Reference Department from all sources was approximately $733,000, thus showing a deficit of about $251,000. The increase in estimated expenditures over the preceding year 1919 was almost entirely in the item of salaries. As it is impossible to reduce the operating expense of a great public library without involving a vital impairment of efficiency and service, the Trustees determined to adopt the proposed budget, notwithstanding the serious deficit which it would entail. They did this in the hope that some means might be found which would enable the Library to meet, if not the whole, still a considerable part of this deficit.

In this hope they have not been disappointed. In January, 1921, the Library was informed that Mrs. Stephen V. Harkness had for some time had it in mind to do something as an expression of her interest in the work of the Library, and having heard of the deficit with which it faced the year 1921, she deemed the time opportune for carrying out her purpose, and, therefore, made a gift to the Library of $1,000,000, to constitute a part of its endowment funds.

This generous gift was indeed made at a most opportune time, and it brought to the Trustees the greatest encouragement. Shortly afterwards, certain members of the Board of Trustees contributed sums amounting in the aggregate to $115,000, to be applied in reduction of the deficit of 1921. All of these contributions were voluntary and spontaneous, none of them having been solicited, and the amount thus received, together with the income of the fund contributed by Mrs. Harkness, will make up more than two-thirds of the estimated deficit for the year.

It is the earnest hope of the Trustees that further additions to the Library's endowment funds will be received.

During the year 1920 there were received as gifts 72,948 volumes, 60,950 pamphlets, 1,002 maps, and 2,151 prints.

Some of the more important of these gifts were the following:

The Mercantile Library Association, of New York, gave to The New York Public Library all bound copies of periodicals in their collection, amounting to 21,869 volumes, and also 23,000 volumes of miscellaneous works. This gift is of great value for its aid in filling gaps in the Library's sets of periodicals as well as for replacement and exchange purposes.

Mr. John Powell Lenox, of Oak Park, Illinois, presented to the Library his "Christ in Art Collection," comprising fifteen large leather-bound albums of reproductions of paintings and sculpture.

Hon. George Peabody Wetmore contributed $500 towards the cost of the William Smith Papers, purchased as a supplement to the collection already in the possession of the Library.

Mr. William Sloane gave $2,500 for the purchase of "A Sermon preached at Plimouth in New England, Dec. 9, 1621 (by Robert Cushman)," printed in London in 1622.

Mr. Edward W. Sheldon gave $1,000 for the purchase of "Indian Treaty Proceedings," printed in New York in 1757.

Mr. William Hamlin Childs and Mr. Lewis E. Pierson, of the Merchants' Association, of New York, presented to the Library a complete file of "La Libre Belgique," published during the war in 171 numbers.

Mr. Charles Cohen contributed $100, and Messrs. Moses H. Lipshutz, A. T. Thomas, and Al. Lamport & Brothers $50 each, for the purchase of cabinets for the Jewish Division; and from Mr. Nathan Lamport, for the Lamport family, came a further contribution of $114.50 for the purchase of furniture for the same Division.

Under the will of Robinson Locke, who died in Toledo, Ohio, on April 20, 1920, his extensive collection of clippings relating to the drama and the stage was bequeathed to the Library. This collection, which has not yet come into the possession of the Library, contains over 400 bound volumes of clippings and about 3,000 folders with loose clippings ready to be made up into volumes.

Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, who had been for many years a friend and benefactor of the Library, died on September 25, 1920. Mr. Schiff's helpful interest in the Aguilar and The New York Free Circulating Libraries was continued after their consolidation with The New York Public Library. In 1898, he established a fund for the purchase of Semitic literature for the Reference Department of the Library; and later replenished this fund as the need arose. Under his will $25,000 is bequeathed, the income of which is to be used for the "purposes of the Jewish and Semitic Department" of the Library.

Mr. Samuel Putnam Avery died at his home in Hartford, Conn., on September 25, 1920. In his benefactions to the Library Mr. Avery followed intelligently and discriminatingly in the footsteps of his father, Samuel P. Avery the elder, who gave to the Library, in 1899, his unrivalled collection of Nineteenth Century Prints — a gift which made possible the establishment of a Prints Division in the Library. Mr. Avery made frequent gifts of prints to fill lacunae in the Samuel P. Avery Collection; and in 1910 he gave the sum of $5,000 as a fund for the purchase of prints to be added to this collection founded by his father.

Since the balance in the Carnegie Gift Fund remaining available for the construction of branch library buildings was inadequate, in view of the present excessive cost of building, it was considered inadvisable to proceed during the past year with the construction of the proposed Fordham Branch Library building.

Mr. Henry Walters was elected to the Board of Trustees on the 11th of February, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Carnegie in 1919.

Mr. George F. Baker, Jr., was elected to the Board on the 12th of May, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Taft in 1919.

The Trustees again desire to express their appreciation of the spirit of loyalty and cordial coöperation which has animated the members of the Staff during the year.

LEWIS CASS LEDYARD,

President.

LEGACIES TO THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

No precise words are necessary to a valid legacy to the Corporation. The following clause, however, may be suggested:

“I give The New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations, the sum of.....dollars.”

If land, or any specific personal property, such as bonds, stocks, books, prints, etc., is given, a brief description of the property should be inserted instead of the words “the sum of.....dollars.”

REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR

FOR THE YEAR ENDING DECEMBER 31, 1920

LEWIS CASS LEDYARD, ESQ.,

President of The New York Public Library.

SIR:

Readers to the number of 976,164 are recorded as using books in the Reference Department (Central Building) during 1920. They were supplied with 2,243,131 volumes. This is a gain of 83,866 readers, and a loss of 1,321 in the number of volumes used, compared with the year 1919. Every year the actual use of books is much larger than the records show, since there are thousands of books which may be consulted without any application, written or verbal. The total number of visitors to the Building was 2,696,609. (In 1919 there were 2,478,633.)

In the Circulation Department (the Branch Libraries, Extension Division, and Library for the Blind) the number of volumes issued for use at home was 9,658,977. This is fewer than the number issued in 1919 by 233,671. An important contributing cause for this loss was the insufficient fund to buy new books and replace old ones. The book-stock of the Circulation Department has decreased by 20,482 volumes.

At the end of the year there were in the Reference Department 1,471,724 books and pamphlets. There were 1,157,414 books in the Circulation Department. The total number of books and pamphlets in both departments of the Library was therefore 2,629,138.

The number of employees on December 31, 1920, was 1,215. Of these, 508 were in the Reference Department, 11 in the Municipal Reference Library, and 696 in the Circulation Department.¹

REFERENCE DEPARTMENT

The Library service is still suffering from the unsettled economic conditions resulting from the war. At the beginning of the year it was still difficult to secure and retain young men and boys for pages and messengers. The Library could not compete with the attractions and rewards of the commercial and industrial world, and the shifts and changes in the Staff were frequent. The result was delayed delivery of books to readers, and increased frequency of errors. This condition was remedied, in part, as the year drew to a close, and it was possible to keep pages and messengers long enough for them to become acquainted with the collections, and to feel the pride in rapid and accurate service that animated the other members of the Staff.

At about the time this change became evident, a large increase in the number of readers occurred, — fully twenty per cent. for the latter months of the year, compared with the corresponding months of 1919. The Staff had for years been reduced to the absolute minimum, and this sudden increase in demand, called for the maximum exertion, and left the force with little reserve power. Consequently, the delivery service is still below the Library's standard.

The foregoing statement applies to the service in the Main Reading Room. For the whole Department the figures show an increase of about nine per cent. in the number of readers, and a loss of about one twentieth of one per cent. in the number of volumes used. The loss is more apparent than real, and is due in large measure to the rearrangement of the Divisions of Economics and of Science and Technology. This brought to the Economics reading room a large number of periodicals formerly shelved in the Current Periodicals Room; the readers followed their periodicals. In the Periodicals Room these readers filed slips for the magazines, and were duly recorded in the count of readers and of volumes used. In the Economics Division they have been freed from the necessity of filing slips, but it is estimated that if recorded as formerly, they would have accounted for some 30,000 volumes.

In the rearranged Science and Technology Division it has not been possible, without undue effort, to keep a separate record of the volumes of patents used. An estimate would put their number at about 154,000 volumes, which under the old arrangement would have been added to the record of use. If the 184,000 volumes thus accounted for had been added to the number actually counted, the total would have shown an increase in the number of volumes used very nearly the same as the increase in the number of readers.

Another handicap has been inability to "read the shelves." Wartime economies have compelled the reduction of the force engaged in shelf reading and inventory work to such a degree that little more can be done than add to the existing shelf list the cards that represent new additions. Service to readers will be inadequate and unsatisfactory until shelf lists for the entire collection are completed, and the force is able, at least once a year, to compare the books as they stand on the shelves with the shelf list records.

A third and serious difficulty affecting the service has been the increasing frequency with which the reading rooms of the Library have come to be used by persons who have no legitimate reason for coming to them. Students from the dental, medical and other professional schools in the city have found the building a convenient place to work up their lecture notes and lessons, to study their text books and prepare their work. This, to be sure, is not a legitimate use of library facilities, but so long as it does not interfere with the regular reader, the Library has not felt called upon to protest. When, however, a man comes to read a book belonging to the Library, and finds the number of these students so great that he cannot get a seat, the abuse merits serious consideration. The trouble is increased by the fact that most of the professional schools in the city close their reading rooms Saturday afternoons and all day on Sundays. Under ordinary circumstances Saturday and Sunday are the busiest days for the Library, and when to its legitimate use is added this abuse by outside students, the situation becomes intolerable. On many Saturday and Sunday afternoons during the winter months, there have been hundreds more readers than seats in the Main Reading Room for hours at a time.

The war has enforced severe economy in book-binding, by reason of the increase in wages and the increased prices of materials. As a result it has been possible to bind little more than 20,000 volumes a year, whereas the normal demands of the Reference Department require fully 75,000 volumes. The consequences are most unfortunate. Only the volumes for which the need is most urgent can be bound. The remaining 50,000 are either withheld from use entirely, or are used in discreditable condition. This gives the reader a bad impression; for it is undesirable to have him use or see books that are not well bound; and it is bad for the volume, as it rapidly hastens its ultimate destruction. No solution appears in sight until there is money enough to pay for the increase in the bindery staff, and for the increased amount of bindery materials that will be needed to put the shelves in proper shape. Unfortunately the conditions to be corrected grow worse with each day's delay.

It is but a comparatively short time until all the newspapers of the day, all the directories, and many of the books and magazines will have returned to the wood pulp from which the paper stock is made. The World newspaper of this city has continued to pay to have the file kept here treated with Japanese tissue paper, which will probably assure the paper almost indefinite life. The other papers have not cared to pay for this treatment and it has been impossible to do more than bind them in ordinary fashion and allow them to be used as long as the paper and thread hold together. The directories are in as deplorable condition as the newspapers. There is no special appropriation for binding and treating this much-used group of books, and, under present circumstances, they, also, will in a few years crumble to powder and dust. It is unfortunate that the lawyers, insurance men, bankers, and other business men who make such extensive use of the directories, fail to see the necessity of preserving them, and of providing a fund for this purpose before it is too late. It is a little different with books and magazines, for those with a message of real importance will undoubtedly be reprinted, sooner or later, while the world can probably see the others disappear with no great sorrow.

From time to time throughout the year tests have been made to learn the length of time that elapsed between the filing of a call slip by a reader and delivery of the book. In general, tests show that 20 to 30 per cent. of the volumes are ready for the reader under five minutes after he has filed his slip, 60 to 70 per cent. under ten minutes, 90 per cent. under 15 minutes and 8 to 10 per cent. take more than 15 minutes. The general average is 8 to 10 minutes. The longer periods are due to several things: readers fail sometimes to give correct or adequate information on the slips they file, books are sometimes misplaced on the shelves, and not infrequently pages and messengers do not use all the zeal and intelligence one could wish. The two latter faults are constantly before the Library for correction, for the first it has no remedy. Of course, books shelved in the various reading rooms take longer to get to the Main Reading Room than those shelved near the centre of the stacks, but, as a rule, such books are sent to the Main Reading Room only when it is impossible for the reader to go to the special room.

The various stages in the progress of call slip and book have been noted. In general it seems to take about two minutes for the slip to reach the proper stack floor after the reader has handed it in at the desk in the Public Catalogue Room. Two to three minutes more are required for the page to take the slip and get the book. The next four to eight minutes are spent in the journey of the book from the stack floor to the Main Reading Room and the delivery desk, which indicates that if much improvement is to be expected, better and swifter mechanical conveyance must be made available. The City has authorized a new elevator for this service, but unfortunately the funds allowed were based on pre-war conditions and are now inadequate. Unless the allowance is increased this much-needed help towards better service cannot be installed.

ART AND PRINTS DIVISION

The stage, it appears, is furnishing this Division more readers than the architectural profession. In the latter, the Spanish vogue is "beginning to supersede the Italian," says one assistant. Another finds that "interest in peasant art has increased" and that "batik is popular." Information about war memorials has been in demand. The Library's printed list of references was probably of even more use than the pictures of past performances, since various new conceptions of memorials had arisen. Events much in the public eye create demands. There was the Pilgrim Centenary, and that of Jenny Lind. Large firms approaching their centennial or other celebration, wanted pictures of localities with which they had been identified. One woman designer found our New York City views a mine of material for a large banking house. Pictorial advertising is served, for instance, by borders used in French book decoration of the 18th century. The textile industry gets ideas for new lines in goods, — from Mussulman ceramics, for instance. Similarly, a designer of toys finds material in all sorts of books (Cruikshank's "Punch and Judy" or decorative art periodicals). A reported "slight increase of interest on the part of jewelers and silversmiths" is a hopeful sign, and the statement comes also that some of the silversmiths show interest in early American craftsmanship. In all these branches of applied and decorative art, designers must be supplied, and the Library, again, helps the schools which are training them.

Similarly, the Print Room serves both the connoisseur and the beginner, entering on appreciation of that field known by the collective title of "prints." The exhibitions of prints, varied in character and scope, and changed sufficiently often, serve both classes. They offer interesting reviews to the one, and educational possibilities to the other. In the latter instance, the Library is filling a distinct want, and, to judge by the number of visitors who find something in the exhibitions that causes them to stay for some time, is filling it to good effect. What the Print Room needs badly is active interest on the part of those who are able to aid it in procuring rare and expensive prints. By the donations that have already been made a standard has been set, and a point reached in the formation of a valuable collection, that makes it a public duty to carry on the work.

AMERICAN HISTORY DIVISION

Work here has gone on with little to break the ordinary routine. Readers have increased in numbers as in other rooms and divisions. Numerous accessions of interest are set down in detail below, and, it may be hoped, have helped to make the resources of the Library more useful to the world of scholars. The kinds of problems readers bring are indicated by the selections mentioned below.

Special researches have been pursued in the Reserve Rooms for materials relating to early Portuguese voyages in America; early voyages with reference to nature; the history of early world globes; the teaching of French literature in early American life; the lives of Charles Brockden Brown and Edgar Allan Poe; early American economics; industrial illustrations; politics in the United States after the American Revolution; fishes in early literature; Biblical bibliography; fine printing; specimens of early French typography; early New York illustrations in books; editions of early American fiction, and of early American poetry; dramatic advertisements in early American newspapers; earliest Maryland imprints; New Hampshire imprints; early New York publications; western Americana; books and tracts of the discovery period of America; editions of De Bry's Voyages; and early American horse breeding and horse racing. A long line of applicants came to see the first and third editions of Mrs. Eddy's "Science and Health." The "Iconography of Manhattan Island," by I. N. P. Stokes was in almost constant use.

In the American History Room although a presidential campaign marked the year, there was little demand for party handbooks or other campaign literature. There was an increasing demand for American history textbooks. Of special note have been the requests for pictures for use in illustrating books to be published and for lantern slides for lectures. The eighteen books most often called for in Room 300 were works on the system of the government of the United States and on our political problems, and textbooks treating of the general history of the United States. The following subjects have been frequently represented in the books called for: The American constitution; the works of or relating to three presidents — Washington, Lincoln, and Roosevelt; early American history and travel; Hispanic-American history and travel; American colonial and State archives; history of the Pilgrims; works of De Witt Clinton; American Indian names; slavery controversy and the negro question; the Japanese question; westward expansion and communication; and, evidently by tourists, books on Florida and California. A number of the authors and staff assistants connected with the series of "Chronicles of America" have been at work in Room 300 for many months. Many members of the staff which is engaged upon a revision of "Larned's History for Ready Reference" have been at work in the room. Designers have used, for costume, such books as Lord Kingsborough's "Mexican Antiquities," Baessler's "Ancient Peruvian Art," McKenney and Hall's "Indian Tribes of North America," Maximilian Wied — Neuwied's "Travels in the Interior of North America," as well as volumes on the American Indians by Catlin, by Schoolcraft, and by the United States Bureau of American Ethnology. Some of the designs and colors were used by shirtwaist manufacturers. For moving picture plays, librettos and scenarios, as well as for pageants, books were used on the pueblos of Arizona and New Mexico, on Alaska, on Massachusetts and the coast about Plymouth and the region of Cape Cod, on the West and the South, and on the Indians in general.

In the Map Room maps and atlases have been consulted for a multitude of purposes. This variety is best defined by a few illustrations. New boundaries were looked up, to obtain information for a new geography; detailed war maps of France were examined for facts to be used in a book on the methods of transportation and communication used by the Germans behind the battle fronts; maps were consulted for the operations of the First Division, A. E. F., the location of the town of Jaulny in the Department of Muerthe and Moselle, France, was looked up in order to locate a grave of a United States soldier; maps of the North Atlantic region were used to prepare for a trip by aeroplane from St. Johns in Newfoundland to Greenland, and thence across to Europe; charts of Hudson Bay were examined for the location of a spot where a vessel in which the investigator was sailing was wrecked about a year ago; soundings in the St. Lawrence River at Quebec were secured for the purpose of laying telephone wire; in a property owner's suit old maps were found to yield the information desired with respect to locating two roads that were in use during 1775-1800 but are now closed; for military intelligence, maps of western New York were investigated, to determine important strategic points; for use in writing a history of St. Augustine, Florida, old maps were consulted; for a story to be used in a magazine for youth, maps of Chicago were looked over, in order to prove that a fire-engine could go in a straight line from Lomax Place to Cushman Place; properly to place a sun-dial, the latitude and longitude of Watertown, South Dakota were determined; for publication uses, old maps of Texas were examined; a former ambassador to Mexico consulted maps of that country; in order to ship a cargo to the town of Hongay in French Indo-China, a Chicago firm verified the existence and location of the place; a manufacturer of corsets, who had received an order from the Port of Narakal, on the southwest coast of India, sought verification of the existence of the place; the facsimiles of ancient maps or charts yielded decorations of old ships for use in decorating the new Cunard Line Building; and old maps were also used to get from them material for a large oil painting to be placed in a residence under construction at Summit, N. J.

More than 250 titles were added to the Reserve collection either by purchase or gift, of which the following are worthy of special mention:

New York.

Proceedings and treaty with the Shawanese, Nanticokes, and Mohikander Indians, living at Otsiningo, on the west branches of the Susquehanna River. Negotiated at Fort-Johnson, in the county of Albany, in the province of New-York; by the Honourable Sir William Johnson. . . . New-York: Printed and sold by J. Parker and W. Weyman, 1757.

The De Puy copy, one of five copies of record. Presented by Edward W. Sheldon, Esq.

Belgium.

La Libre Belgique; bulletin de propagande patriotique. Nos. 1-171 (Feb., 1915, to Nov. 12, 1918). Bruxelles, 1915-1918. 3,112 p.

This famous paper published surreptitiously by Belgians during the German occupation of their country was given to The New York Public Library by William Hamlin Childs and Lewis E. Pierson. The file is complete.

Horn Book.

A child's first book, consisting of a printed leaf pasted on an oaken board, size $4 \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

Probably American work of the second half of 18th century. Presented by Stewart and Shearer. Original horn books are very rare. One similar to this issue is described by Tuer in his work on "Horn Books."

The following were obtained by purchase or exchange:

Carion, Johann.

The thre bokes of Cronicles. . . . To thys present yeare of 1550. Gathered by John Funcke of Nurenborough. [Colophon:] Imprynted at London for Gwalter Lynne. . . . M. D. L.

It was translated by Gwalter Lynne and dedicated to Henry VI. On folio CC, under the year 1533, there is a reference to the Spanish conquests in America, and under the year 1440, there is a reference, on folio clxxv, to the invention of printing.

Crespel, M.

Travels in North America. London, 1797.

The author went to America in 1724 and travelled through Canada from Quebec to Montreal; he visited Niagara, Detroit, Lake Champlain, etc., and has a good deal to say about the Indians.

Fregosa, Battista.

De dictis fatisqz. memorabilibus collectanea a Camillo Gilino latina facta. [Paris: Galliot du Pré, 1518.]

The first edition was printed in 1509. On folio cclx, verso, there are references to Columbus and to Gutenberg.

Giustiniani, Pancrazio.

Paradoxa. [Colophon:] Impressum Venetiis per Ioannem Tacuinum de Tridino. . . M.D.XXX.

A very rare work, in which the author states his disbelief with respect to statements of the Spanish navigators about the New World. This singular opinion has been overlooked, hitherto, by bibliographers and students of Americana.

Illinois and Ouabache Land Companies.

An account of the proceedings. . . in pursuance of their purchases. . . July 5th, 1773, and 18th October, 1775. Philadelphia: William Young, 1796.

[Bound with it:] Memorial of the Illinois and Wabash Land Company. 13th January, 1797. Philadelphia: Printed by Richard Folwell [1797]. By Rev. William Smith. A rare and important collection for historical use.

Journal de l'affaire du Canada passée le 8 Juillet 1758 entre les troupes du roi, commandées par M. le Marquis de Montcalm, & celles d'Angleterre. A Rouen, 23 September, 1758. 4 p.

This is an excessively rare news extra, issued upon the receipt of word in France concerning the disastrous defeat of the English and provincial troops under General Abercromby by Montcalm at Fort Carillon, afterwards called Fort Ticonderoga.

[Maillard, Antoine Simon.]

An account of the customs and manners of the Micmakis and Maricheets savage nations, now dependent on the government of Cape-Breton. To which are annexed, several pieces, relative to the savages, to Nova Scotia, and to North-America in general. London, 1758.

A very important work on the Micmacs and Malecites of Maine and northeastern Canada by the missionary to these Indians.

Marsh, James B.

Four years in the Rockies; or, The adventures of Isaac P. Rose. . . giving his experience as a hunter and trapper. New Castle, 1884.

A rare volume.

Morden, Robert.

Geography rectified. London, 1693. 3. ed., enl.

With maps relating to America.

Papers, relative to an application to Congress, for an exclusive right of searching for and working mines, in the North-West and South-West Territory. [Philadelphia? 1797?]

This rare pamphlet relates to early mining grants in the United States. The petitioners were Nicholas J. Roosevelt and J. Marks, and their associates, and the petitions were before the Congress for several years.

Preparatoirlyk Plan, van een Tractaat van commercie. [n. p., 1780.]

Concerning a plan for a commercial treaty between the seven United Provinces of Holland and the thirteen United States of North America.

Recorde, Robert.

The castle of knowledge. [Colophon:] Imprinted at London by Reginalde Wolfe. . . 1556.

Dedicated to Edward VI and Queen Mary. Contains references to America on p. 85, 92-95, 213, and is one of the earliest English books containing these.

Rhodes, John.

The surprising adventures of John Rhodes. . . Containing an account of his captivity. New York: Printed for R. Cotton, by G. Forman [sic], 1798.

A curious narrative, whose veracity has been questioned.

Ridley, Mark.

A short treatise of magneticall bodies and motions. London: Printed by Nicholas Okes, 1613.

Illustrated, some plates by R. Elstracke. One plate shows the spheres with the names "Noua albiou," "Virginia," etc. Virtually unknown to American bibliographers.

Trigault, Nicolas.

Due lettere annue della Cina del 1610. e dell 1611. Roma, 1615.

One of the rare Jesuit relations of China. Two other volumes in this class were also added to the Library, namely: Annuae litterae Societatis Jesu. Roma, 1583, 1589.

[Worth, Gorham A.]

Recollections of Cincinnati, from a residence of five years, 1817 to 1821. Albany: C. Van Benthuysen, 1851.

Rare; perhaps only one other copy known to be extant.

Valuable additions were made of American laws, legislative journals, and other official publications — primary source materials for the historian, among them the following:

New Hampshire.

A declaration of rights, and plan of government for the State of N. H. Exeter, 1779. Broadside.

New Hampshire. House.

Journal, October 20, 1784; February 1, 1786.

Massachusetts.

Journal of the House of Representatives. Vol. I. [Boston:] The Massachusetts Historical Society, 1919.

Covers years 1715-1717.

Rhode Island.

Acts and resolves, of the General Assembly, for sessions beginning: last Monday in February, 1784; first Wednesday in May, 1784; fourth Monday in June, 1784; fourth Monday in August, 1784; last Monday in October, 1784; last Monday of February, 1785; first Monday in May, 1785; fourth Monday in June, 1785; fourth Monday in August, 1785; last Monday in October, 1785.

Ten libraries in the United States, among them The New York Public Library, are engaged in an endeavor under the supervision of Dr. Worthington C. Ford and the Massachusetts Historical Society, to secure photostat reproductions of the rarest early Americana in public or private libraries in this country or abroad. Some thirty of these reproductions have been received.

We have secured also many photostat reproductions of early American newspapers, namely: Boston News Letter; Bradford's New-York Gazette, and North Carolina papers; also photostats of some unique early Vermont laws, and about 100 photostats of unusual items, the originals of which are owned by the Library Company of Philadelphia.

During the year, as a result of the assorting of the Gansevoort-Lansing collection, many early original newspapers and broadsides were added.

MANUSCRIPT DIVISION

During the year there were 482 readers, who consulted 817 volumes, 181 boxes, and 239 single pieces of manuscripts. The researches pursued included materials for biographies of Charles Brockden Brown, Lorenzo da Ponte, Henry Livingston, James K. Paulding, Edgar Allan Poe, General Artemus Ward, and Sir John Wentworth; and for histories of Oyster Bay, N. Y.; of the Hudson River Valley; of the Holland Land Company; of the Sons of Liberty of New York; of land titles of the old town of Harlem (now included in New York City), as well as of the schools and libraries which were established from the funds derived from the sale of the old Harlem Commons, and of Macombs Dam in the Harlem River. Investigation was also made with respect to negro slavery in the United States; the American Anti-Slavery Society; the immigration of Bohemians and other Slavic peoples to America in the seventeenth century; the history of Peru and Chile; the history of the South Sea Islands, and illustrative materials for a history of the world were secured. Specimens of handwriting of famous personages were furnished by photostat for advertising purposes; portraits and autographs of the members of the Federal Convention who signed the Constitution of the United States were reproduced by photostat, as were also numerous other documents, portraits, views, etc., principally from the volumes of the Emmet collection. Considerable use was made of the volumes of Transcripts relating to the American Loyalists. Some illuminated mediæval manuscripts were studied by specialists from the United States, England, and France. Often the manuscripts have been consulted by dealers or collectors for the verification of their own autographic specimens.

The general work of the Division has consisted of assorting, cataloguing, classifying, and shelving accessions, as well as of recataloguing and assorting many collections of manuscripts which have been in the Library for some years.

Some account of donors and their gifts is herewith appended:

From Mrs. Howard Townsend, acting for herself and Mrs. R. P. Carroll, were received a collection of Papers of James A. Hamilton and Alexander Hamilton, Jr., consisting of 12 parchment indenture deeds, 1783-1821, relating to land chiefly in New York City; 4 parchment documents, 1806-1874, one being the diploma of membership of Alexander Hamilton, Jr., in the New York

State Society of the Cincinnati, signed by Hamilton Fish, President, 4 July 1874; 51 indenture deeds and other documents concerning transfers of real estate, 1740–1849, among them the instrument of bargain and sale and the deed for property on Crown St., New York, from Rip Van Dam to Eghbert B. Eghberse, dated Sept. 10 and 11, 1740. Nearly all the documents refer to lands in New York City — a few refer to lands located elsewhere; 2 maps, one a manuscript map of part of James De Lancey's grounds, situate north from Grand St. along the East River, and the other a printed map of part of the Rose Hill Farm of Nicholas Cruger in New York, sold Dec. 13, 1834; 126 letters and documents in the Polari Case, 1831–1832, which was a case of theft of jewels from the Princess of Orange. James A. Hamilton was United States district attorney in New York at the time and the papers are from his files. They include letters from the Chevalier Huygens, Minister of the Netherlands at Washington, Edward Livingston, Secretary of State, Louis McLane, and others; copies of Hamilton's letters, and copies of documents in the case. The case is famous and important for the combination of legal and diplomatic questions which are involved in it; 4 miscellaneous letters and documents, 1808–1852.

Mrs. H. B. Machin presented the report signed by J. W. Adams, dated August 1, 1878, and addressed to John C. Campbell, chief engineer of the Croton Aqueduct, New York City. The report is a reply to the request "to examine the present system of distribution of the Croton water in reference to changing the plan, by dividing the city into separate districts, to be supplied by independent mains; and especially in reference to supplying the district south of Houston Street with a view to restoring the pressure in the lower wards, to what it was when the Croton water was first introduced. . . ." 12 leaves, f°.

Through Mr. John Cox, jr., of New York, there was presented a collection of about seventy papers relating to the activities of various railroads of New York running between the Hudson river and Buffalo which were later consolidated to form the New York Central Railroad. The papers include: Mohawk and Hudson Railroad — Weekly reports for the year 1836, giving the amount of fares received each day for passengers and freight, with comparative figures for the years 1834 and 1835. These reports are addressed to J. V. L. Pruyn from P. L. Parsons. The statement for December 15–21, 1836, includes an A. L. S. from Parsons relating to mail contracts and carrying of mail by the railroad; Auburn and Rochester Railroad — Contract with Thomas D. Burrall to make 40 tons of cast iron knees, Nov. 3, 1840. Contract with John P. Veeder and others to build the superstructure of the railroad "from its present termination to the eastline of the country of Ontario," Dec. 14, 1840; Schenectady and Troy Railroad — Contract with Rogers, Ketchum & Grosvenor to build a locomotive and tender, March 12, 1842. Contract with Eaton and Gilbert to build 7 passenger coaches and 2 coaches with ladies' saloons, April 6, 1842; Delegates from railroads between Hudson river and Buffalo — Report to the New York legislature on the proposed arrangement for running two trains daily between Buffalo and the Hudson river and general improvement of the service.

Mrs. Charles S. Fairchild, of Cazenovia, N. Y., gave a report of Chauncey Vibbard, General Superintendent of the New York Central Railroad, dated at Albany, N. Y., August 18, 1856, addressed to Erastus Corning, President of that company, concerning fire wood purchased in 1853-54 for use of engines between Schenectady and Syracuse, with copies of affidavits regarding controversies over quantity and quality of the wood, 17 leaves, f^o. Mrs. Fairchild also presented two letterpress copies of holograph letters from Sidney T. Fairchild, one dated Albany, N. Y., April 17, 1875, is addressed to John Welsh and relates to the duties of the State of New York in regard to the International Exhibition, the other dated Cazenovia, N. Y., September 29, 1879, is addressed to Lester B. Faulkner, and gives the names of the Madison committee of the Democratic party.

Mr. H. E. Williams, of Calumet, Mich., presented, through Mrs. E. R. Fitz-Maurice, of New York City, a collection of eleven volumes of mercantile account books of Nathan Williams, merchant of Pompey and Manlius, N. Y. The collection includes: Day Books, 1806-1813; 1817-1821; 1824-1832; 1836-1837. Ledgers, 1806-1809; 1812-1817. Court Docket, probably kept by Nathan Williams when Justice of the Peace, 1809-1813.

Mr. Frederick S. Dellenbaugh presented the octavo diary kept by himself on the second Powell expedition of exploration and survey down the Green and Colorado rivers and through adjacent country, 1871-1873. About 100 leaves and 24 inserts of letters, notes, clippings, photographs, etc. The author, as artist and topographer, records the voyage of the expedition by boat from Green River, Wyo., to the mouth of the Paria River, Ariz., thence by land to Kanab, Utah; surveying House Rock Valley, Paria Plateau, Uinkaret Mountains, Grand Cañon, Hurricane Ledge, Virgin Mountains, Aquarius Plateau, Henry Mountains, etc.; continuing the voyage by boat from the mouth of the Paria through Grand Cañon to the mouth of Kanab Cañon; by land through Kanab Cañon to Kanab; map making, etc. The author made a personal visit to California, then journeyed to his home in Buffalo, N. Y. The diary contains occasional pen and pencil sketches illustrative of the text. This diary is presented upon the condition that no public use be made of it during the lifetime of the author without his consent. Mr. Dellenbaugh also gave eleven pieces of correspondence, treasurer's report, clippings, etc., relating to the Cook Relief Expedition, organized under the direction of The Arctic and The Explorers Clubs for the rescue and relief of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, in 1909.

A photostat copy of a journal, probably compiled by a member of the 47th Regiment of Foot, British Army, 1775-1777, was secured from the original manuscript in the possession (1920) of R. L. Reid, K. C., who is a governor of the University of British Columbia at Vancouver. The journal contains accounts of actions at Lexington and Concord; Bunker Hill; operations in Canada; Lake Champlain; and events leading to the Saratoga Convention; with returns of killed and wounded, strength of the armies, extracts from Burgoyne's State of the Expedition, etc.

An important gift came from Mr. Joseph Hershheim, of New York City, namely: The papers of Commodore Homer Crane Blake of the United States

Navy (born Feb. 1, 1822; died, Jan. 21, 1880). The collection includes: Miscellaneous official orders received, 1840–1865. 1 vol., 4°; Prize list of officers, marines & crew of the U. S. S. "Eutaw," commanded by Homer C. Blake, Esq. Lieut. Commr on the North Atlantic Blockading Squadron under command of Act. Rear Admiral S. P. Lee, 1864. 8 leaves, f°; Letter book containing copies of official correspondence, dated at various ports of Spain and Portugal, 1868–1869, relating mostly to protection of American citizens in Spain during the revolution, with reports on events at Cadiz and Malaga.

Mr. George Kennan, of Medina, N. Y., gave about 150 pieces, consisting of letters from political exiles, and others; copies of official documents; clippings and other material. The gift is more fully described in the report of the Slavonic Division, and in the Bulletin, February, 1921. Mr. Kennan presented also a collection of letters, notes and clippings relating to Japan, ascent of Fuji-san, observation of eclipse of the sun, 1887, etc. — 1887–1906; in all, 28 pieces.

Professor Elbridge Colby, of the University of Minnesota, made a gift of a collection of letters from Laura Winthrop Johnson, addressed to Anna Adams Fields, with a few addressed to James Thomas Fields. The collection also contains a few poems by Laura Winthrop Johnson, and a few letters from William Templeton Johnson and Elizabeth Woolsey Winthrop (1862–1889). The correspondence relates to family affairs; publication of the writings of Theodore Woolsey Winthrop; comment upon current American and English literature; personal acquaintance with literary men of that period; local and current events; social life on Staten Island, N. Y.; activities of George William Curtis; the family of Robert Gould Shaw; European travel in 1869–1871; etc., about 315 pieces.

During the year, the following manuscripts have, among others, been added by purchase:

A volume containing the articles of association, proceedings, roll of members, and accounts of the Humane Society of Bath, Maine, 1793–1812. The remainder of the volume contains accounts, etc., of John Minot Moody, shipbuilder, of Bath, Me. The accounts relate to the Pejepscoot Right, shipbuilding, family affairs, etc., 1820–1844. In all about 150 p., 8°.

One hundred miscellaneous New Hampshire deeds of the middle of the eighteenth century. They relate to lands scattered through many towns in the then settled (i. e. Southern) portion of the State, and yield interesting details on the spread of population west and north, on the Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Masonian grants, and also facts of interest to genealogists. One paper which is of especial interest, is a holograph deed by Robert Rogers, the famous Ranger, to Ebenezer Fowler, 3 March 1755, for land in Starkstown, now Dunbarton.

Papers of Sidney Smith Rider, including correspondence with Francis James Lippitt, Henry R. Chace, Adelos Gorten, and R. Hazard; also memoranda, lectures, etc., relative to the history of Rhode Island, and to the state houses at Providence and Newport, Roger Williams, Dorr Rebellion, book plate of Oliver Kendall, etc. 18 notebooks in pamphlet form.

"A Stroll through New Amsterdam, by Anthony Autograph, Esq." Printer's copy. 15 leaves, f°. This manuscript was printed in the "Literary World," v. 13, p. 40-42, Aug. 13, 1853.

Receipt book of Ausburn Birdsall, Naval Officer of Customs, New York City, containing receipts of deputies, clerks, etc., for compensation for services, supplies, etc., 1858-1860. About 400 p., ob. 4°.

The Diary, from June 13, 1853, to Dec. 31, 1854, and a Sketch Book, 1853-1859, of Thomas Kelah Wharton, artist and architect, who was born in Hull, England, April 17, 1814, and died in New Orleans, La., in 1862. 2 v. 4° and obl. 4°. The diary begins with a journey made for the benefit of his health from New Orleans to Boston, the route being up the Mississippi river by boat to La Salle, by rail through Chicago to Toledo, by boat to Buffalo, and from Niagara Falls to Ogdensburg, thence by rail through Rouses Point, N. Y., Concord, N. H., etc.; visiting relatives and friends in Boston, Framingham, Saxonville, Quincy and vicinity; returning in November, 1853, from Boston through New York, Dunkirk, Cleveland, and then by boat down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans, with detailed descriptions of various places; the Diary continues with his residence in New Orleans; comment upon his work on the Custom House with Major P. G. T. Beauregard of the United States Army (afterwards General in the Confederate Army); the yellow fever epidemic, 1853–1854, and many matters of local interest; also a brief sketch of his life after arriving in America in 1830. Occasional pen and ink sketches illustrate the text. The sketch book contains about seventy-five sketches in water color, ink, and pencil, mostly of places mentioned in the Diary, 1853–1854. Some sketches are dated as late as 1859.

Extracts from the report of a voyage to certain harbors in England and through a part of the United States of North America, done pursuant to Royal orders of the 23d of February, 1825, by A. E. Tromp, deputy constructor of the Royal Marine in the Department of the Schelde. In Dutch. 14 leaves. 4°. The American portion relates principally to steamboat navigation on the Hudson river and to the use of horseboats.

Correspondence, leaflets, clippings, etc., collected by Edward Smith, relative to the life of William Cobbett. The correspondence includes copies of Cobbett's letters to various persons, also letters from his children and from his acquaintances to Edward Smith in regard to events in Cobbett's life. There are also in this volume leaflets, clippings, etc., relating to the disinterment of the remains of Thomas Paine by Cobbett and subsequent removal to England; a Thomas Paine Exhibition, etc.; also clippings of reviews of the writings of Edward Smith, as his "English and America after Independence," his "Life of Sir Joseph Banks," etc. 1 v., 4°. Scrapbook.

Log book kept by John Reed, Jr., midshipman on board the United States Frigate "Macedonian," Captain John Downes, commander, while cruising in the Pacific ocean and stopping at various ports in Central and South America, from September 21, 1818, to June 17, 1821. 130 leaves. f°.

Log book of the steamship "Tillie," of New York, kept by the chief engineer, 1863–1865, while the ship was carrying coal, troops, army supplies, etc., from and to New York, Hilton Head, Beaufort, Sea Brook, Port Royal, Stono river, Fernandina, St. Augustine, Jacksonville, New Haven, Alexandria, Washington, Fort Monroe, New Orleans, Mobile, etc. 30 leaves. f°.

Engineer's log kept on board the steamship "Dudley Buck," 1865, sailing from and to New York, Mobile, New Orleans, Brazos de Santiago, Indianola, Corpus Christi, Barancas, St. Marks, Apalachicola, Fort Jefferson, Key West, etc. About 100 leaves, f°.

Twenty-five bills of lading for goods shipped from Philadelphia, Pa., to Barbadoes, Bermuda, South Carolina, and Jamaica, by Charles Massey, John Massey, and Thomas Massey, respectively, 1790–1792; 1807. Printed forms filled in, signed by masters of the various vessels. ob. 8°.

Draft book kept at the sail loft of Charles Hitch & Son, Tabers Wharf, New Bedford, Mass., containing names of ships, their owners, drawings of sails with dimensions, etc., 1843-1878. 158 pages, inserts, large f°. Most of the drawings have notations such as "Lost," "Sold away," "Sold for Stone Fleet," "Burnt by Shenandoah in Arctic Ocean," etc.

On the British navy there were a number of additions, as follows:

Log book kept on board H. M. S. "Téméraire" while cruising near the West Indies, stopping at the ports of Mariel, Havana, Port Royal, thence to St. Helens and Spithead, Eng., from September 10, 1762, to July 25, 1763. About 100 leaves. 8°.

Log book kept on the British ships of war "Isis," from April 25, to May 23, 1805; "Confiance," December 31, 1807, to January 28, 1808; "Salvador del Mundo," October 23, to November 26, 1810; "Sceptre," November 27, 1810, to February 2, 1811; "Southampton," March 3, 1811, to July 15, 1812. The daily entries record convoys from England to Newfoundland; cruising about the British Isles, to Brazil, French Guiana, attack upon Cayenne; cruising between "Cawsand Bay," and Brest; convoy from England to West Indies; cruising in West Indies; capture of the "Amethyst," cruising off Florida; and convoy from Jamaica to Panama. 258 leaves, f°.

Queries from Admiral Sir John Warren and Major General Sir Sydney Beckwith, respectively, addressed to Rear Admiral George Cockburn, with Cockburn's answers and observations, concerning the military defences around Norfolk, Va., and the possibility of a successful attack by the combined forces of the British army and navy. 8 leaves, f°. Sir John Warren, commanding the British fleet in the North American station, arrived in the Chesapeake Bay early in June, 1813, with British troops commanded by Major General Beckwith. Rear Admiral Cockburn, second in command to Admiral Warren, and who had been operating with a part of the British fleet in the Chesapeake Bay for several months, probably prepared this manuscript shortly before Warren's arrival in June, 1813. The document is signed "G. C." On June 22, 1813, the British forces made an unsuccessful attack upon Craney Island in the Harbor of Norfolk.

Journal and water color sketches of F. Ross describing the voyage of H. M. S. "Tagus" from England to South America and South Pacific ocean, from November 26, 1813, to August, 1814, with accounts of visits to Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo, Valparaiso, Callao, Lima, Payta, Guayaquil, Islands of Galapagos and Marquesas, nature of the various countries, customs of inhabitants, etc. About 18 water color sketches of the action and surrender of the French ship of war "La Ceres," views of Rio de Janeiro and vicinity, La Plata, Montevideo, etc., and several unfinished pencil sketches, including "The Capture of U. S. S. Essex." There are several references in the journal to the cruise of the "Essex," commanded by Captain David Porter, in the South Pacific and its subsequent capture by the British at Valparaiso, in March, 1814.

The journal appears to have been written in 1815, after the writer's return to England.

Log books kept by F. C. Syer of the proceedings of H. M. S. "Centaur," John Chamber White, captain, April 6, 1813, to August 27, 1814; and log of the proceedings of H. M. S. "Tiber," James Richard Dacres, captain, August 2, 1814, to March 31, 1817.

"Yarrow," along the coast of Peru, from February 10, to November 22, 1833; notes relative to harbors, winds, currents, supplies, fresh water, etc., to be had along the coast of Peru northwest of Callao; also notes on performances of engines, etc., of H. M. S. "Hydra," 1840, and of H. M. S. "Arrogant," 1851. About 150 p., 8°.

Log book kept by Frederick J. Rendell, midshipman, on board H. M. S. "Mars," James M. Strange, captain, while cruising in the Levant, stopping at the ports of Athens, Beyrout, Larnaka, etc., thence to Spithead, Eng., via Malta and Gibraltar, from January 1, 1862, to February 7, 1863. The log contains 14 maps of the ship's courses, anchorage soundings, etc.; pen sketches of Larnaka, Tyre, Ruad Island and Cape Madonna; a water color sketch of Piraeus of Athens, etc. Bound in the same volume is the log kept by Midshipman Frederick J. Rendell on board H. M. S. "Formidable," while at Sheerness, Eng., from February 8, to May 2, 1863.

PUBLIC EXHIBITIONS

In the Main Exhibition Room (113), the exhibition of the War Photographs of the Signal Service Corps, A. E. F., originally opened on December 6th, 1919, was continued during January and to February 23rd, inclusive. For the period falling within the year 1920, the attendance was 71,991, making, with the attendance of the previous month in 1919, a total for this exhibition of 119,289.

During the period from February 24th to June 23rd, the Main Exhibition Room was closed. From June 24th to October 4th, the Spencer Collection was temporarily on view there; the statistics are given in the separate report on the Spencer Collection.

The Main Exhibition Room was closed from October 5th until reopened on November 29th with the Pilgrim Tercentenary Exhibition. During the 32 days of 1920 that this exhibition was on view the attendance was 12,216.

In the smaller exhibition room (112), the Washington Irving Exhibition, consisting of manuscripts, books, portraits, and other engravings by or relating to Irving, was opened for public view on April 27th. This collection was lent by Mrs. Isaac N. Seligman, of New York City. The total attendance for this period, April 27th, through the year, was 37,655.

SPENCER COLLECTION

The Spencer Collection has occupied different rooms during the year. This has been due to the necessity of vacating Room 322 while it was being equipped with exhibition cases for the collection. It is presumed that by February, 1921, the Spencer Room will be ready to receive the collection for permanent housing.

From January 1, to May 24, the exhibition continued in Room 322, with an attendance of - - - - -	27,625
From May 24, to June 23, the Spencer books were being prepared and were then transferred for exhibition in the Main Exhibition Room (113), where they were on public view from June 24, to October 4, with an attendance of - - - - -	29,700
From October 5, to the end of the year, the Spencer Exhibition has been on view in the Lenox Gallery (Room 318), with an attendance of -	30,617
The grand total for the year has been, in various places - - -	87,942

MUSIC DIVISION

Although the Music Division has not been increased by any unusual purchase or by any large single gift during the past year, its continued and steady growth under adverse financial conditions has been a source of satisfaction. The number of small gifts has been increasing, and last year's increment, when summed up at the end of the year, proves to have constituted no mean proportion of the books and music catalogued and placed on the shelves.

Two types of compositions are, as a result, better represented than they would otherwise be. First, there are more works by living American composers (Loomis, Ferrari, Kramer, Penn, Vanderpool, Cecil Burleigh, Hammond M. Wilson, Elliot Griffis). The Library is indebted to the following publishers and dealers for gifts of this nature: Schirmer, Ditson, Carl Fischer, J. Fischer & Bro., Luckhardt and Belder, White-Smith Publishing Co., Witmark, Composers' Music Corporation, D. Appleton and Ernest Cook.

Second, there were numerous gifts from people who were clearing out their old music. In this way there were received compositions which readers had actually asked for, but which the Library could not undertake to buy systematically. A typical instance was Reginald De Koven's familiar song: "O Promise Me." Other acquisitions of this kind were early editions of Stephen Collins Foster's songs. Among the donors of such music and books were: Mr. W. J. Henderson, Mr. Nahan Franko, the Chev. Eduardo Marzo, Dr. Beverly Robinson, Miss Rosalie Housmann and Miss Claire Robertson.

Among other gifts may be mentioned some forty-five librettos of recent German operas and choral works donated by the Universal Edition Co. of Vienna. Through the kind offices of Mr. Ugo Ara there came from France and Italy a number of compositions by one of Italy's most prominent composers, Francesco Malipiero.

During the last year the first instalment of funds provided by the bequest of Mrs. Katherine Drexel Penrose became available. These funds made possible the purchase of modern orchestra scores and other modern music begun several years ago. In this way were acquired works of Italian composers like Malipiero, Casella, Respighi, Marinuzzi, Tirindelli as well as the new "Raccolta Nazionale delle Musiche Italiane" of which ninety-eight numbers have thus far appeared. Furthermore, the additions included orchestra scores by Frederick Delius, Ethel Smyth, Franz Schreker, Mahler, Schönberg and Novák; and, vocal scores by Delius, Mahler, Schreker, and Reznicek.

The number of readers during the year 1920 was 19,454, as against 17,098 in 1919. On the other hand the number of volumes used was 48,868 in 1920, as against 52,284 in 1919. The number of readers is the exact number of names signed in the readers' register. The actual number was greater, for there are always some readers who fail to register. The figures for volumes consulted are based on the count of volumes replaced on the shelves, and a more or less continuous observation of readers using the periodicals lying on the tables or on open shelves. At its best the method is not very reliable, and the discrepancies between the figures for successive years may possibly be explained in this way.

GENEALOGY AND LOCAL HISTORY DIVISION

There was a slight increase in the registration of readers in this Division, the total being 28,013 or 1,567 more than in the year preceding. There was also a corresponding increase in the number of volumes and pamphlets called for: the actual number being 101,683. More than ever the Division seems to be used by readers for practical purposes as well as for genealogical study and compilation. In a recent legal case, a law firm established the rights of certain claimants to the estate of a wealthy New Yorker, to the satisfaction of all concerned, by tracing descent through genealogies, local histories and directories. A special investigator for a life insurance company frequently consults vital statistics, genealogies and town histories for verification of statements of ages and dates named in applications for insurance. Art dealers have used genealogies and histories to ascertain data relative to portraits, and books on heraldry have made it possible to identify coats-of-arms on tapestries, thereby establishing the period when they were made.

One reader was especially engaged in research concerning emigration to this country during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, with a view to preparing a monograph to show the influence of these settlers and their descendants. The Tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrims has brought many students in search of material for magazine articles, essays and illustrations. An illustrated book on the Pilgrims has been prepared largely from the Division's resources, and another reader has compiled an extensive bibliography of the same subject. Much valuable information has been found for histories of several financial institutions in New York; also for a history of Ann Street, New York.

Local histories of Scotland were consulted by one reader for sketches of members of the Saint Andrew's Society in the State of New York. This reader has in preparation a book of biographies of those who joined the Society from 1756 to 1805, with genealogical notes relating to their families. Another work, the preparation of which has been largely dependent upon the books of this Division, is a list of diaries and journals kept by officers during the American Revolution, extracts from many of these having been printed in local histories and genealogies. There has been a greater demand for the British county histories, state papers and parish records in investigation of the English homes of immigrants.

A notable feature of the registration of readers is that a large percentage are residents of other cities and states, who, having heard of the Library's resources, come here to avail themselves of material which is difficult to find elsewhere.

ACQUISITION DIVISION (FORMERLY ORDER DIVISION)

During the year 1920 there were purchased 11,929 volumes and 7,570 pamphlets. There were received by gift 72,948 volumes and 60,950 pamphlets for the Reference Department at a valuation of $37,381.45.

The gifts to the Circulation Department numbered 9,563 volumes and 2,163 pamphlets.

Gifts of manuscripts have already been described in the section devoted to the Manuscript Division, and gifts of music in the section devoted to that division. Other gifts have been recorded throughout the year in the Bulletin. Of the important gifts of books and other material, the following are notable:

From Miss Grace Bigelow, New York, a collection of material relating to the Panama Canal, including "Chambre des Députés de France, session de 1893, Rapport fait au nom de la Commission d'Enquête chargée de faire la lumière sur les allégations portées à la Tribuna à l'occasion des Affaires de Panama"; also a large collection of books and pamphlets, relating to American history before the civil war; "American International Relations, 1873-1908"; and others.

From William K. Bixby, St. Louis, Mo., "A List of books privately printed by William K. Bixby, and those privately printed by Book Clubs from manuscripts in his collection, including short sketches written by Mr. Bixby for Book Clubs," St. Louis, 1919. No. 56 of 60 copies printed.

From the Consul General of Brazil, New York, a collection of Brazilian documents.

From Miss Cornelia Cruger, Barrytown, N. Y., "Collection des moralistes anciens, dédiée au Roi, Paris. . . 1783 (Sentences de Théognis, de Phocylide de Pythagore, et des sages de la Grece, recueillies et traduites par M. Levesque)," with a manuscript dedication from Thomas Jefferson, October 19, 1788, to Catherine Schuyler Church.

From Dr. Peter H. Goldsmith, New York, a collection of books, pamphlets and periodicals, principally documents of South American republics.

From Henry E. Huntington, New York, photostat facsimile of "The Book of Lawes and Libertyes concerning the inhabitants of the Massachusets, collected out of the records of the General Court for the several Years wherein they were made and established," Cambridge, 1648.

From Mr. John Powell Lenox, Oak Park, Ill., "Christ in Art," a collection of photographs and reproductions in color and black-and-white of portraits of Christ bound in 15 red leather albums or scrapbooks, including also the Tissot Life of Jesus Christ.

The largest gift of the year was that of 44,869 volumes from the Mercantile Library Association of New York City. It was made up of nearly 22,000 volumes of bound periodicals; 4,500 state and federal public documents; about 7,000 volumes of English and American fiction; 2,000 directories, 2,000 annuals, 500 volumes of library catalogues and other library publications and 7,000 miscellaneous books including a good selection of history, travel, biography and science. The size of the gift has made it impossible as yet to examine it all in detail. The greater part of it will probably duplicate books already in the Library, but there are many valuable additions, and some of the duplicates will be needed as second copies and others will be found useful by the Circulation Department or as material for exchange.

This extensive transfer of library property was due to the removal of the Mercantile Library from the quarters it had occupied for many years to another floor in the same building.

Among the periodicals were about 400 volumes which are indexed in Poole's Index of Periodical Literature, but which The New York Public Library had never been able to obtain. These volumes are a very welcome and valuable addition to our collections as they were practically unobtainable through the book trade. In addition to these there were about 2,500 volumes of other periodicals which the Library lacked and 2,000 volumes of much used sets that were needed as second copies.

Among the public documents were many volumes of early state geological survey reports, and state laws. A large number of the directories date back to the first half of the nineteenth century and will be valuable local history material. The Library catalogues and publications form a valuable historical record of Libraries of the United States from 1800 to 1875. The fiction is also valuable from the historical point of view.

From Baron E. Shibusawa, Tokyo, Japan, his work on the Shogunate of Japan, in Japanese, in 8 volumes.

From William Sloane, New York, "A sermon preached at Plimmoth in New England December 9, 1621," by Robert Cushman, London, 1622, of particular interest as being the only one of the three books about the Plymouth Colony printed in 1622 that was not owned by the Library. He gave also "Ruines de Guerre, Ligne Hindenburg, Soissons, Verdun, Arras, par Daniel Putnam Brinley des Foyers du Soldat (Union Franco-Americaine)," Paris, 1919 (one portfolio containing 12 prints).

From Mrs. Frances Boullion Toplitz, New York, a collection of photographs, taken at the time of the San Francisco fire and earthquake; a copy of the first combination paper published in San Francisco after the fire, "The Call-Chronicle-Examiner," for 19th of April, 1906.

From the late Theodore N. Vail, New York, "John Eliot and the Indians. 1652 to 1657. Being letters addressed to Rev. Jonathan Hanmer of Barnstable, England, reproduced from the original manuscripts in the possession of Theodore N. Vail, edited by Wilberforce Eames," New York, 1915. (150 copies printed.)

Gifts of prints were received from Herbert Adams, New York, and the late Sam P. Avery, Hartford, Conn. From Mrs. Mabel H. Gillette, and Hallie Hyde Irwin, a donation of woodcuts in memory of their sister, Helen Hyde.

From Mme. C. Pissarro and her children, ten etchings in memory of her husband, Camille Pissarro.

Prints were also presented by Mrs. C. S. Fairchild, Kennedy and Company, Louis Maurer, Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, Mrs. Algernon S. Sullivan, W. P. Truesdell, and Carl Zigrosser.

The following artists have presented copies of their etchings, drypoints and lithographs: Vernon Howe Bailey, Dr. A. J. Brown, Bolton Brown, Jay Chambers, Paul Dougherty, W. E. Fisher, A. W. Heintzelman, Eugene Higgins, Earl Horter, Rockwell Kent, Miss Katharine Kimball, J. J. Lankes, A. N. Macdonald, J. J. A. Murphy, John Myers, Louis Orr, Vincenzo Pandolfi, Herbert Pullinger, Thornton Oakley, Jacques Reich, W. G. Reindel, Ernest D. Roth, Louis H. Ruyl, Rudolph Ruzicka, Henry B. Shope, Albert Sterner, Walter Tittles, A. Treidler, J. C. Vondrous, S. J. Woolf.

The collection of books on the great war has received material additions during the year 1920. General Pershing has sent a set of maps showing the operations of American Divisions on the Western Front with the location of each division every day from the time it arrived in France until the signing of the armistice.

Major General R. L. Bullard, Commander of the Eastern Department, has had histories, published under his command, sent to us; Major General John J. Lejeune has done the same. Over one hundred divisional and regimental histories, and personal narratives of the men who participated in the battles of the American Expeditionary Forces, have also been received.

From Andre Gadioux, Tours, France, "Ce que nous avons fait, Historique du 32e Regiment d'Infanterie, pendant la Campagne 1914-1919, par Andre Gadioux and Maurice Poupon," Tours.

What are probably the best maps of the front lines are contained in the Plans Directeurs, French Maps, which show the Allied and German lines, trenches, barbed wire, etc. These came to the Library as a gift from the French Ministry of War and Colonel S. T. Mackall of the United States Military Intelligence Division. The Istituto Geografico Militare sent the Library twenty-two maps on various scales showing the Italian and Austrian front, and from the British Embassy at Washington were received Maps of the British and Allied Battle Fronts. Taken together these maps will provide invaluable aid to future historians in the study of campaigns and battles.

Trench and camp publications have been received, including such typical titles as "Camp Upton News," "The Bugler," "Flights and Landings," and "Over the Top"; also a complete set of "Stars and Stripes."

"The Army and Navy Journal" has presented us with a miscellaneous collection of books relating to the World War.

SLAVONIC DIVISION

The year's accessions include a valuable collection of about three hundred books and magazines, mostly in Russian, given by Mr. George Kennan. Published for the most part in the 80's and 90's of the past century, they deal with a variety of subjects, among which Siberia and the Russian prison system predominate. There are also substantial studies on Russian history, jurisprudence, politics, economics, and popular education, beside editions of Russian classics. The collection also comprises a group of manuscripts, forming a supplement to similar material previously given by Mr. Kennan to the Library. (See the Library's Bulletin, February, 1921.) Most of the manuscripts have a bearing on the Russian revolutionary movement in its early phases, and are of considerable historic value. Another private gift, consisting of about one hundred pamphlets and books published in Moscow and Petrograd in 1918 and 1919, was a welcome addition to the necessarily slender collection of current Russian literature. Miscellaneous in character, they give a fairly adequate notion of the publishing activities of the Soviets.

The Library received regularly most of the periodicals published by Russian émigrés outside of the territory of Soviet Russia. It also secured the more desirable books produced by the newly-established Russian firms in such centres as Paris, Berlin, Prague, Helsingfors. Some publications of the Crimea and of Constantinople were also obtained. The Division made special efforts to fill some of the gaps in the section of Russian belles-lettres.

After an interval of several years, Polish and Bohemian periodicals began to arrive with a measure of regularity. The Polish accessions included a large number of recent political pamphlets, a few historical treatises, and several volumes of verse. The chief Bohemian accession of the year is Dr. Prasek's monumental description of the Czech lands, in six volumes.

Judging by the number of readers and volumes consulted, this was the busiest year in the history of the Division.

JEWISH DIVISION

The number of volumes and pamphlets credited to this Division is now about 26,300. The special card catalogue of the collection contains about 123,100 cards. The average daily number of readers is 31, and the number of volumes called for, 64.

The purchases in Hebrew literature included a number of nineteenth-century books, obtained from Ephraim Deinard; some recent books published in Palestine, and the publications of the Stybel Publishing House of Warsaw and New York. The purchases in Yiddish have been recent publications that have appeared in this city.

Persons interested in the controversies aroused by the publication of "The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion" and in the Anti-Semitic agitation of Mr. Henry Ford have been among the readers in this Division.

In the death of Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, the Library has lost a generous friend. Mr. Schiff became interested in this Division soon after it had been established, and his patronage was continued to the last. His gifts to the Library are described by the Chief of the Jewish Division in the "American Hebrew" of October 8, 1920, in the following words:

"A quarter of a century ago, the libraries of New York were consolidated in order to serve adequately the scholarly interests of the metropolis and to emulate the work of the world's great libraries. It was then felt that the world position of the new institution imposed upon it the obligation of filling many gaps in the world's literature on its shelves, a task hitherto beyond the scope of the libraries as individual institutions. In their examination of the resources of the combined libraries, the Trustees, becoming aware of the lack of a collection of Jewish literature, turned to Jacob H. Schiff, the foremost Jewish citizen of New York, among whose vast and varied interests Jewish learning and education were by no means the least. He responded generously to the end that Jewish literature may take its honorable place in the library among the literatures of the world.

"Mainly through his beneficence, the Library is the possessor of a comprehensive collection of books, pamphlets, and periodicals in some thirty languages, to the number of 26,000, in all branches of Jewish literature and bearing upon all aspects of Jews and Judaism. This collection, started in 1897, has gradually grown to be the library of the Jewish community, the resort of various classes of readers, students and scholars, and the bureau of information for inquirers. Jews of all sorts and conditions use it extensively; natives and immigrants, school children and university men, readers for pastime as well as students of the ancient Jewish past and investigators of present conditions. Among these are found nearly all Jewish scholars, rabbis, preachers and lecturers, editors and journalists, and many social workers, teachers and students of this city. To the community at large, and particularly to the non-Jewish majority, the chief significance of the Jewish collection and its outstanding value lie in the fact that it comprises the bulk of Jewish writings of all ages relating to the Old Testament.

“The sums expended by Mr. Schiff on his gift to the Library, including the Tissot collection of 371 original color illustrations of the Old Testament, approximate $100,000. As a slight token of appreciation the Library dedicated to him in 1914 the catalogue of a portion of the collection entitled ‘List of Works Relating to the History and Condition of the Jews in Various Countries.’”

By his will he left the Library $25,000, the income of which is to be used for purchase of books similar in character to those bought during his life. Mr. Schiff's bequest will, in a measure, help to carry on some of the most necessary work of the Division. To keep abreast of the various branches of Jewish literature, additional funds are needed. An opportunity is thus afforded our liberal Jewish citizens to emulate the example of the late philanthropist and render a service to the cause of Jewish studies, by supplementing the income derived from Mr. Schiff's bequest. Only thus can the Library continue successfully the work of the Division on the same scale as heretofore.

ORIENTAL DIVISION

There has been a far larger number of readers in the Oriental Division this year than in any previous year. There were 4,802 readers, while 15,954 books and periodicals were used in the department. A large number of books were sent to the Main Reading Room for use evenings and Sundays, but no record of these was kept in the Division.

As the room becomes better known it is more used and appreciated by students. An Oriental student said recently that he could study better here than in Japan or China, for the material was more available. This was a surprise, coming as it did from a man who had enjoyed no special privileges.

In Maunier's “Bibliographie économique, juridique et sociale de l'Égypte Moderne,” published in Cairo in 1918, the list on Muhammadan law, printed by the Library in 1908, is the only bibliography on the subject mentioned.

The list which is being prepared on Egypt is progressing slowly owing to the fact that with the increased use of the room more time has to be spent in routine work.

DIVISION OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

During 1920, 126,255 readers, a daily average of 346, were registered. The studies pursued by these readers shows a paramount interest in the natural resources of the United States and other countries, notably petroleum and the minerals. Statistics of production and distribution, as well as technical descriptions of processes, have been in great demand. There has also been an undiminished interest in both theoretical and applied chemistry. There is a notable desire for mathematical knowledge and the new developments in physical science, prompted especially by the revolutionary theories of Einstein. Wireless telegraphy and automobile engineering are also unusually live subjects. As ever, patent records are eagerly sought, and readers seem to appreciate the new privilege of consulting them during the evening hours and on Sundays. Interest in patents is reflected in the fact that fully fifty per cent of the photostat work of the Library is confined to the copying of patent records.

From the diaries of information supplied, the following questions are selected as typical: The relative efficiencies of fuel oil and coal in ship propulsion; the latest systems of unloading machinery for docks; modern road building in Egypt and India; the utilization of peanut and cocoanut shells; construction of the Million Dollar Pier at Atlantic City; picture of a Spanish galleon; new methods of floating sunken ships; early history of the Panama Canal; model of the Imperial German yacht; depreciation of a certain California mine in order to compute the income tax; shape of the universe, and opinions regarding the shrinkage of the earth; whether human thoughts can be registered by electricity; gauge and rail weight of the Bagdad Railway; the mining hazards of fluorspar; geological history of the Dead sea and gaugings of the River Jordan; rainfall of Santo Domingo; location of quicksand in New York City and details of the "freezing method" for handling it; Allen's solder stick; use of paraffin in foundries; daily output of the average shoveller; transmission of energy by sonic waves; energy of cyclones; properties of a dicyanine; chemical changes observed in grain steamed at a high temperature; manufacture of bath salts; thawing of gas meters; address of a Belgian firm selling lithophone; analysis of egg powders; stearine pitch; controversy as to the discovery of Bessemer steel; possible uses of higher alcohols occurring in industrial by-products; iridescent color effects for artificial pearls by the use of gelatine; pictures of ancient Grecian tents for a producer of plays.

The Division has in preparation three bibliographies: 1. Selenium; 2. Primitive textile design; 3. Spinning, weaving, and finishing of textiles.

ECONOMICS DIVISION

As measured by the number of readers, it is apparent that the work of the Division has increased greatly over 1919. This striking increase may be due in part to the more complete registration secured under the present arrangement of rooms and the location of the registration desk. Even now, registration is far from complete.

Mention should be made of the clipping collection which occupies 228 boxes. No monthly report is made on the use of the collection, and it does not seem possible to keep any accurate record. About 250 pieces are filed back each day after being used, but this does not include constant use of the files by members of the Staff and by readers who take a box from the shelf and return it after consultation. The collection has not grown rapidly, for the reason that the obsolete newspaper clippings are constantly discarded. Its use has been greatly stimulated by having all pamphlets indexed in the Bulletins of the Public Affairs Information Service. The Staff in looking up material on a subject, and the readers as well, are apprised of the existence of pamphlets of interest and this leads them directly to the clipping collection.

One full year has elapsed since the Division first occupied its enlarged quarters. Although the plans for using the additional space were necessarily experimental, no occasion has arisen for substantial change. The plan of keeping one member of the Reference Staff constantly on duty at the information desk near the entrance, while not always easy to carry out, has resulted in a more prompt and efficient service to readers, better supervision, and a more satisfactory registration of readers.

The provision of a Research Room made possible by the additional space has greatly improved the service to an important class of readers. In this room seats and tables are assigned to readers who need to reserve a large number of books, to those who wish to dictate, and to those who need to work in groups or confer with each other. Readers desiring to use a typewriter are sometimes sent from other divisions and these are accommodated, as far as possible, even though they are not using material from the Economics Division.

Among the important constant users of the Research Room during the past year the following may be mentioned: the statistician and other members of the staff of the National Bureau of Economic Research, workers from the Division of Analysis and Research of the Federal Reserve Board, and employees of the New York Edison Company.

Throughout the year one leading important and legitimate line of inquiry has had to do with problems of foreign exchange. Interest in foreign commerce has continued to decline in its relative importance, while the financial and economic situation in foreign states and cities has almost taken first place. This is apparently the result of a large amount of securities floated in this country by European governments.

On the whole, it may be said that there is only one word which can be used to describe what the public wants, — everything. Anyone who examines the letters of inquiry, the telephone diary kept by the Staff, and the information desk note book, must be impressed with the great variety of subjects touched upon, the definite and specialized character of the questions, and the consequent imperative need for skilled reference workers to furnish prompt service.

NEWSPAPER DIVISION

The advertising man studies in this Division. He is especially interested in the artistic effect of the advertisement, — what kind of borders to use, if any at all, and what style of type? He studies newspaper advertising of all kinds. A writer of school books for children collected war anecdotes from newspapers for use in his books.

The Division now receives currently 337 domestic and 112 foreign papers. These comprise papers from all except four of the United States, and papers from thirty different foreign countries. There are received ten papers from India. Seven of these have been contributed during the past year by the India Information Bureau of New York City.

From Miss Grace Bigelow came a gift of four Paris dailies covering the American Civil War period. These were collected by her father, the late President of the Library, while American Consul in Paris. Other gifts were twelve volumes of Spanish-American War newspapers from the Colonial Dames of America, and 282 volumes which include New York City, Paris, and Washington, D. C., papers, from Mr. Frank A. Munsey.

The total number of recorded readers consulting newspapers during the past year was 139,838, an average of 383 daily. These readers consulted 170,902 volumes, an average of 468 daily. This is an increase of 10.8 per cent in the number of readers over the preceding year, and 8.7 per cent in the number of bound volumes. This increase was principally during the autumn months. The number of recorded readers from October to December inclusive, 1920, showed an increase of 20 per cent over the same three months of the preceding year.

A list of the papers displayed on the racks in the Newspaper Division is given in the Appendix.

MUNICIPAL REFERENCE LIBRARY

There has been a steady increase in the attendance and in the use of the Municipal Reference Library during 1920. The attendance for the year numbers 35,198 as compared with 31,224 in 1919. The number of inquiries, including telephone requests and letters, reached about 12,500. 3,133 persons borrowed 5,458 books. Books secured by purchase number 307, for review purposes 336, and books and pamphlets received as gifts are estimated at 3,000, making a total of 3,643.

Municipal Reference Library Notes has been published weekly except during July and August. City officials, employees, libraries, and civic organizations are on the regular mailing list, which numbers 2,100. Of the 370 periodicals which we receive, about two-thirds are gifts or in exchange for the Notes. During the year a Special Report entitled "Visualizing Citizenship" was issued. It is by Ina Clement, and is a study of civic motion pictures. The issue of the Notes for September 29, was a Fire Prevention Number.

Numerous bibliographies have been compiled during the year. None have been printed but all of them mimeographed. Copies are sent to interested persons upon request.

This Library has requested assistance from a large number of special libraries in the City, and the information has been generously given. The New York Special Libraries Association, which was formed in 1915, has continued its activities and much important information is secured through its members. Three meetings of the Association were held in the Municipal Building during the year. A new edition of the "Municipal Yearbook" has been prepared. This revision when in print will contain up-to-date material and statistics for all the departments of city and county government.

During the year thousands of civic pamphlets and reports of the departments of the city have been distributed free to the students and teachers of the public schools. The Library has been visited by classes of students. Much assistance has been given to the teachers of civics.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

The number of volumes issued for home use by the Circulation Department, through its forty-three Branch Libraries, the Extension Division including six sub-branches, and the Library for the Blind, was 9,658,977. This is a loss of 233,671 as compared with 1919. The funds for the purchase of books in 1919 were insufficient to maintain adequate book stocks, and the depleted condition of the stock in the early part of 1920 was an important factor in the losses in circulation during the first six months. The unusually cold winter and poor traveling facilities had also a marked effect on circulation, especially in the children's rooms. When snow and ice abound, children play out of doors and do not read as much as in other times. On Staten Island, transit conditions were so bad that many of the regular readers could not reach the Branches.

Since the beginning of the War it has been impossible to secure an adequate number of foreign books, and losses have occurred in the circulation of books in some of the foreign languages.

Changes in the Staff were far too frequent for proper continuity of work. The number of untrained assistants and substitutes made it impossible to give readers the individual attention which would have helped to keep up the circulation.

Conditions in the Staff seemed more stable towards the end of the year, except in the children's rooms. There is a serious shortage of children's librarians. The service is still unsatisfactory and the Staff seriously overworked, because it has been impossible to obtain an appropriation to restore the sixty positions eliminated at the end of 1918 as a War economy.

The shortage of Staff early in the year made it necessary for six weeks to close the children's room at the Aguilar Branch, normally one of the busiest rooms in the system. For the same reason circulation was also suspended for a considerable period in the children's room at Webster Branch, while the Jackson Square Branch children's room was closed for part of the summer. At all three Branches the resulting losses in circulation were large. After the rooms were re-opened, some time elapsed before the usual number of borrowers returned.

The marked increase in immigration tended to increase the use of the Branches in a few districts in the last months of the year. It is interesting that some Branches report increased use by young men, chiefly returned soldiers, who learned the reading habit in the service.

The number of volumes added to the Circulation Department during the year was 166,231, but 186,713 were withdrawn or discarded as worn out, leaving the net loss 20,482. Although more money was available for book purchases in 1920 than in 1919, the rapidly increased cost of books made it impossible to add enough books to balance the withdrawals.

For a number of years the stock of books has been gradually decreasing, and in the meanwhile the original supply of books in many Branches has been wearing out. It is impossible to continue the present circulation without grave risk of practical disintegration of the stock in some Branches. There is no way of showing by figures the gradual deterioration of the whole stock and hence a slight gain in circulation in any one Branch is deceiving. If additions and withdrawals balance for several years, the gradual necessary deterioration of stock means that in a few years the damage will be irretrievable.

The Library should purchase at least 175,000 books for the Circulation Department in 1921 if the book stock is to be in safe condition. But the reduction in book appropriations for the coming year, by approximately one-third, makes it certain that hardly half that number will be added. With such alarming conditions to face, circulation should not be stimulated, and it is probable that it will have to be curtailed.

A great need of the present is for more books in foreign languages, particularly translations of the best American literature, and books on American life and history, if the rapidly increasing foreign population is to be attracted to the libraries and so receive in the freest and most natural way a knowledge of America. But available funds are hopelessly inadequate for this important duty.

Classes for the foreign born, in learning English, are being conducted in some of the Branches, with teachers supplied by the Board of Education and the State.

Regular effort is made by the Branch Librarians to make their libraries known to the classes of foreigners in the evening schools, and many of the classes visit the Branches and promptly become borrowers.

A large demand for Spanish books is reported by nearly every Branch. Apparently the Spanish speaking population is rapidly increasing.

During the year special attention has been given to the reorganization and development of the Tompkins Square, Aguilar, and 135th Street Branches, and each one reports rapid increase in borrowers and circulation.

Plans have been prepared for the proposed Branch in Fordham, but building conditions have made it impossible to proceed with the erection of the badly-needed building.

In August the Staff of the Circulation Department were included in the general salary increases granted to city employees including institutions supported by the city. The salary schedules are therefore now considerably higher than they were a year ago.

Numerous interesting exhibitions have been held at the Branches during the year, notably at the Webster, Woodstock, 115th Street, and Harlem Branches. From the Museum of Natural History have come many delightful exhibitions for the children's rooms.

The total number of employees in the Department, on December 31, 1920, including 50 in the Central Circulation Branch and Central Children's Room, was 696.

WORK WITH CHILDREN

Writers and teachers of many countries are showing a new and keen interest in the books children are reading, and in the environments in which reading tastes are being developed. This is shown by visitors to the Central Children's Room, and to the children's rooms of the Branch Libraries, who come from foreign countries. "The principles of utility and beauty which these American children's library rooms represent, may well be worked out in other countries," was the comment of an English clergyman, who showed unusual familiarity with American as well as English children's books. He expressed the belief that it is largely through their books that the children of different countries will come to know one another. A Japanese professor of psychology and pedagogy was especially interested in the approach made to the child in the method of self-registration. The principle of the promise printed in the registration book, with the child's own signature attached to it, "is a method that would strike well the Japanese heart," he said.

A Swiss professor and principal of a school in Geneva, who spent some time in the study of methods of circulation of books to children, was impressed by the selection of children's books from foreign countries. He read and looked over many of these books with lively comment; and on his return to Switzerland determined to place a selection of the best American books within reach of the pupils of his school. A Norwegian professor of mathematics was entirely familiar with the idea of a children's library, since Norway and Sweden adopted the plan at least twelve years ago. A school inspector from Italy was interested in selecting children's books for translation into Italian. The inspector of schools for New South Wales mingled with the children of the Hudson Park and Seward Park Branches and said that she was taking back ideas for the libraries and schools of Australia. Among other interested visitors were Father Ryan from Ireland, Ethel Sidgwick and E. V. Lucas from England, and the American Ambassador to Brazil, who took an active personal interest in the selection of several hundred American and English children's books to be purchased by the Patriotic Society of Brazil for the Rio de Janeiro Graded School as the nucleus of a children's library. A similar selection of books was made for the American Library in Paris, and a smaller selection of American books was made for the children's library opened in Brussels in September as the result of the interest and initiative of the principal of a Belgian school for girls who visited this country in 1919. There have been many and varied requests for lists of books and information concerning methods of organizing and administering children's reading-rooms in libraries and schools.

The event of the year for the library reading clubs was the meeting in the Central Children's Room on January 23rd when Mrs. Corinne Roosevelt Robinson spoke to an enthusiastic audience of three hundred boys on her personal recollections of Colonel Roosevelt. Story hours and club meetings have been held as usual at the various Branches: the opening of a children's room and the establishment of a regular story hour for the children of Bermuda is one of the interesting developments of a vacation spent in Bermuda by the Supervisor of Story Hours and Clubs. She also participated in a Work Congress of all Workers with Children held in Toronto in October.

The outstanding features of the children's work of the Extension Division are the increased number and variety in the selection of books sent to summer camps, and the distinctive celebrations of Children's Book Week and Christmas, held in the sub-branches, stations and schools.

In the majority of the children's rooms of the Branch Libraries there has been a growth in volume and in intelligent use of books for reference and for general reading. The influence of this upon the quality of the demand for books to take home is one of the most encouraging manifestations of growth and change.

The tenth annual exhibition of children's books suggested as holiday gifts, was opened in the Central Children's Room on November 15th, with introductions to books by members of the Staff and by authors. A representative gathering of parents, publishers, authors, teachers and artists attended the opening, and visitors came in larger numbers than ever before.

A gift of $2,500 to the Central Children's Room was received in December from the Memorial Fund Association, making possible the purchase of the full series of N. C. Wyeth's original illustrations for the story of Robin Hood, and a substantial addition to books in the reference collection of this room. Gifts of five old children's books and an "Ancient Mapped Fairy Land" were received from Marie L. Shedlock and Ethel Sidgwick.

The total circulation of books to children from the children's rooms and through the Extension Division for the year 1920 was 3,882,799.

An important event of the year is the return to France of two experienced children's librarians, to assist in the organization of libraries and reading-rooms at Soissons, Vic-sur-Aisne, Anizy-le-Chateau and the villages within reach of these centres. This library work has grown naturally out of the relief and reconstruction work of one of the American organizations in the devastated region, and in June it was placed under the direction of a former assistant supervisor of work with children who has been in France for the past two years. The library rooms are in barracks which have been equipped with furniture made in France according to the measurements used in American children's libraries. The French libraries have been given a homelike atmosphere by a familiar arrangement of pictures and illustrated books. The books are in the French language, and it is expected that the libraries will eventually be administered by young French women who have the natural qualifications and the special education and experience essential to successful library work with children in any country. To children deprived of educational advantages during four and a half years of war, and to their teachers and parents, the value of such libraries is inestimable. Reports of the use of books in the library reading-rooms and in the schools are indicative of the mental starvation and the strong recuperative spirit existing in the devastated region. Story-telling is a popular and valued feature of the work.

The effect of the work in France upon the staff of the children's rooms of The New York Public Library has been electric. New life and interest have been infused into every phase of their own everyday work, extending even to former members of the Staff who have been eager to claim a share in this work of reconstruction.

WORK WITH SCHOOLS

For a year now the office of the Supervisor of Work with Schools has been on the third floor of the 58th Street Branch.

The room is being used for small group meetings as well as for official conferences. Meetings of a vocational study group were held there, besides teachers' conferences and committees. Plans are being made to use the room for monthly conferences of school librarians and teachers to discuss children's books, under the direction of the Superintendent of Libraries of the Board of Education.

Early in September a list of books for the Pilgrim Tercentenary was prepared for distribution in the schools and for the use of the reference assistants in the Branch Libraries. A collection of the books and pamphlets listed was exhibited in the office of the Supervisor at 58th Street, and was extensively used by librarians, teachers and class groups.

The school work in the Branches has been well maintained, considering the decreased number of assistants. The children's librarians are responsible for nearly all the work with the elementary schools, while the high school work is dependent on the good-will and team work of the entire Staff.

The high school work is a part of the big intermediate problem that will never be adequately handled until trained assistants can be appointed to give their entire time to the work.

In studying the records of the 1,934 class groups that visited the Branch Libraries during 1920, there is found to be an increasing number of informal reading hours, story-telling groups and book talks. This shows that principals and teachers recognize that the library and the librarian have something to give of positive educational value, apart from formal school work.

Through the encouragement of the Superintendent of Libraries of the Board of Education, the elementary school librarians have shown a great interest in the methods used in our children's rooms and a desire to use the nearest Branch Library. Some wish story-telling and book talks, some instruction for the pupils on the use of the library, and others, collections of books from the Extension Division.

The Junior High Schools are increasing in number and are very ready to work with the library. The method of one Junior High School is described in its school paper as follows:

"Classes 9A and 9B of the high school department are visiting the public library as a regular part of their work in English.

"The visits to the library are in connection with the reading of books on the supplementary reading list. There are three visits for each class, with a month of reading between each visit.

"The first visit is introductory. The list is discussed and the method of obtaining the books from the library is explained.

"At the second visit, each boy is given a question on a slip of paper, about some book on the list. The boys try to answer their questions, and interesting discussions develop.

"At the third meeting the books on the list are placed on a table. The boys gather round and are asked to arrange the books in piles, i. e. Indian stories, hero stories, sea stories, school stories, etc. Then the favorites in each group are defended, discussed and compared."

In spite of inadequate book funds and insufficient service the Library has maintained an appreciation of its place in the education of the children of the city. If conditions will not permit a rapid extension of this feeling, to keep it alive is surely a worthy task.

EXTENSION DIVISION

The Extension Division has complied with requests for books from Americanization and social centers, such as evening and industrial schools, community clubs, and settlements. One of these is a school for teaching fur and leather work to men disabled in the war, most of them foreign-born. While learning the three R's they are encouraged to read by a teacher who is a genuine book lover. He comments in the following interesting fashion: "There are one hundred men and fifty books. Every one is in use each day. Husband's 'Americans by Adoption' is the most popular just now. Three have read it and a number of others are quarreling over who shall get it next. Four fellows read Mark Twain's 'Captain Stormfield's Visit to Heaven.' Two of them thought it great—the other two thought it stupid. They didn't like the cheap theology of the 'Calling of Dan Matthews,' but they did like Tolstoi's 'Resurrection.' That was read by seven Russians." Reports like this help toward a better connection between readers and books.

While it is the specific problem of this Division to get books to outlying communities, there is very little opportunity to spread news about books. Children's Book Week offered both an opportunity and an obligation to interest people in children's books before the Christmas season. Accordingly informal book-talks were held at several sub-branches and stations. One mother who had listened with keen interest to a story which was read aloud announced that she had never realized how much pleasure she had been missing, and that hereafter she was going to read aloud to her family.

The physical labor of circulating 249,248 books from the six sub-branches precludes many of the pleasanter privileges of the work. Occasionally aid comes from an unexpected quarter.

"I've brought a present for the library," said a small boy at a sub-branch, depositing a round object wrapped in newspaper on the desk. The children swarmed to see what it was.

"How lovely!" exclaimed the librarian, as she held up a bowl containing two agitated gold fish. "What shall we call them? You name them, John."

"I think it would be nice to call them after the twins in the 'Peterkin Papers,'" was the response.

Consequently, there is a great demand for "the book that the gold fish were named after."

It was necessary to move the Van Nest Sub-branch in The Bronx and the West New Brighton Sub-branch on Staten Island, to smaller quarters. The little Fordham Sub-branch became so overcrowded that an adjoining store was rented, and the partition between the rooms removed.

BOOK ORDER OFFICE

There were purchased and distributed to the Branch Libraries 163,338 volumes. In addition 9, 563 volumes and 2,163 pamphlets were received as gifts and sent to the Branches.

Publishers, authors and booksellers sent to the Office 6,035 new titles for examination, of which 5,199 were added to the Circulation Department.

Subscriptions for 3,303 magazines were placed for 1921 and 1,120 were received as gifts. The 137,380 discarded volumes which were actually turned over to the Book Order Office by the end of December were disposed of as follows:

Transferred to Central Reserve Collection	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	5,827
Offered to Reference Department	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	2,139
Sold as old paper	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	129,414

CATALOGUING OFFICE

The fact that the book appropriation for 1920 was larger than in 1919 shows in the increased number of books entered, cards filed, and cards distributed to Branches.

Owing to the reduction in the Staff in 1919, a large number of books had accumulated ready for the Central Reserve Collection, which it was impossible to enter. This made the number entered in 1920 over twice that of the previous year.

One noticeable fact toward the end of the year was the decided decrease in the number of withdrawn books sent from Branches. The Branches are evidently preparing for a decreased book appropriation for replacements, and are keeping on their shelves books that would otherwise be discarded as soiled and unfit for circulation.

The foreign books in the Central Reserve Collection have been removed from the stacks and are in a more accessible place, in the gallery of the Cataloguing Office. Here they can be consulted by the readers, and much time and misunderstanding is saved.

There is a steadily increasing number of readers who consult the union catalogue, and are much pleased with the information they are able to obtain. When the actual book can be produced from the Central Reserve Collection, they are always grateful. This collection contains thousands of titles transferred from the Branch Libraries, because they are no longer in steady use.

During the year a gradual revision of the Branch catalogues and standardizing of the subject headings has been attempted. Soiled and missing cards, beginning with fiction, are being gradually reprinted. The Branches compared their shelf lists and catalogues for a certain proportion of the fiction each month, noted discrepancies, and sent to the Cataloguing Office a list of the titles no longer in the Branch, as well as of the cards that were needed as replacements.

During the year a plan which has been long considered was put in practice: a succession of exchange assistants between the Cataloguing Office and the Branches. Exchanges were made with Seward Park, Chatham Square, and Woodstock, for a month in each instance. The result is a better understanding of the work of the Library as a whole, and an added feeling of interest in all parts of the work.

PICTURE COLLECTION

The Picture Collection serves a widening circle of borrowers, many of whom have never used the Library for any other purpose and are surprised to find it so easy to use. One of the most agreeable features of this department is the generous spirit aroused among its users, many of whom desire to present their own collection of pictures.

There seems to be no limit to the uses found for the pictures: commercial, educational, dramatic, and recreational. One large studio, on receiving a commission for the sculpture to be used in the new chapel being erected for the Northwestern University, decided against moving the studio to Chicago because of the extent and availability of this collection. A theatrical producer comes regularly for designs for his new productions. He says that a busy man often finds it impossible to devote many hours to research in the Art and Prints Division, but that the circulating picture collection is invaluable because the material is already gathered and available in a few minutes. More than one artist has said that there is no longer need for him to keep his own collection of clippings, as he finds the Library doing it more thoroughly.

There has been considerable use of the pictures for Americanization work among the foreign born. The office has been besieged with requests from advertisers for material on the Pilgrims, from school teachers, from school children who are writing their own plays about the Pilgrims, and from pageant makers. The demand has been so great and the cheap material so inadequate that four plates were made from drawings in the collection, and a hundred copies of each were struck off. These, together with timely and generous gifts from publishers, helped over a difficult period.

The Reference Department has given space in two reading rooms for bulletin boards on which to post placards about the picture collection, with small exhibits to indicate the resources in the collection.

In the five years since the Collection was started the work has grown continually and now it is not unusual for more pictures to be circulated in a single day than were circulated in a month during the first year.

INTERBRANCH LOAN OFFICE

The books requested through the Interbranch Loan Office during 1920 (94,591) show an increase of 15,043 over 1919.

Inter-library loans have been maintained with fifty libraries throughout the United States — as far west as Arizona and as far south as Texas — with a total of 1,185 volumes borrowed by them. So far, the Circulation Department has borrowed only from the Library of Congress.

From the Central Reserve Collection 18,013 volumes were borrowed, an increase of 2,899 over 1919. This collection of standard books is increasingly valuable to the Branch Libraries. The titles in foreign languages are in dire need of additions if they are to serve their true usefulness to the Branches. It is difficult, almost impossible, to supply the constant demand for "twenty-five books" or, more pathetically even, "five books" in Yiddish — or Russian — or Polish — or, in fact, in any foreign language in the collection. Yet to supply small quantities of books to Branches not owning any in these languages is an important part of the service. A collection of 300 volumes in a foreign language in Central Reserve is more useful to the readers of the Library in general, than 100 volumes in each of three Branches, since the Central Reserve can lend to numerous Branches on demand for either long or short periods. Frequent changes from the central office give the readers greater variety. Many languages, such as Armenian and Modern Greek, are not represented at all, although the requests come almost daily.

The Office is becoming more and more a center for reference work of all kinds, not only for the usual reference questions of infinite variety, but for supplying lists of books of all sorts, the "best known," the "most popular," or "reasonable in price, but with all the good points of the expensive editions," or "titles in historical sequence for a history class." Such requests come from the Branches and also from libraries throughout the country.

In speaking of the work of the Interbranch Loan Office, it must be borne in mind that its function is not only interchanging books between the Branches of The New York Public Library, but that it serves as a source of information for industrial plants, colleges, and general libraries all over the United States. The breadth of its operations creates and holds the interest for those working in it. It is a barometer for the activities of the Branches, reflecting the interest and hard work of librarians and assistants. The work must be done quickly, yet with painstaking accuracy, with vigilance, judgment, and imagination to catch the point of view of the unseen and unknown reader. Above all it affords an opportunity for bringing the resources of this large library system to the people of the city, and to libraries elsewhere.

In addition to its regular work the Interbranch Loan Office has compiled special lists of books upon the following subjects:

Ocean transportation; Civics; Foreign trade; Basketry; Abraham Lincoln; France — 17th century (history); Palmistry; Colloids; Food chemistry and food analysis; Accounting; Kindergartening; Puritans; Care and feeding of children; Jewelry; Irish music; Welsh music; Salesmanship; Thermodynamics; Working girls; Rugs; Books on America in Russian and Yiddish; Hebrew philosophy in Hebrew; Symbolism in art; Books for women voters published since 1918; Occupational diseases; Titles by Corelli; Technical books for boys; Leather-upholstering; Phonographs; Books on Malaysia; Art (published in 1920); Titles in Historical Bible series; Titles in Students Old Testament series; Sculpture; Historical fiction of the fifth to fourteenth centuries; Ports of New York, Newark and Philadelphia; Strindberg in Swedish; Robert Browning (life and works); Printing and its allied trades; Works of W. G. Simms; Sex education; Citrus fruits of Florida; Telephone; Wireless telephone; Selected list on open and closed door; Japanese, Russian, Irish, and Mexican question; Comparison of modern governments of England, France, and United States; Beethoven, life and works.

LIBRARY FOR THE BLIND

A continuation of the difficult conditions created by the War is registered in the statistics of the Library for the Blind for 1920. For the first time since the Library for the Blind became a part of The New York Public Library, a decrease in circulation is reported, and this in spite of the fact that its book stock suffered no detriment. The difficulty is directly due to poor and insufficient page service. It is of some interest to note that the number of active readers for the year, which was 1,124, increased slightly, while the number of books sent out to them decreased.

The work in connection with blind pupils in the public schools and in private schools, and with the home teachers of the adult blind sent out by local organizations, has been carried on as usual. There has been some increase in lending reading matter to social centres and other libraries. The demand for books in the uniform type recently adopted in this country continues to increase.

Visitors from foreign countries, as well as local sightseers, manifest much interest in the Library for the Blind. The most distinguished reader last year was Viscount Grey, then the British Ambassador, who has set an admirable example to all who are for the time being deprived of their sight, by mastering, for temporary use only, a system of touch reading.

135TH STREET BRANCH

Special attention has been given during the year to the development of 135th Street Branch. Two interesting and significant features are the progress in children's work and the employment of colored assistants.

In the area between 125th and 145th Streets and 5th and 8th Avenues, the colored population is estimated at 125,000. The nature of the situation and a constantly expressed opinion in the neighborhood, prompted the introduction on the Staff of several negro assistants. One was appointed who is a graduate of Howard University in Washington, D. C. Two others are undergoing training. This step has resulted in greatly increased confidence among the readers, and has been well received by the whole Staff.

Facilities for developing work with children were close at hand in the public school across the street, with a colored registration of 2,000.

The children's room now shows a greatly increased activity in every way, not only in the circulation of books which has increased 22 per cent., and in the registration of new members, but in the use of the reading room, and in the growth of the reading habit among children. Every phase of the work planned for them has met an immediate response. Opening the room during the morning hours to classes from the public schools for a period of "cultural reading" has meant that practically every child in these classes is now a member and a reader.

The story hour, from the "picture-book children" to the older boys and girls, is acquainting large, eager groups of children with the fine old folk and fairy tales, the hero stories and stories of adventure. Club work has not yet been organized, but in the groups that gather around the tables after the day's work is over, there is already the nucleus of promising club work.

The interest of the parents is evident; they have curiosity and sympathy and well understand what such a room can mean to the community life.

In the effort to extend the Library's usefulness it was brought to wider public attention through the newspapers for the colored population on moving picture screens, by circulars and letters to ministers and newspaper men of the neighborhood. The collection of negro literature was materially increased, particularly to include books on African history and race culture. Prominent negroes and white men interested in the colored race are taking advantage of the opportunity offered by the weekly library forum to speak to neighborhood groups on economic and race problems.

Mr. Rodman Wanamaker has arranged with the Library to lend one of his collections of pictures by Tanner, the colored artist. A copy of the Shaw Memorial is being placed on the walls of the Branch, and pictures by colored artists are shown from time to time.

The interest is shown by the increase in circulation, — a gain of 18 per cent. for the months from July to December, 1920. The registration figure in August showed 135th Street Branch to be among the first five of the Manhattan Branches in the acquisition of new readers. Since then the registration has shown a steady growth.

But the most gratifying feature of the work is the confidence of the colored patrons, indicated by constant interviews, invitations to speak and unsolicited newspaper publicity. Some valuable gifts testify also to this confidence.

A portrait of Booker T. Washington and a rare copy of Woolf's painting of the "Fighting 15th" were presented by Mr. Moore, editor of the New York Age. An original painting "The Three Wise Men" was given by Mr. Arthur Harris. A valuable addition to the Music collection was made by Mr. Harry Burleigh, by his gift of a full set of the Negro Spirituals, adapted by himself.

MUSIC COLLECTION

The year has shown an increase in the circulation of music. It has been decided to make the 58th Street Branch the music center of the system, owing to its situation and the size of its collection. A small room on the ground floor of the building has been appropriated for the shelving of the collection, and the experiment has justified itself. The interest among the musicians and the music-loving public has been marked, and the circulation in the 58th Street Branch (noticeably in the last three months) has more than doubled. It is hoped that throughout the system this growth may soon be seen, but unfortunately the cost of music prevents an extensive purchase.

Interest in the music section at the 58th Street Branch, shown by several well-known patrons of music, has resulted in starting a fund known as the "Music Library Fund," which is in the custody of Mrs. George Montgomery Tuttle as treasurer. Purchases from this fund, both here and abroad, have added to the collection many modern compositions. These include French, English, and American songs, compositions for violin, viola and cello, and works for piano, including some for two pianos. In the department of chamber music, trios, string quartettes and quintettes have been largely purchased.

A collection of organ music has been started, and materially assisted by a generous gift, from Mr. H. W. Gray, of 172 titles of new works for the organ. Several important gifts of books on musical subjects, notably works on modern orchestration, have also been received.

From Library funds substantial additions have been made to the list of miniature orchestral scores, and there are now on the shelves at the 58th Street Branch copies of most of the classic symphonies, overtures, and chamber music. All of them may be borrowed in the usual way.

LIBRARY SCHOOL

In June, 1921, the Library School will complete its first decade of work. Beginning with only a Faculty and quarters, it now has a large body of loyal graduates and commands recognition everywhere. In June it will have sent out approximately 300 certificate holders, and 160 students who, in addition to completing the work of the junior year here or at some other library school, have pursued the second year's study. Of the 388 persons who have been enrolled, 194, exactly one half, have at some time held positions on the Staff of The New York Public Library. Some of these are still connected with the Library, while the rest are scattered over the United States and in various foreign countries, and are engaged in diverse forms of library work.

The general plan of the School's work has remained fairly constant throughout its history, and the only recent change of importance has been to concentrate the senior courses into a three-month period devoted wholly to instruction, and to throw open certain of these courses to properly qualified auditors. The result of this auditor system in 1919-1920 showed very marked interest in the plan, for the individual registration was approximately 150 and the class registration approximately 250.

An important feature of the School work in 1919-1920 was a series of evening lectures on books, given by speakers of prominence. The list of lecturers included, among others, Mr. W. W. Ellsworth, Miss Jessie Rittenhouse, and Dean Cross of Yale University. For 1920-1921 it includes among others, Dr. John Kelman, Mr. Allen T. Burns, Mr. S. K. Ratcliffe, Dr. Herbert Adams Gibbons, Miss Ida M. Tarbell, Mr. Henry Seidel Canby, Mr. Frank I. Cobb, and Mr. Lowell Brentano. The Wednesday afternoon social hours conducted in the school years 1919-1920 and 1920-1921, have also given opportunity for students and members of the Staff to hear and meet a large number of persons of literary eminence.

At the commencement, June 11, 1920, there were awarded twenty-three certificates and three diplomas. The address of the day was given by Professor A. S. Root, Librarian of Oberlin College, who while on leave from Oberlin in 1916-1917, served as principal of the Library School.

THE STAFF

The "extra-library" activities of the Staff have been as numerous and interesting as usual. Staff meetings were held frequently, and on two evenings in May a troop of actors from the Staff gave in dramatic form a humorous presentation of library work in an oriental land, as seen by Mr. Gamble, the chief of the Division of Science and Technology, who was the playwright. Within the year a cooperative store was opened by the Staff, selling at cost many articles of food and clothing and thus helping to solve some of the problems of high prices. The store did a cash business of over eighteen thousand dollars in the first six months of its existence, and ended the year with nearly six hundred dollars of undivided profits.

With so many visitors to the Central Building in the course of the year, there are, of course, occasional accidents, most of them fortunately rather slight. During the year Miss Leavitt, who looks after these emergency cases, attended to 186 calls, ranging from minor injuries to ambulance cases.

This report has been compiled from information supplied by Staff officers. Despite a number of conditions which have hampered the Library in the past year, two advantages have remained constant, if they have not actually increased. These are the care and attention given by the Trustees to innumerable details of the work, and the faithful and intelligent service of the Staff.

Respectfully Submitted,

E. H. ANDERSON,

Director.

(Central Building)

FOR THE YEAR ENDING DECEMBER 31, 1920

The year of 1920 marks the tenth year of the operation of the building including the five months before it was open to the public. A statistical table of attendance and costs shows how both attendance and costs have increased.

YEAR	NUMBER OF VISITORS TO THE BUILDING	TOTAL COST OF OPERATION OF BUILDING	COST OF REPAIRS (INCLUDED IN PRECEDING COLUMN)
1912.....	2,129,078	117,540.88	2,100.00
1913.....	2,102,824	101,776.31	21,000.00
1914.....	2,380,504	132,607.70	48,500.00
1915.....	2,558,717	113,984.28	36,600.00
1916.....	2,439,565	116,931.35	39,400.00
1917.....	2,796,530	116,142.40	39,400.00
1918.....	2,528,657	134,582.70	45,200.00
1919.....	2,478,626	146,835.76	42,600.00
1920.....	2,696,609	172,049.52	55,000.00*

* This sum does not include $9,055.80 expended for new cases in Spencer Room.

The attendance has grown both in visitors and in readers. In the main reading room the hourly count shows more readers than seats almost every Saturday and Sunday from 3 to 7 p. m. In the other reading rooms we regularly supply hundreds of extra chairs on these busy days.

Properly to care for the increased number of readers many changes have been made. Among the most noteworthy are the glass screens in the north end of the hall on the first floor, providing a single entrance for Science, Technology, Patents and Chemistry rooms. A glass screen, in the north end of the second floor, provides a single entrance for Documents, and Economics rooms. On the second floor a new door was cut into Room 228.

A new set of catalogue cases were constructed for the gallery in the main catalogue room. This increases the number of drawers for cataloguing by 1,653. Seven new bookcases were constructed for the Central Circulation Branch. New exhibition cases designed by Mr. Stokes were built for the Spencer Collection in Room 322. The total cost of all alterations and building repairs was $64,055.80, of which $55,000.00 was provided for in the City budget and $7,500.00 on a special appropriation by the City.

The crying need is for a new booklift between the stacks and the main reading room. The present equipment is almost at the breaking point; repairs are a constant cause of expense in labor and material and of delay in service. The congestion in the main reading room will grow worse until radical improvements are made in the elevator equipment.

It cost $27,693.87 to clean 358,400 square feet of floor space and 35,800 square feet of glass. To guard three entrances, four exhibition rooms, to pay two extra guards for halls and three watchmen costs $9,912.31. To operate three elevators costs $3,383.30. To furnish washroom facilities, towels, soap and paper and attendance costs $7,603.78. The coatroom facilities for two entrances from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m., costs $4,336.10. Because of excessive cost we were unable to buy uniforms or overalls for employees last year. The total cost for ice and refrigeration was $576.40.

The Library electric light plant has now been in operation for ten years, and inasmuch as the cost of coal and labor have increased enormously since its installation and a number of important repairs are required, the Board of Trustees appointed a committee to investigate and recommend the most efficient course to pursue. The question was primarily whether the Library should purchase current from the Edison Company or continue the operation of its plant. The Trustees, upon the recommendation of this Committee, decided to continue to operate the Library plant, and the wisdom of their choice is borne out by the following:

The actual cost of light, heat and power as generated by the Library was $54,197.14. There were generated 1,708,800 kilowatt-hours of electric current; multiplying this by 2.3 cents (the cost of current if purchased) would give us the figure $39,302.40. If we add to this the cost of heating as estimated by the Edison Company (with the cost of coal at the average price of $8.05 which it did cost instead of $7.05 estimated), or $28,719.00 per year, a grand total of $68,021.40 would have been spent. A saving of $13,824.36 for the year, including the salary of the chief engineer, is effected by the library plant. The office expenses for supervision amounts to $5,574.70 and should be divided between the janitors', repair and engineering divisions.

The above table does not include annuals and biennials received by gift, 15,625, and by Bulletin Exchange, 472.

"Miscellaneous" includes current periodicals from the following countries: Arabia, Central America, China, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, Estonia, Finland, Greece, Hungary, Latvia, Monaco, Persia, Poland, Rumania, Santo Domingo, Turkey.

Statistics for Austria, Belgium, Germany, Russia, and Miscellaneous, represent a recent, including only periodicals actually received in 1920. The net loss since 1916, the last time a report was made on these countries, is: Belgium 72, Germany and Austria, 951, Russia, 131.

Of the three Russian periodicals reported as current, one is from Archangel and two from Vladivostok.

GIFTS

DURING the month of March, 1921, the Library received as gifts a total of 2,319 volumes, 3,584 pamphlets, 302 maps and 41 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

From Messrs. Horace S. Ely and Company came a collection of city and business directories, real estate atlases of New York City and Brooklyn, etc., 301 volumes in all; from Mr. George J. Hecht, a large collection of newspaper cartoons issued during the world war; from the Estate of George A. Church, Providence, R. I. (through the kind offices of Mr. J. A. Joffe), a large collection of theatre and opera programmes and newspaper clippings; from Mr. Robert C. Auld, 4 volumes, 46 pamphlets, and 11 photographs, mainly relating to the Oneida Community; and from Mr. Edward W. Sheldon, a miscellaneous collection of books and pamphlets, comprising 471 volumes and 58 pamphlets and including a file of the Commercial and Financial Chronicle in 60 volumes, club reports, etc.

From the Estate of Daniel O'Dell came two old family Bibles, containing family records; from Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., came a copy of the privately printed monograph, "The Altoviti Aphrodite," by Welles Bosworth, Baltimore, 1920; and from M. Charles Sedelmeyer, Paris, came four volumes of the catalogue of his collection of pictures sold at auction in 1907.

Among the interesting governmental and society publications received were the following: From His Imperial Japanese Majesty's Government-General, Seoul, Korea, a copy of the Korean Phrase Dictionary, compiled and published by the Governor General of Chosen, 1920 (in Chinese, Japanese and Korean languages); from the Minister of Agriculture, Brussels, Belgium, a collection of publications concerning the agricultural situation in Belgium (7 volumes, 10 pamphlets, and 20 periodicals); from the Friends of Ukraine, Washington, D. C., a collection of the newly-issued postage stamps of the Ukrainian People's Republic, comprising 14 stamps, with a brief description of each; from the Ligue des Universitaires Serbo-Croato-Slovenes, Paris, 15 numbers of the "Revue Yougoslave," and a collection of other publications relating to Serbia, Bulgaria, etc.

Mr. W. G. Reindel gave the Library two of his wood-engravings, entitled "Sunlit Woods" and "Absorbed." Mr. R. H. Sommer, Newark, N. J., gave two reproductions of his portraits of President Harding and Gen. John J. Pershing.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN MARCH, 1921

DURING the month of March, 1921, there were received at the Library 17,735 volumes and 5,187 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 106,463. They consulted 244,594 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 280,059.

"As a record of the scientific treatment of economical sewage-raising, and consequently as a guide to engineers engaged in similar undertakings, this handbook should prove of the greatest value."—Technical review, Feb. 15, 1921.

Crook, Thomas. Economic mineralogy, a practical guide to the study of useful minerals... London and New York: Longmans, Green & Co., 1921. xi, 492 p. illus. 8°. PWD (117)

Unusually attractive, written from the utilitarian standpoint. Discusses crystals, crystal optics, geology, classification, and chemical examination of minerals; physical analysis of crushed rock, ores and gems. Chapter 11 treats, more or less briefly, of a large number of economic minerals, such as asbestos, building stones, cement materials, clays, coals, graphite, moulding sands, petroleum, rare earths, etc. Excellent determinative tables. Fully indexed and beautifully illustrated.

Simple, comprehensive text-book covering capacity and efficiency, the electrolyte, plate insulation, jars, hard rubber parts, terminals and connectors, trays, charging and discharging, also repairs, packing, putting batteries in service, taking them out of service, inspection and testing. Well illustrated.

Du Parc, Louis, and MARGUERITE N. TRONOWITCH. Le platine et les gites platinifères de l'Oural et du monde. Genève: Société anonyme des éditions Sonor, 1920. 552 p. illus. 4°. PWK (117)

Dr. Kunz, in Science for April 23d, 1920, pronounces this the most complete and authoritative work on the subject. Dr. Du Parc, who is professor of chemistry and petrology in the University of Geneva, spent three years in the Ural mountains and it is the deposits of that region that are emphasized, although there is valuable information concerning other parts of the world. The chapters on refining are comprehensive. There are statistics covering the years 1824 to 1915, as well as extensive bibliographies.

"The geological maps... are models of accuracy and valuable guides for similar investigations. The illustrations are generally clear and good; particular interest attaches to those of famous platinum nuggets which have vanished during the Russian revolution."—A. L. Simon in Mining magazine, March, 1921.

"...It is evident from the volume now available that a remarkably effective piece of engineering literature has been produced. For a great while it has been evident that one of the main troubles with concrete construction is the lack of appreciation on the part of the worker and of his foreman of the essentials of concrete theory and practice. These men are 'practical' men, with all of the faults which that adjective implies. There has been great need for their education, but just how such an education is to be conducted has been difficult to see. Professors Hatt and Voss have attacked this problem. Their book is intended for just such men, as well as for those who are entering the concrete business for the first time with no previous technical knowledge or practical experience. Whether the book is useful for self instruction is doubtful, but with proper direction it certainly

Lamb, Horace. Higher mechanics. Cambridge (England): University Press, 1920. x, 272 p. illus. 8°. PBC (117)

Professor Lamb, lately professor of Manchester University, has contributed largely to the literature on advanced mechanics. This book treats of three dimensional kinematics, statics and dynamics, and is a sequel to the author's earlier books on these subjects. The mathematics require familiarity with differential equations.

Gossipy, interesting story covering the getting, farming, marketing, and dressing of skins. Chapters on broadtail, Persian lamb, astrachan, and krimmer, fur seal, silver fox, etc. Appendix gives laws of United States and Canada, revised to date, on seasons for different furs, laws to preserve game, fur farms, licenses and royalties to game wardens. Part 2 gives history of Hudson Bay Co., picturesque studies on the taking of the beaver, making of moccasins, the Indian trapper, etc.

Lempfert, R. G. K. Meteorology. London: Methuen & Co., Ltd. [1920.] x, 186 p. illus. 12°. PRB (117)

In view of the recently recognized importance of meteorology as demonstrated in the war, good books on the subject are very acceptable. The present volume, by the assistant director of the British Meteorological Office, is written in a popular vein, describes methods of weather forecasting and incorporates results derived from new methods of observation, viz.: by means of kites and balloons.

"We have no hesitation in saying that this volume will be deemed in every way a fit companion to Professor Low's well-known and excellent treatises on machine drawing, practical geometry, and applied mechanics. It is distinguished by the same lucid treatment, the same comprehensiveness, the same excellence of the illustrations and general arrangement."—Engineer, March 11, 1921.

"Those students who have already been taught how to think, how to recognize the wood in spite of the trees, how to exercise their critical faculty, will doubtless find Professor Low's volume of use for general reference; but as an introduction of the young intellect to a new subject, it cannot be regarded as suitable."—Times engineering supplement, Dec., 1920.

This attractive work "undertakes to assist the reader in acquiring the technic of stenciling in several mediums upon various surfaces. Detailed descriptions are given of the materials and equipment used; also of the various processes employed in using the different mediums for stenciling, together with many drawings and photographs of stenciled objects, suitable for home and school work. It includes selected problems appropriate for the different grades in the elementary school and in the high school."—Preface.

This well-illustrated guide is supplied with problems and questions. "Its main object is to reduce as much as possible the time required to bring a student with no previous shop experience to a point where he is able to do some real work. For this purpose the problems have been designed with a view of giving the student the maximum amount of information in the small amount of time usually allowed for this purpose. . . . It is assumed that beginners will receive oral instruction on the manipulation, such as shifting the belt, handling the feed control, etc." Author is instructor in shop practice at Leland Stanford University.

"Unfortunately, from the standpoint of efficient steam generation, the statement is too frequently accepted as true that theoretical generalizations and mathematical formulae are of but little value to the operating engineer. To an extent, such statements may be true, but on the other hand it is to be remembered that combustion is purely a chemical phenomenon and as such can be properly investigated and controlled only by chemical means."—Preface.

These means are outlined in this well-printed volume.

This little book is free from technical discussion. The ore is followed from its occurrence through the processes of refining to the finished metal and pigment. The history of lead is outlined from the first mention in the book of Numbers down through the ages. The use of lead compounds in medicine and lead poisoning is treated in the last chapter. The illustrations are attractive, those of ancient methods being taken from Agricola, and the modern methods illustrated by photographs.

"The endeavor has been to include all details which the chemist should have to enable him to grasp the methods of manufacture, but it is not intended to be a treatise on paper making in all its mechanical phases, and in fact the mechanical features of the industry are discussed only in so far as they are necessary for a satisfactory understanding of the chemistry involved. It has been written chiefly with the idea of helping the young technical man... and it has been assumed that the reader has a fair knowledge of the elements of chemistry."—Preface.

"Mr. Sutermeister, as chief chemist of one of the largest pulp and paper manufacturing concerns in America, has had exceptional opportunities to devise, investigate and adapt methods of analysis that bear especially on the manufacture of paper and the treatment of raw materials for paper, and this work, therefore, has a very practical application."—T. REFERENCE BOOKS

Allen, Frederick J. A guide to the study of occupation; a selected critical bibliography of the common occupations with specific references for their study. Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1921. 183 p. 8°.

A bibliography of educational and vocational guidance for public school classes, college students, and libraries. Consists for the most part of analyticals from books and reports. Under occupations arranged by classes. An alphabetical list of books with information sufficient for ordering and critical notes form a third of the volume. Material is given on the following occupations, each subdivided: agriculture, forestry and animal industry; extraction of minerals; manufacturing and mechanical industries; transportation; trade; public service; professional service; domestic and personal service; clerical occupations. Indexed.

Anglo-South American handbook for 1921 (incorporating Mexico and Central America), edited by W. H. Koebel. London: Fisher Unwin, Ltd. [192-] 929 p. 12°.

Published under the auspices of the Federation of British Industries, with the purpose of serving persons or firms established in South America, those in Great Britain who have business relations or propose to establish connections with South America, and the general public. The first issue of what is planned as a commercial year book with much detailed and general information, arranged by country and well indexed. Contains also a directory of selected firms and a bibliography.

Anuario de sociedades anónimas; estudio económico-financiero de las existentes en España; edición de "Ilustración financiera"; director, José García Ceballos; años 1-3, 1918-1921. Madrid: Rodriguez San Pedro, 1919-21. 3 v. 8°.

A new Spanish financial year book, three volumes of which have appeared since the war. Similar to Poor's or Moody's Manuals except that the information is not so detailed. The first 50 to 100 pages is devoted to a resumé of the financial situation during the year just passed, including agriculture, mines, industry, commerce and navigation, banks, stock exchange, railways, treasury department, and the public debt. Contains a classified index.

Cambridge history of American literature, edited by W. P. Trent, John Erskine, S. P. Sherman, Carl Van Doren; in four volumes, v. 3-4. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1921. 8°.

The last two volumes of this important work, the first two of which appeared in 1917-18, are divided into Later national literature: part II (volume 3) and Later national literature: part III (volume 4). Literature is considered in its broadest scope as in the first two volumes, including such topics as newspapers and magazines, and giving attention to such purely American literary manifestations as "Cowboy poets," "Gold in California" and George M. Cohan's plays. About half of volume 4 is devoted to bibliographies of the subjects covered by the various chapter headings of the whole work. An important section of the bibliography is devoted to "Non-English writings." Index to last two volumes in v. 4, but none to the bibliographies.

Davis, Franklyn Pierre, editor. Anthology of newspaper verse for 1919, and year book of newspaper poetry. Enid, Oklahoma: The F. P. Davis Company, 1920. 162 p. 12°.

An attempt to cull from the great mass of verse which appears yearly in the press of the United States that which seems worthy of preservation. Of doubtful literary value, but if continued would probably prove of reference value. An index to poets and poems, a biographical index, and the "year of newspaper poetry, 1919" are included.

Swinburne's proof sheets and American first editions; bibliographical data relating to a few of the publications of Algernon Charles Swinburne, with notes on the priority of certain claimants to the distinction of "editio princeps." Cambridge, Mass.: Privately printed, 1920. 31 p. 12°.

Intended as a supplement to the bibliography of Swinburne compiled by Thomas J. Wise, London, 1919. Material in the Harvard College Library, The Boston Public Library, the private collection of Mr. E. K. Butler of Jamaica Plain, and owners of collections in New York City, unknown to Mr. Wise, have been described here.

Quarry, W. Edmund. Dictionary of musical compositions and composers; with a copious bibliography. London: George Routledge & Sons, 1920. 192 p. 12°.

An alphabetical list of titles of the more important operatic, orchestral, instrumental, choral, and lyric compositions, giving name of composer, kind of work, and date of composition. Proposes to include any musical composition that can claim some degree of musical value, fame, or permanent notoriety, and any work that may be of interest to the music student or antiquary.

A second section is devoted to biographical sketches of prominent musicians and a third to a very good musical bibliography of fundamental works.

Reference catalogue of current literature, containing the full titles of books now in print and on sale with the prices at which they may be obtained at all booksellers; and an index containing about two hundred thousand references. London: J. Whitaker & Sons, Ltd., 1920. 3 v. obl. 12°.

The volumes were not delivered until 1921, and the date 1921 is stamped on the outside of the cover. The latest edition of this well-known English trade catalogue, the previous edition having appeared in 1913.

Severance, Henry Ormal, compiler. A guide to the current periodicals and serials of the United States and Canada. Fourth edition, 1920. Ann Arbor, Mich.: George Wahr, publisher, 1920. 564 p. 8°.

A new edition of a well-known work, mentioned here because it does not appear at regular intervals. The last previous edition was that of 1914. The compiler states that the work is thoroughly revised; that all titles have been verified, or appear in late lists of current periodicals; that government publications of the war period are retained even if no longer published; and that the present edition contains 12,000 titles, an increase of 25% over the third edition. An additional feature of Part II is a list of trade journals and house organs.

United States.—Geological Survey. World atlas of commercial geology. Part I. Distribution of mineral production. Washington, 1921. 88 p., 72 pl. ob. 12°.

"To set forth graphically and to describe concisely the basic facts concerning both the present and future sources of the useful minerals is the purpose of this atlas." The output of essential minerals in 1913 has been used to show the distribution of production. Statistics of 1918 given in the case of the United States.

Text with information and statistics accompanies maps which show location of mineral deposits. "The 72 plates are arranged in groups of eight, each group including maps of three kinds: (1) a map of the world, on which the production and for major commodities the consumption of countries are shown in percentages of the world's output in 1913...; (2) maps of continents, on which the production is shown of countries, districts or fields, again in percentages of the world's output in 1913, and (3) a map of the United States on which more geographic detail is possible and on which production is shown by states, fields, or districts in percentages of the output of the United States in 1918."

"The word trionfo was applied to a definite kind of processions which arose in Italy and thence spread to the rest of Europe, and as the word is derived from the ancient triumph and relates thereto, so does it also comprise the various symbolical meanings which in the Christian era were gradually connected with this conception... It is a renaissance problem." —Preface.

CHAPTER XVII

The Circulation Department

The preceding chapter concerned itself with what was for five years the whole library and later became the Reference Department of the library; reference to the important activities of the Circulation Department was but casual or incidental. We shall now see how this latter phase of the work developed into a very important portion of the library's activities.

That circulation work would be carried on by the new institution had been assumed from the start. Article two of the agreement of consolidation provided that "the said new corporation shall establish and maintain a free public library and reading-room in the City of New York, with such branches as may be deemed advisable." Mr. Andrew H. Green had brought up the matter at an early stage and it was with no little difficulty that he had been convinced that more pressing problems lay at hand. All the trustees were eager for the work and most of them recognized it was merely a matter of waiting for the fitting time.

That time seemed to have come in 1900. On June 20 of that year Hon. Bird S. Coler, Comptroller of the City of New York, wrote to Mr. Cadwalader that he had heard the question of consolidation of the various circulation systems had been under consideration. He expressed a double interest in the question, first from the point of view of the libraries and second from the point of view of the City, and then went on to say he felt the old system of paying ten cents per volume of circulation had its disadvantages and the system of a sliding scale had been severely criticized. He felt that before the City made large appropriations for library purposes it should have before it facts acquired by a careful investigation, and he asked if the "trustees of the New York Public Library would be willing to undertake an investigation of the various free circulating libraries in this City, their plants, financial resources, methods and purposes of disbursement and general character of work performed, as well as the principles which should govern the Board of Estimate and Apportionment in appropriating public funds for these purposes." If the Library could not make such a report before October 1 when the Board of Estimate took up the budget he would have the investigation made by the employees of the Department of Finance, but he preferred to have the Library undertake the task.

To this Mr. Cadwalader as Chairman of the Executive Committee replied on July 11, accepting, and proposing that the investigation should include "data relative to location, character of building, hours of service, number and character of books in stock, purchased, including gifts, number and character of books circulated, expenses properly classified, employees' duties and salaries, amount and sources of independent income, methods of cataloguing and accounting for books, protection against fire."

The Director thereupon sent a schedule of questions to the following fourteen libraries in Manhattan, asking for a return by July 20:

New York Free Circulating Library, Aguilar Free Library Society, Washington Heights Free Library, St. Agnes Free Library, Harlem Library, New York Free Circulating Library for the Blind, Cathedral Free Library, Maimonides Free Circulating Library; Tenement House Chapter, 48 Henry Street; Webster Free Library, University Settlement Society Free Circulating Library, Young Men's Benevolent Association Free Circulating Library, General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen.

As a result of these schedules Dr. Billings submitted to the Executive Committee a report dated September 15, 1900. A table appended showed in detail for each of the fourteen — except that the General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen made no return — the location and character of buildings, whether owned or rented, estimated value or rent paid, number of volumes January 1, 1900, number added during the first six months of 1900, their cost, amount of the appropriation from the City for 1900, amount of income from other sources, number of persons employed, amount paid for salaries during the first six months of 1900, number of books lost or stolen, hours of opening, number of volumes lent during the first six months of 1900, and during the year ended June 30, 1900, and the average number of persons using the reference reading room daily.

The report showed that to the thirteen corporations reporting the City paid for 1900 the sum of $142,369.30. Assuming a contribution from other sources of about $47,000, the total expenditure would be $189,459.70, which would give for the 3,000,000 volumes circulated a cost of less than six cents per volume. "This is a low average — too low, in fact — and indicates either the purchase of an undue proportion of small cheap books or the payment of inadequate salaries to attendants, or both. A proper cost would be about seven cents per volume circulated.* The libraries reporting contain in all about 425,000 volumes, so that each volume on the average is loaned about seven times a year."

It pointed out that the principle of basing appropriations on a fixed rate per volume circulated was faulty, tending to discourage purchase of larger and more expensive works in history, biography, travel, science, etc., and tending also to discourage expenditure on reading rooms and their works of reference. It would be unwise to base appropriations on the actual cost of circulation, for nothing would be left, under such conditions for additions or extensions to plant, establishment of new centres, or improvement of the quality of circulation. At least eight new circulation centres were urgently needed.

Six of the libraries were engaged solely in circulation of books, the others were connected with settlement houses or similar institutions having library work but one of their activities.

The libraries on the lower East Side circulated large numbers of school text books as well as much larger numbers of juvenile fiction. A better class was circulated by the more northern libraries. Books bought by the Aguilar library cost 54.2 cents per volume, by Harlem 73 cents, Washington Heights $1.10, Cathedral $1.16, the Y. W. C. A. $1.40, the University Settlement $1.41. The point was made that these figures could not be taken as final and must serve rather as suggestion for further studies; they might indicate purchase of better books and on the other hand they might indicate possession of better and shrewder buying powers.

"About half of the libraries are not open on Sunday, the remainder are open for a few hours on Sunday. So far as the circulation of books is concerned, there is no particular benefit in opening the libraries on Sunday, since borrowers can obtain all the books they want on Saturday afternoons and evenings, and the extra expense of attendants in the lending departments for Sunday work is out of all proportion to the good accomplished. The case is different as to the reading-rooms, for these will be much used on Sunday."

* In 1919 the cost was 9 cents per volume and in 1920 it rose to 12 cents.

Dr. Billings reported further that in general he found the libraries well managed, the books fairly good in character and condition, conveniently classified, with good catalogues, well kept loan records, and intelligent, courteous, and zealous attendants.

Taking them as a whole he felt the great defect was the absence of any system of accountability for city funds, and of any uniform system of reports or returns to show the character of work done and to allow comparison of one with another. City funds should be applied first to the purchase and treatment of books for general circulation and reference, second to the salaries of persons engaged in furnishing these books to the public, third to expenses of central supervision. Funds from other sources might be used for providing buildings or rooms, for purchase of books that were necessary but not suited for general circulation, for salaries of persons not engaged exclusively in free circulating library work.

On September 24 the Executive Committee forwarded to the Comptroller this report of the Director, their own comments pointing out that the general character of circulation was good, the staff efficient and satisfactory, though underpaid. Each library was independent of the others, did its work with no reference to the others, and the smaller ones were without the benefit of the knowledge and work of the better paid experts employed by the larger ones.

“The great defect in the present method of supplying free circulation of books to the people of New York is the want of a definite system of co-ordination of the several agencies employed, and the absence of satisfactory supervision or accountability.” Moreover, as the appropriations were based solely on the volume of circulation certified as approved by the Regents of the University of the State of New York, any attempt to furnish expensive reference books was not only a heavy charge on the current funds, but it lessened the basis of payment for the future.

The Committee set forth the advantages of a consolidation of the six libraries having as their sole object the supplying free reading matter to the public, and of having the other libraries carry on their library work under a uniform system of expenditure, cataloguing, accountability, and inspection. Books bought from city funds should be handled from one central office, which should also supervise the general work of the branches. The City appropriation would probably be best made in gross for expenditure by the central office with such forms of accounting as the Comptroller might specify. “The most effective and economical method for providing such a central authority will be to place this work under the direction of some one of the organizations now in existence, where skilled service and supervision may be obtained practically without increased cost.”

The Committee concluded by making four recommendations, as follows:

“I. That the Municipal Authorities of New York should make appropriation for free public libraries in the City for the year 1901, under such conditions and restrictions as will ensure the organization of a definite central system of work with satisfactory supervision and accountability.

“II. That one of the existing library corporations in the City be requested to undertake the organization of such a system, the details as regards forms of accountability for funds and property being subject to the approval of the Comptroller.

“III. That the corporation selected to devise the system referred to should also act as the central authority for the approval of the objects of expenditure for each of the several libraries entitled to grants of funds under the State library law, for making systematic inspections of such libraries with reference to the character and amount of the work done by each, and that it should make a full report to the municipal authorities of what has been done during the year, with recommendations as it may deem best.

“IV. While it may be possible at some future time to organize a general system applicable to Greater New York it is not expedient, in our judgment, at this time to do more than include in the proposed system the Boroughs of Manhattan and The Bronx.”

The advantages — not to say necessity — of a unified, central control had, of course, long been apparent to thoughtful persons. The first formal step towards this end came from the New York Free Circulating Library for the Blind, which had expressed a hope of cooperation as early as February 8, 1897, as already set forth. On April 7, 1900, Mrs. Clara A. Williams, Secretary of the Library for the Blind, made formal application for affiliation with the New York Public Library, explaining that for some years quarters had been granted them free of rent in St. Agnes' Parish House, on West 91st Street. Growth of the parish work would force them from these rooms by November 1. If they could be assured of a permanent home in the new building for the Library they would doubtless be able to secure means for maintenance until their new home should be ready.

Matters were not ripe for formal action at this time and the question was held in abeyance for some two years so far as the Library for the Blind was concerned.

The next step — after the survey made by Dr. Billings during the summer of 1900 — came from the New York Free Circulating Library. On December 11, 1900, the trustees of that library adopted resolutions offering to consolidate on two conditions, first that the property of the circulating library was to be kept separate, to be devoted to circulation purposes, and that the trusts assumed by it were to be at all times preserved and faithfully administered; second, that reasonable representation on the board of trustees was to be accorded the circulating library.

The trustees of the New York Public Library approved the consolidation on December 12, and referred to the Executive Committee the subject of consolidation not only with the Free Circulating Library, but with any other corporation engaged in circulation in the Boroughs of Manhattan and The Bronx, "with power to consider and report upon the details, and to prepare the necessary agreements and take such other steps as may be required to perfect a consolidation and to carry on, after such consolidation, the work of the circulating libraries."

An agreement for consolidation was prepared under the provisions of chapter 541 of the laws of 1892 as amended by chapter 209 of the laws of 1895, under which the consolidation of the Astor and Lenox libraries with the Tilden trust had been effected. Formal ratification of the agreement was made by the trustees of the New York Free Circulating Library at their monthly meeting on January 8, 1901, and the members of the society ratified this action on February 19. The agreement of consolidation was filed with the Secretary of State at Albany on February 23 and on the 25th organization was completed under the articles of agreement. Dr. Thomas M. Markoe resigned from the Board on account of ill health and Mr. W. W. Appleton was elected in his place. A special committee on circulation was appointed, consisting of Mr. Appleton as chairman and Messrs. H. E. Howland, F. W. Stevens, J. F. Kernochan, Charles Scribner, F. C. Huntington, and Alexander Maitland.

At this time the New York Free Circulating Library held cash and securities amounting to about $300,000; it owned five buildings valued at $300,000, and about 160,000 volumes valued at $75,000. With eleven branches it circulated 1,634,523 volumes per annum. Mr. J. Norris Wing, chief librarian, died December 20, 1900. The vacancy was filled by the appointment of Dr. A. E. Bostwick, who had followed Miss Coe as librarian, then left to become librarian of the newly-formed Brooklyn Public Library and now was called back to Manhattan, assuming his new duties as chief of the circulation department on February 1, 1901.

In the consolidation of 1895 and in that of 1901 the law required that a new corporation be set up, with election of officers, passage of by-laws, opening of a new set of treasury books, etc. To avoid this an act facilitating the consolidation of libraries in New York City was passed by the legislature then in session, becoming a law on March 6, 1901, as chapter 57 of the laws of that year. Under it any library is authorized to transfer all its real and personal property to the New York Public Library upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon between the two institutions, and the Regents of the University of the State of New York, on being satisfied that this has been done, may accept a surrender of the charter of the corporation so conveying its property and discharge its directors or trustees from their trusts in the premises.

While these steps towards expansion of the work were under way another phase of library extension was proposed. On November 14, 1900, the trustees received a letter from the President of the New York City Board of Education, Miles M. O'Brien, suggesting cooperation between the Board of Education and the Library in the establishment of reading rooms in public school buildings. The matter was referred to the Executive Committee, which conferred with a special committee, representing the Board of Education. As a result Mr. O'Brien wrote on December 10 that the Board would furnish the necessary accommodations for libraries in eight public school buildings and would pay for attendants, lights, and other expenses, if the Library would furnish the books and periodicals for circulation and for reference use.

This proposal was accepted by the trustees on December 12, when $8,000 was appropriated for books and periodicals in 1901. The Executive Committee was given power to settle details in connection with the special committee of the Board of Education.

The following eight schools were named for the experiment: no. 30 at 230 East 88th Street; no. 90 at 163rd Street and Eagle Avenue; no. 160 at Rivington and Suffolk Streets; no. 33 at 418 West 28th Street; no. 44 (new) at Hubert and Collister Streets; no. 119 at 135th Street near 8th Avenue; no. 155 at Tremont and Anthony Avenues; no. 177 at Market and Monroe Streets.

Rules for the classification in the civil service of librarians and attendants in these reading rooms were drawn up, submitted to the State Civil Service Commission, and approved by them in March. Examinations were held by the Municipal Civil Service Commission on April 17, restricted to persons in the employ of the New York Public Library or the New York Free Circulating Library for at least one year for librarians and six months for attendants. As a result librarians and attendants were appointed for four rooms and on June 24 rooms in the first four schools listed above were opened. Each was supplied with about 400 volumes and with 38 monthly and 61 weekly periodicals. The hopes raised by this experiment bore no great fruit. The Board of Education found no grounds for continuing the work beyond 1901 and with the end of the year the rooms were closed. Their stock of books was absorbed by the branches and an interesting experiment was closed. The idea was most commendable and it is quite possible that if the Carnegie gift had not been forthcoming, if the circulation department had not had the promise of such rapid extension, these school reading rooms might have played a larger part in the library history of the city than they did.

The Carnegie gift came as the result of extended conferences between Mr. Carnegie and Dr. Billings. It was set forth in the following letter from Mr. Carnegie:

NEW YORK, 12th March, 1901..

DR. JOHN S. BILLINGS,
Director, New York Public Library.

DEAR DR. BILLINGS:

Our conferences upon the needs of Greater New York for Branch Libraries to reach the masses of the people in every district have convinced me of the wisdom of your plans.

Sixty-one branches strike one at first as a very large order, but as other cities have found one necessary for every sixty or seventy thousand of population the number is not excessive.

You estimate the average cost of these libraries at, say, $80,000 each, being $5,200,000 for all. If New York will furnish sites for these branches for the special benefit of the masses of the people, as it has done for the Central Library, and also agree in satisfactory form to provide for their maintenance as built, I should esteem it a rare privilege to be permitted to furnish the money as needed for the buildings, say, $5,200,000. Sixty-five libraries at one stroke probably breaks the record, but this is the day of big operations and New York is soon to be the biggest of cities.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) ANDREW CARNEGIE.

The Trustees forwarded Mr. Carnegie's letter to the Mayor, accompanied with the following letter:

NEW YORK, 15th March, 1901.

HON. ROBERT A. VAN WYCK,
Mayor, &c., &c.

DEAR SIR:

By direction of the Board of Trustees of The New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations, I have the honor to hand you herewith a copy of a letter which we received, through our Director, Dr. John S. Billings, from Mr. Andrew Carnegie, on the 13th inst., the day of his sailing for Europe.

You will observe that Mr. Carnegie offers to bear the expense of building a large number of branch libraries, at an estimated total cost of five million, two hundred thousand dollars, provided the City will furnish the necessary land, and provided satisfactory arrangements can be made for the maintenance of these branches. There are no other conditions.

I am instructed to say that if the City authorities look with favor upon the general plan, our Board of Trustees will hold itself in readiness to co-operate, in every way possible, in furthering the beneficent purposes which are the object of Mr. Carnegie's munificent offer.

It is understood that Mr. Carnegie's offer is intended to apply to the entire City. The methods and agencies of administering branches in Boroughs other than Manhattan and the Bronx, may well be left to be settled hereafter.

I am further instructed to say that, in communicating Mr. Carnegie's proposal to our Board, Dr. Billings accompanied it with the following statement:

"In the conferences referred to by Mr. Carnegie, the suggestions which I have made have related mainly to a free public library system for the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx.

"I have stated that such a system should include the great central reference library at 42d Street and 5th Avenue, about 40 branch libraries for circulation, small distributing centres in those public school buildings which are adapted to such purpose, and a large travelling library system operated from the central building. Each of the branch libraries should contain reading rooms for from 50 to 100 adults, and for from 75 to 125 children, and in these reading rooms should be about 500 volumes of encyclopædias, dictionaries, atlases, and large and important reference books. There should be ample telephone and delivery arrangements between the branches and the central library. To establish this system would require at least five years. The average cost of the branch libraries I estimated at from $75,000 to $125,000, including sites and equipment. The cost of maintaining the system, when completed, I estimated at $500,000 per year. The circulation of books for home use alone in these Boroughs should amount to more than 5,000,000 of volumes per year, and there should be at least 500,000 volumes in the circulation departments, with additions of new books, and to replace worn-out books, of at least 40,000 per year.

"With regard to the other Boroughs of Greater New York, I have made no special plans or estimates, but have said that about 25 libraries would be required for them.

"The following are some of the data which I have furnished Mr. Carnegie. The population figures are those of the last census.

"Boston, with 560,892 people, has 15 branch libraries and reading rooms, and 14 delivery stations, and appropriates \$288,641 for library purposes, being at the rate of over 50 cents per head of population, and of about $2\frac{5}{10}$ one hundredths of one per cent. on the assessed value of property.

"Chicago has 1,698,575 people, 6 branch libraries and 60 delivery stations, besides stations in the public schools, and appropriates \$263,397 for library purposes, being at the rate of $15\frac{5}{10}$ cents per head of population, and seven one hundredths of one per cent. of the assessed value of property.

"Buffalo has 352,387 people and appropriates $145,238 for library purposes, being at the rate of 41 cents per head of population, and five one hundredths of one per cent. on the assessed value of property.

"New York City (Borough of Manhattan and the Bronx), has 2,050,600 population, and appropriates \$183,935 for library purposes, being at the rate of $8\frac{9}{10}$ cents per head of population, and $\frac{6}{10}$ one hundredths of one per cent. on the assessed value of property.

"Greater New York has 3,437,202 population, and appropriates \$299,663 for library purposes, being at the rate of $8\frac{4}{10}$ cents per head of population, and $\frac{8}{10}$ one hundredths of one per cent. on the assessed value of property.

“The contract made by the City of Buffalo with the Buffalo Public Library, under the provisions of Chapter 16 of the Laws of 1897 of the State of New York, is worth careful examination in connection with the question of how best to provide for maintenance of a free public library system for New York City.”

I am,

Very respectfully yours,

(Signed) G. L. RIVES,
Secretary.

These letters brought forth various conferences between representatives of the Library and the City. There was on the part of the City no hesitation about accepting the gift but there were doubts as to whether the City, under its charter, was authorized to accept such a gift or to enter into such a contract.

To remove any questions on this point an act was passed by the legislature authorizing the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to acquire sites for this purpose, to contract for the erection of library buildings by Mr. Carnegie or his representatives, and also to provide in the annual budget for the maintenance of these libraries, being chapter 580 of the laws of 1901, passed April 26.

As a result a formal agreement between the City and the Library, acting as agent for Mr. Carnegie, was signed July 17 following. This set forth in brief the offer and the enabling act, and went on to provide that the City should acquire not more than forty-two* library sites in the boroughs of Manhattan, The Bronx, and Richmond, on which sites the Library was to erect buildings from funds provided by Mr. Carnegie. The City agreed to lease to the Library these sites and buildings as long as free public libraries are maintained in them, and agreed further to make adequate provision in the annual budget for the cost and maintenance of these from the time the libraries are opened, to an amount not less than ten per cent of the sum spent by Mr. Carnegie. The libraries are to be accessible at all reasonable hours and time, free of expense to the persons resorting thereto, subject to such reasonable control and regulations as the Library authorities may, from time to time, exercise for the general convenience, provided that the lending, delivery, and one or more of the reading rooms in each of the buildings shall be open and accessible to the public every day of the week except Sunday, but including all legal holidays, from at least 9.00 a. m. to 9.00 p. m. On Sundays such parts of any libraries are to be open in such manner and during such hours as may be, from time to time, agreed upon between the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and the Library. The books in these branches purchased by the money of Mr. Carnegie or by money provided by the City are to be the property of the City, plainly so marked. The sites selected are to be approved by the Library, which was to furnish the plans for the buildings and to appoint, direct, control and remove all persons employed in the buildings. The City agreed to provide for the repair of the buildings on sites owned by or furnished by the City, and agreed to provide an adequate supply of water. The Library agreed to furnish the City each year with a detailed report of its transactions.

The agreement having been signed the next steps were to acquire sites and erect buildings. The former depended upon the City, the latter upon the Library. Unhampered by elections and political changes the Library could move more rapidly than the City. It asked three well-known architects, John M. Carrère, Walter Cook, and Charles F. McKim, to act as an advisory committee as to the best method of procuring plans. These three gentlemen went over the ground carefully, considering the arguments in favor of an unrestricted competition for each building as well as those in favor of restricted competitions. The former method might possibly bring to light some unknown genius whose work would otherwise be lost. It would serve to give greater variety to the plans. It would free all concerned from charges of partiality — at least with the successful competitors. It would increase the labor of selecting plans for each building. It would automatically exclude the best known firms of architects who would refuse to enter unrestricted competitions.

The advisory committee recommended on September 30, 1901, that the branches should be built on a distinctive type with as much uniformity in design, materials, and general character as might be consistent with such variations as are bound to exist. They suggested that the Trustees select a board of architects, not less than two nor more than five, to the individual members of which the design of the buildings and supervision of their construction were to be entrusted by allotment.

Following these recommendations an agreement between the Library and three firms of architects — Babb, Cook & Willard; Carrère & Hastings; McKim, Mead & White — was made on November 7, 1901, whereby these firms were employed to prepare plans and specifications for the new branch libraries. The design of each building and the supervision of its construction were to be entrusted by allotment to one of these three firms; the architects were to act in collaboration as an advisory board, and the plans for the buildings must be approved by a majority of the board.

It was decided to erect the first building at 222 East 79th Street, a plot bought by the New York Free Circulating Library before consolidation. Mr. James Brown Lord, who had designed the Bloomingdale Branch of this library, had preliminary plans for the new building — the Yorkville Branch on East 79th Street. He conferred with the advisory board and made such changes as would bring the plans and specifications within the general scheme of the design approved by the advisory board, after which the contract for construction of the building was given to Isaac A. Hopper & Son on February 15, 1902.

The question of sites went more slowly. During the summer and early autumn of 1901 the Committee on Circulation made a study of the most pressing needs and the possibilities in the three boroughs and submitted its recommendations to the Executive Committee, which on November 4, 1901, forwarded to the Mayor the list of sites so chosen, stating the urgent need that certain sites be selected, recommending certain general localities, and asking for three definite sites.

The Van Wyck administration was then in its last days and, of course, could not be interested in sites for libraries. When Mayor Low came into office in January, 1902, other matters were of more pressing insistence. On February 10, the Library, by letter, called the Mayor's attention to the agreement and to the letter of November 4, 1901. The Board of Estimate and Apportionment held a hearing on the question of sites on March 7, at which a report of the City Engineer, dated November 29, 1901, was for the first time made public. This report approved certain of the sites but criticized others and held their prices as excessive. The whole question was thereupon referred to the President of the Board of Aldermen, Mr. Fornes, the President of the Borough of Manhattan, Mr. Cantor, and the President of the Borough of The Bronx, Mr. Haffen, as a committee of the Board. The Executive Committee of the Library appointed Messrs. Ledyard, Appleton, and Maitland as a subcommittee for conference with the City committee.

On May 23 the Board of Estimate authorized purchase of site no. 4 at 140th Street and Alexander Avenue. The Comptroller was empowered to negotiate for purchase of sites at 176th Street and Washington Avenue, and at 190 Amsterdam Avenue, and condemnation proceedings were authorized for property on Amsterdam Avenue between 84th and 85th Streets and at No. 224-226 East 125th Street. On June 6 the Board approved purchase of 31-33 East Broadway and approved also the general localities for various other sites. An issue of bonds for library sites was authorized at this time too amounting to $250,000 of which $200,000 was for Manhattan, The Bronx, and Richmond.

For Richmond the Trustees on December 11, 1901, invited Messrs. George Cromwell (President of the Borough), John M. Carrère, Gury Æ. Irving, A. K. Johnson, Walter C. Kerr, Ira K. Morris, and De Witt Stafford to act as an advisory committee as to sites and branches in general. This committee reported on January 29, 1902, recommending that one large library be established at St. George and five smaller libraries at Port Richmond, West New Brighton, Stapleton, New Dorp, and Tottenville.

These early negotiations about sites are here set down to indicate the care exercised and some of the difficulties encountered in making these important decisions. A detailed narration of the acquisition of each of the Carnegie sites would be of little value here; the record of each site and building is included in the statistical appendix.

While these negotiations were under way others were being held with circulation libraries that had seen the handwriting upon the wall and had voted for consolidation. As a result of the Carnegie gift and of the attitude of the city officials on August 1, 1901, the St. Agnes Free Library signed a deed of transfer of its property and on October 9 the Washington Heights Free Library followed. The New York Free Circulating Library for the Blind came into the fold on February 21, 1903, the Aguilar Free Library on February 24, 1903, the Harlem Library on December 14, 1903, the Tottenville Library on December 31, 1903, the library of the University Settlement Society on December 31, 1903, The Webster Free Library of the East Side House on December 31, 1903, and the Cathedral Free Library on December 31, 1904.

The first of the Carnegie branches was opened at 222 East 79th Street on Saturday, December 13, 1902, providing a new home for the Yorkville Branch. The opening was marked by a snow storm remembered by all who attended and it provided an opportunity for a real neighborhood gathering. Addresses were made by Hon. Jacob A. Cantor, President of the Borough of Manhattan, on behalf of the City, by Mr. Ledyard on behalf of the Library, and by Dr. Bostwick, Chief of the Circulation Department.

By this time the machinery for acquisition of sites, approval of sites, erection and opening of buildings was well established. New buildings were opened with satisfactory frequency, their detailed record being reserved for the appendix.

From now on the history of the circulation department becomes a record of administrative development. The staff was re-classified in April, 1902, on a uniform schedule, divided into six grades, from librarians in charge of branch libraries to the unpaid apprentices. The department took over the work with apprentices formerly done at the Astor building and this phase of the work developed year by year in most interesting fashion until the Library School was established at the time of removal to the new building.

Printing of the "Monthly List of Additions to the Circulation Department" began in May, 1901, and appeared regularly for the next twelve years as a medium of information about the Circulation Department. Its last issue was dated December, 1913, and was followed in January, 1914, by the first issue of "Branch Library News," which announced as its purpose the continuation of the service formerly offered by the "Monthly List" in announcing new books, combined with the further aim of serving as a news sheet for all activities of the branch libraries.*

Work with school teachers and school children, work by means of the travelling library system, work with children in the children's rooms, development and expansion of the apprentice class, work with the blind, development of the system of interbranch loans, surveys of the facilities available for teaching American principles to the foreign born, efforts to secure satisfactory binding, establishment of collections of pictures for circulation, music scores, losses of books by theft or carelessness, a policy as to school text books; exhibitions of photographs, pictures, illustrated bulletins on topics of interest; cooperation with the evening lecture system of the Board of Education, development of storytelling as a special activity, the central reserve collection, — mention of these activities brings to mind the extensive phases of the work of the department, phases sufficiently interesting in most cases to justify a monograph on each.

Headquarters of the department were moved, early in 1906, from the George Bruce Branch, 226 West 42nd Street, to the Muhlenberg branch, 209 West 23rd Street, newly opened here in a Carnegie building. The Bruce Branch had served as headquarters of the New York Free Circulating Library since it was opened in 1888, and Muhlenberg gave them a home until the new central building was opened in May, 1911.

Dr. Bostwick, chief of the circulation department from its organization in 1901, resigned October 1, 1909, to become librarian of the St. Louis Public Library, and Mr. Benjamin Adams, who had served as his assistant since April 1, 1904, was appointed in his place. Mr. Adams served one year longer than Dr. Bostwick, resigning in November, 1918, when Mr. Franklin F. Hopper succeeded him. Mr. Hopper, a graduate of Princeton (1900) and of the Pratt Institute Library School (1901), had served in the Library of Congress and the Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh; in September, 1908, he became librarian at Tacoma whence he came to The New York Public Library in January, 1914, to take charge of the book order work of the Reference and Circulation Departments.

When Dr. Billings made his survey for Comptroller Coler in the summer of 1900, he recorded fourteen corporations receiving city aid, with twenty-seven main distributing centres or branches. The city appropriated for 1900 the sum of $151,369.30. The circulation for home use was recorded as 3,393,619 in the preceding fiscal year. The number of volumes on their shelves as 451,775. The number of employees was 194.

In the next twenty years the entire work of circulation, so far as the City was concerned, was given to the care of one corporation in the boroughs of Manhattan, The Bronx, and Richmond. This corporation — The New York Public Library — administered on behalf of the City 42 branches and six sub-branches, besides the Central Circulation Branch and the children's room in the Central Building (cared for from its own funds). For the circulation work the City appropriated $765,204.73 in 1919. The number of volumes circulated was 9,892,648. The number of volumes recorded as belonging to the circulation department was 1,177,896. The number of employees in the Circulation Department was 691.

What will the next twenty years show?

RECENT ADDITIONS OF PRINTS

THE annual exhibitions of "Recent Additions" arranged by the Prints Division of the Library are perforce a medley. There are acquisitions made in pursuit of the set purpose to secure representation for artists not yet in the collection, or to round out into better representation the work of artists already contained in the print room's portfolios. Such acquisitions are exemplified by old prints and by modern ones added to the S. P. Avery Collection. Then there are the gifts which, not infrequently, assure a better showing for a school or an individual artist than the Library could otherwise obtain. It is precisely on such individual aid that any institution must depend for the acquisition of much material, especially the rarer and costlier.

In this year's show, the section of old prints shows the names of Dürer ("Virgin with a Pear"), Leyden ("Dance of the Magdalen"), Jean Gourmont, Cranach, Master of the Crayfish, and minor engravers of those early 16th century days: Master C. H., Master S., Master G. D., Ambrose Holbein, Master W. S. (a portrait of Martin Luther, crudely copied from Dürer's "St. Jerome in his Study"). Chiaroscuro engraving is illustrated in two prints by Johann Wechtlin and Jegher (Rubens' "Repose in Egypt"). The "Son of Frisius" by Goltzius is a rather famous plate, and there is a little group of Dutch 17th century landscape etchers: Jan Van de Velde, Verboom, Saftleven, Jan Van der Meer, Ossenbeck.

Such a recital of names is bound to be dry, but the prints, even in such a chance assemblage — perhaps partly just by reason of that — offer the observant student a rich reflection of the varied influences concerned in the development of art.

Stepping directly into the 19th century and later, with additions to the Avery collection, we have: Paul Huet, A. Beaufrère, Jacques Villon, Louis Legrand, Liebermann, W. Klemm, F. Boehle, Augustus John, Birger Sandzen, Albert Sterner, — a lot of sufficient variety.

There are yet other modern prints: etchings by Ann Goldthwaite, A. W. Heintzelman, Earl Horter, Louis Orr, Camille Pissarro (2d series of 10, one of four sets reserved for Museums), J. Reich, W. G. Reinzel, H. B. Shope, Will Simmons, Curt Szekessy; lithographs by V. H. Bailey, Geo. Elmer Brown, Howard Leigh (including the "Great War" series), Wm. Oberhardt, Herbert Pullinger, Louis H. Ruyl, B. Sandzen, A. Sterner, Harry Townsend, A. Treidler, S. J. Woolf; book-plates by Dr. A. J. Brown, Jay Chambers, Vaughan Trowbridge. In all of which our own country is well represented.

This annual review of the growth of the Prints Division will be on exhibition until Fall.

ANIMALS IN FRENCH PRINTS

THE sixth in the series of French exhibitions arranged by the Library's Prints Division, drawn entirely from the Avery Collection, is devoted to "Animals in Etching and Lithography," and will be on view throughout May. The choice of subject may bring up visions of a "mere artistic menagerie," but in fact the very juxtaposition of prints of a given animal by artists of the most varied temperament, talent and outlook is as amusing and interesting as it is instructive. Sometimes the animal holds the centre of the stage; again it is only incidental, as in the lithographs of horsemen by Lami and J. L. Brown, or Detaille's lancer, or Lepère's "Abside of Notre Dame," in which he has men watering horses in the Seine, as did Callot in his "Tour de Nesle" in 1629. Horses are pictured also by Gericault, Gros, Meryon (after Karel Du Jardin), Veyrassat and Adam. Dogs by Pirodon (after Troyon), Chauvel, Decamps, Doré (boar hunt), C. Vernet (performing dogs). Sheep by Jacque, Brassat, Chaigneau. Cattle by Chauvel (after Troyon), and by Rosa Bonheur, who also delineates the badger, deer and lions. And there are those wonderful lithographic performances by Delacroix, "Lion de l'Atlas" and "Tigre Royal." Bears by Barye and Bodmer, J. F. Millet's Swiss friend, whose sketch-book of original drawings, — some of them apparently done in this country, — is here, too. Habert-Dys sings the praise of the decorative frog. Bird-life there is, notably in etchings by Bracquemond, master of the duck and author of the famous "Old Cock."

It is like turning over the pages of an illustrated history of the print in 19th century France. And through it all there runs the fundamental interest in the print per se, with its technique serving individual expression. In the Fall this series of French exhibitions will probably be continued.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of April, 1921, the Library received as gifts 3,774 volumes, 4,360 pamphlets, 17 maps and 26 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

From Miss Jane Leigh Mahan of Elizabeth, N. J., came a collection of 86 volumes of full orchestral scores by Bach, Beethoven and Wagner, also chamber music and piano scores — all from the library of the late Major Frederick A. Mahan.

From an anonymous donor, through Miss M. Mortimer, came a collection of 20 lithographs by Howard Leigh, and a catalogue of an exhibition of his lithographs.

From Mr. Stephen H. Olin came two volumes containing manuscript letters of Robert Livingston, Mary Livingston, Robert Morris, Alexander Hamilton, Henry Clay, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Edward Everett and others; also the two volumes of the "Instructor Clericalis," London, 1693 and 1705.

Miscellaneous collections were received from the following: Miss M. Bosqui (186 volumes and 10 pamphlets); Mr. George Kennan (7 volumes and 18 pamphlets, a continuation of his previous gifts of works on Russia); Knight Brothers (187 volumes, mainly reports of the United States Circuit Courts of Appeals, and other books relating to law); Mr. Thomas Ollive Mabbott (47 volumes, 188 pamphlets and about 500 post-cards); and the Woman's Suffrage Association, New York City (a collection of books, pamphlets, and periodicals relating to Woman's Suffrage, etc., and containing 367 volumes, 171 pamphlets and 11 periodicals).

Gifts of music were received from the following: Composer's Music Corporation, New York City (54 musical scores published by them); Miss Rosalie Hausman (4 volumes of music); and Prof. Eugenio Pirani (4 bound volumes and 17 pamphlets, containing his musical compositions).

Mr. Birger Sandzén, of Bethany College, Lindsborg, Kansas, gave the Library six of his lithographs.

Thirteen additions were received through gift to the Library's collection of regimental and divisional histories and other books on the war. Seven works were added through gift to the Library's genealogical collection.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN APRIL, 1921

DURING the month of April, 1921, there were received at the Library 20,085 volumes and 5,555 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 98,981. They consulted 230,508 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 251,069.

INDUSTRIES AND INDUSTRIAL ARTS

Addicks, Lawrence. Copper refining. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co., 1921. ix, 211 p. illus. 8°. VIT (117)

Detailed description of methods and processes, with special chapters on tank resistance, metal losses, furnace refining, copper from waste, by-products, etc.

Reviewed in Engineering and mining journal, April 2, 1921; Metal industry, April, 1921.

Battle, John Rome. The handbook of industrial oil engineering... Lubrication and industrial oil section (complete). Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company [cop. 1920]. 1131 p. illus. 8°. VON (118)

In 1916 the author published his Lubricating engineer's handbook of 333 pages. This material, now completely revised, forms a part of the new volume of 1131 pages, covering various engineering data: the technology of petroleum and its products; fats and oils other than petroleum; testing; individual chapters detailing the use of lubricants for a large number of machines and processes; filtration, purification, and reclamation; oil coolers; heat treatment of steel; transformer oils; United States specifications, etc. A second volume, dealing with liquid fuels, is in preparation.

"It contains a vast amount of information, being encyclopaedic in scope, within the field to which it is devoted... The printing and other mechanical features of the book are excellent, and reflect credit on all concerned. The author's painstaking efforts have resulted in a most valuable compendium in a most important field of industry."—Henry Leffmann in Journal of the Franklin Institute, Jan., 1921.

Boulton, B. C. Manufacture and use of plywood & glue. London: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, 1920. vii, 88 p. illus. 8°. VDY (121)

Rearranged from material which appeared in Aerial age. Intended for the use of the aircraft industry, but is so complete as to be of value to those interested in joinery, cabinet-making, coach building, etc. Section on glues includes war developments not hitherto recorded.

Burgess, Charles F., and others. Applied electrochemistry and metallurgy; a practical treatise on commercial chemistry, the electric furnace, the manufacture of ozone and nitrogen by high-tension discharges, and the metallurgy of iron, steel, and miscellaneous metals. Applied electrochemistry by Charles F. Burgess; metallurgy by H. B. Pulsifer and Benj. B. Freud. Chicago: American Technical Society, 1920. 2 v. in 1. 86, 100 p. illus. 8°. PPO (118)

These simple, brief expositions afford good general surveys adapted to the needs of the general reader or of the beginner. Part 2, covering metallurgy, is largely devoted to non-electrical processes.

Carman, Edwin S. Foundry moulding machines and pattern equipment; a treatise showing the progress made by the foundries using machine moulding methods. [Cleveland, Ohio: Penton Publishing Co., cop. 1920.] vii, 225 p. 2. ed. illus. 8°. VID (117)

"The author of this book, who was recently elected president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, has had a large part in the development of molding machines in general, and has designed several machines himself... He thoroughly understands both the principles and the machines he is discussing, but he also realizes that most of his readers do not have any such understanding, and has therefore endeavored (successfully, we think) to explain these principles and machines so clearly that anyone in the least acquainted with foundry work can follow."—Metal trades, April, 1921.

Cisin, Harry G. Modern marine engineering. Part 1, The fire room. New York: D. Van Nostrand Company, 1921. xi, 205 p. illus. 12°. VXHG (121)

Based on a course given during the war by the United States Navy Steam Engineering School at Stevens Institute, Hoboken, N. J., and although designed as a text for schools and colleges, it has also been adapted to the needs of the practical man. Volume 1 deals with the details of boiler construction as well as of boiler room auxiliaries, boiler corrosion, fuels, and combustion. The last chapter treats briefly of calculations, evaporation, efficiency. Sixty-six helpful illustrations.

"The information on boiler construction... was obtained by the author at first hand at various boiler factories, and is practically unobtainable elsewhere. The book is written in a clear but highly abbreviated style, is profusely illustrated, and is extremely well suited for the needs of the practical man."—Electric record, Feb., 1921.

"It will be welcomed because it deals very satisfactorily with a very important branch of chemistry which, generally speaking, has not previously received adequate treatment. It should certainly do much to promote standardization and accuracy... The methods of analysis are very sound and are based upon the work of the most renowned authorities. We recommend the book with the greatest confidence to all chemists whose work lies in this direction."—Chemical trade journal, Sept. 4, 1920.

Dowson, J. Emerson, and A. T. LARTER. Producer gas. London and New York: Longmans, Green & Co., 1920. xviii, 361 p. 4.ed. illus. 8°.

"The appearance of a fourth edition of Messrs. Dowson and Larter's 'Producer gas' is a welcome feature in this industry, inasmuch as the present period more than any recent year demands what might be called a stock taking of present progress in this most economical source of internal combustion engine fuel. Mr. J. Emerson Dowson and Mr. A. T. Larter stand unrivaled as exponents of this, and their fourth edition, besides giving new chapters on progress of gas from peat, gas traction for road vehicles, and gas propulsion of vessels, handles the higher technicalities of the whole question with such authority and precision as to make the bringing up-to-date of this text book a necessity for the industry."—Gas and oil power, Feb. 3, 1921.

Evans, Elliott A. Lubricating and allied oils, a handbook for chemists, engineers and students. Foreword by Sir Charles Cheers Wakefield. London: Chapman & Hall, Ltd., 1921. xv, 128 p. illus. 8°. (The directly-useful technical series.)

"Chemists require detailed information of the methods, both physical and chemical, used in the laboratory to examine the oils, and to be in a position to pass an opinion upon their relative merits; whereas the engineer must be in a position to understand the chemist's report and to put the oil to a practical test with an appreciation of the material which he has under supervision... It has been the author's endeavor to include only those tests which are commonly demanded, and a discussion of those branches of the subject which are of general interest, and to exclude anything which is controversial or highly technical."—Preface.

Factory Manager. India-rubber goods manufacture, a practical guide... London: Maclaren & Sons, Ltd., 1920. xi, 496 p. illus. 8°. VMV (121)

Does not go deeply into the sciences of chemistry and mechanics; but is designed for manufacturers and factory hands who take chemical compounds and machines as they find them and make the best use of them. Tells about factory arrangements, requisite machinery, operations of washing, drying, mixing, and vulcanization, the characteristics of rubber and ingredients used, and the manufacturing details of a large number of articles. A revision of articles which originally appeared in the India-rubber journal.

"In the opinion of the reviewer the book is likely to be extremely useful to works managers and others engaged on the purely 'practical' sides, and can be recommended as an addition to the library of all those interested in rubber manufacture."—Philip Schidrowitz in Chemical age (London), Feb. 5, 1921.

Georgevics, George von, and EUG. GRANDMOUGIN. A text-book of dye chemistry (The chemistry of dye stuffs)... Translated and revised from the 4th German ed. (with additions) by Frederick A. Mason. London: Scott, Greenwood & Son, 1920. xvi, 560 p. 4°. VOR (118)

"...It goes more into detail than any other work of this description, and the historical chapters are accurate and interesting... In carrying out the work of translation advantage has been taken of the opportunity to bring the subject matter up to date and revise the text where desirable. Chief among these alterations and additions in the present edition are: the tables indicating the relationships of the various derivatives of benzene, toluene, naphthalene, and anthracene; the chapters on aniline dyes which have been rewritten; a new section dealing with the anthocyanins; the chapter on anthraquinone dyes and vat colors; an account of recent work on carminic acid and curcumin; and lastly, a list of books connected with the chemistry of dyes. The translation is entirely new, and where possible references to works published between 1913 and 1920 are made. Also, in most cases, British patents are referred to, as well as the German."—The Dyer and calico printer, Nov. 1, 1920.

Fundamentals briefly set forth for factory men interested in chemistry as it bears on the various operations of the factory. Valence, atomic weights, equations, and the nature of oxides, hydrates, salts and acids, and their interactions are briefly explained. There is a chapter on qualitative analysis. Author is associated with the department of chemistry, Ford Institute of Technology, Detroit, Michigan.

Jeans, James Hopwood. The mathematical theory of electricity and magnetism. Cambridge [Eng.]: University Press, 1920. vi, 627 p. diags. 8°. PGG (121)

"This book promises to become one of the classic works on the mathematical theory of electricity, viewed from the physical standpoint on the lines of Clerk Maxwell... The alterations in this new edition are comparatively slight until the last few chapters of the book are reached. Here, in view of the ever increasing importance of electric waves and the electron theory, the chapters on these branches have been entirely rewritten; it is these chapters and an entirely new one dealing with the relativity theory which render the new edition especially interesting. It should, however, be noted that the book, particularly in the later chapters, presupposes a mathematical knowledge somewhat greater than that at the command of the ordinary student of physics."—F. York: The Industrial Press, 1920. x, 341 p. illus. 8°.

VID (117)
"Primarily the treatise is intended for those interested in patternmaking as a vocation; but it also should prove of value to draftsmen because the origination of designs which are practicable from the view point of the patternmaker and moulder requires a knowledge of the fundamental principles of patternmaking. The various subjects treated have been so arranged and divided throughout the book that the student more interested in general principles than in the actual work of construction readily may select whichever sections are considered essential." — The Foundry, March 21, 1921.

Complete survey of the subject, including production, methods of coagulation, synthetic caoutchouc, testing, manufacture and use of inorganic fillers, organic accelerators, rubber substitutes, vulcanization, principles of compounding, etc. Well illustrated.

Stoller, H. M., and others. Small motors, transformers, electromagnets. A practical presentation of design and construction data for small motors, small low- and high-tension transformers, electromagnets, and induction coils. Chicago: American Technical Society, 1920. v. p. illus. 8°.

The three sections of this book are authoritative, although written in simple language and without troublesome theory. The first section deals with the practice of the Western Electric Company, and typical designs are given of direct-current motors of all standard voltages and ranging in size from $\frac{1}{100}$ up to $\frac{1}{2}$ h. p.; and of alternating current induction motors, ranging from $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ h. p. The section on transformers is by the professor of electrical engineering in Dartmouth College, and treats of low-tension apparatus which will transform from 110 to 220 and down to lower voltages; also of high-tension equipment for wireless and welding work. The last section discusses the modern theory of the magnetic circuit and presents designs of various types, carrying through the calculations to the final result.

This standard work (last edition 1912-13 in 5 v.) is undergoing enlargement and thorough revision. It is stated that six, possibly seven volumes will comprise the set. Volume 1 embraces A to Calcium inclusive.

"It is too soon to be in a position to chronicle all the results, as regards chemical manufacture, which have arisen from the intensive application of chemists during the past strenuous years. Much is of a character that in the present disturbed state of the world it would be inexpedient to make public. On certain matters, indeed, no authoritative information can be obtained. This will explain why manufacturing details of several new processes in connection with munitions have not been given." — Preface.

PEEP-SHOW PRINTS

— Sir J. Vanbrugh, The Provok’d Wife, 1697.

THE acquisition of a hundred peep-show prints by the Prints Division of The New York Public Library naturally brings up the question: “What are peep-shows?” Collectors of New York City views know of them through eighteenth-century views of the city, engraved in line, gaily colored, and palpably fictitious. They picture the “Destruction of the Royal statue,” “The terrible fire” of 1776, the “Triumphal entry of the Royal troops” (see p. 365), (engraved by François Xaver Habermann), and a view of the city (engraved by Balth. Frederic Leizelt), the last two “sold at Augsburg.” The titles are in French, and the last two are reversed. Why? Because they are to be reflected in a mirror, these being “peep-show prints.” There are many like them, views of places in various parts of the world. They were always colored; François Courboin, in his L’Estampe française, speaks of the “screechy coloring” of the vues d’optique in the Images d’Epinal.

Providing prints for the optique was a regular and not inextensive business. “Toward 1730,” says Bonnardot (Histoire artistique et archéologique de la gravure en France, 1849), “the apparatus called optique became much in vogue. The print-makers therefore set about to procure or to utilize thousands of views of monuments or cities, which rested under the dust of their shops; views of Isr. Silvestre, Perelle, and others. Rigaud’s collection of views seems to have been arranged for that use. One often finds for sale good pieces by Silvestre, La Belle or Seb. Le Clerc, with a paste of ignoble coloring. . . These views have the disadvantage of showing objects reversed, being destined to be reflected by a mirror. The print-sellers of the Rue St. Jacques and the Rue St.-Jean-de-Beauvais issued enormous bundles of vues d'optique. The house of Basset, which still exists, at the corner of the Rue des Mathurins, was the most celebrated in this specialty." H. Guttenberg's engraving after Sche-nau's Optique renommee shows a "portfolio of very curious natural views." Well known Paris publishers of this specialty were Basset, J. Chereau, Rigaud, Huquier fils, Mondhare, Daumont, Maillet; nearly all located in the Rue St. Jacques. In London, John Bowles and Carington Bowles placed their imprint on such prints, in Augsburg Jos. Carmine. There are references to the Augsburg publishers, used as models by the Italians, in Histoire de l'imagerie populaire flamande, by E. H. van Heurik and G. J. Boekenoeger (1910).

A part of Carington Bowles's New enlarged catalogue, 1790, is devoted to: "Perspective views of shipping: views of the cities of London & Westminster, and...views in England, France...America, &c. The whole designed for viewing with surprising beauty and effect, in the Diagonal Mirror, or Optical Pillar Machine: consisting of 271 English and foreign views." These prints sold for one shilling plain and two shillings colored. And this catalogue furthermore offers "Diagonal mirrors, neatly fitted up in mahogany, with looking glass, etc." at one guinea. "The optique," says Bonnardot, "was not a toy created only for children. Grave personages amused themselves with it. I possess a note, coming from the papers of Chr. de Beaumont, archbishop of Paris: its title is: List of prints to be purchased to complete the collection of our optique of the country house (at St. Cloud). It indicates 39 which are to be had of Basset, Rue St. Jacques, at St. Geneviève, others of Mesard, Rue Grénetat, at the Renommée de la Cornemuse, etc. To-day, the optique excites only the admiration of children, of their nurses, and of the villagers at the fairs." So these 18th-century folk found in this contrivance an innocent parlor amusement, as a later generation did in the stereopticon. One of these indoor affairs for private use is pictured in L. L. Boilly's L'Optique, which was engraved by Cazenave. There is no box here, as in the case of the outdoor affairs run by showmen, but an open frame with a lens, and prints laid horizontally. Henry Harris, in his biography of Boilly, tells us that fifty paintings done for the optique were left by the artist at his death, but the "secret of his apparatus died with him." The toy persisted until recently. In Boy's Treasury of Sports (London, 1844), Boy's own Book (New York, 1857, 1865) and Every Boy's Book (1869) there are instructions for the making of a cosmorama.

If you become interested in peep-shows, and start to find out something about them, you will have a merry and somewhat disconcerting chase. Just what is a peep-show? "A small show, consisting of pictures viewed through an orifice or hole fitted with a magnifying glass" say the dictionaries. The definition leaves the interior of the box a matter of thrilling mystery. The French encyclopedias are a little more explicit. Here's the story in a few words: "A box in which one sees, through a lens, colored pictures placed horizontally on the bottom of the box, which appear far off by the effect of a mirror inclined at 45°." (Encyclopédie des gens du monde, 1843.) The Encyclopédie du XIXe siècle (1837-58), Dictionnaire des dictionnaires (eighteen-eighties) and Dictionnaire de la conversation (1857) tell the same story. The Encyclopédie des gens du monde adds the information that "magic lantern is a name given popularly and incorrectly to those optiques in which one sees pictures, illuminated by a light placed in front which is reflected on the images. Placed one behind the other, these little pictures are removed successively by the aid of strings which are attached outside of the box. . . .”

Now, whether the pictures were placed perpendicularly or horizontally, the string's the thing. At least in most of the pictures of peep-shows that have come down to us, — engravings and etchings by Wm. Heath, Ernest Jean Aubert, Bartolomeo Pinelli; a French lithograph of the early 19th century (Le montreur ambulant des vues d'optique); tapestries of the Gobelins, and a Beauvais tapestry after Boucher (Quack Doctor and Peep-Show) owned by Mr. J. S. Bache. The strings hang tantalizingly out of holes at the top of the side of the box. But how were they attached to the pictures and how were the latter moved? Perhaps the present confession of ignorance will draw the facts from some reader who knows. In G. H. Mason's Costume of China (1800) “a man with a raree-show” is introduced, with the statement that he “produces a succession of pictures to the perspective glass by means of small strings, and relates a story and description of each subject as he presents it.” Thomas Frost (The old Showmen and the London Fairs, 1881) tells us that “rudely painted pictures were successively lowered. . . . A green curtain separated the spectators from the outer throng.” And the green curtain helps to deepen the mystery, as it does also in Geissler's line engraving The Battle of Jena in the Peep-Show.

And then, to add to the confusion, you may come across Fragonard's La Lantern magique, with the showman turning a crank and tapping a drum, or Bacheley's Jeux d'Enfants: La Curiosité, after Gravelot, in which also a crank seems to be the actuating principle. Or, again, C. Stauber's Der Guckkastenmann (Muenchener Bilderbogen, no. 257) in which the pictures are drawn out of a perpendicular slot at the rear end of the box with one hand, while a hand-organ crank is turned by the other. So there you are, or rather there you aren't. You might as well have stopped the search at Robert Buchanan's poem “The Peep-Show; or, The old Theology and the new” (Gentleman's Magazine, 1875), with its recurrent line “my bell I ring; I pull a string.”

Optique the thing was called in French, Guckkasten in German, Kiik-Kasten or Perspektivkasse in Danish, Rare-Kiek or Kijk-Kast in Dutch, peep-show or raree-show in English. The last name, the dictionaries tell us, was “formed in imitation of the foreign way of pronouncing rare-show,” in which they all go back to Johnson, who, says the New English Dictionary, “is probably correct.” But the Dutch word makes one hesitate.

“The early exhibitors appear to have been Savoyards,” says the New English Dictionary, and Marin's Dutch-French dictionary (1768) has this: “a Savoyard with the rare-kiek.” The show was known to many lands and has been frequently pictured, as has already been indicated. There are further examples. The French showman appears also in Lancret's Le Montreur de boîte d'optique, J. P. M. Pierre's Le Charlatan, Mondon's La Vue, and Gravelot's La Curiosité. The English variety may be studied in Hogarth's Southwark Fair (1773), Hoppner's The Show, mezzotinted by Young (see frontispiece), Rowlandson's Raree Show (in his Characteristic Sketches) (see p. 360), and the frontispiece to Geikie's Etchings (1855) (see p. 361). Smith's mezzotint O Rare Show depicts a different affair altogether, apparently simply a lot of mounted pictures. Among Germany's appears Ferd. Waldmueller's Der Schaukasten and F. Bolt's line engraving Der Guckkastenmann (1798), with a "New Year's Wish" in verse, possibly by Schiller. In the United States, during 1748-49, John Bonnin, with his Philosophical Optical Machine, exhibited "perspectives," including "English prospects." This interesting bit of information was unearthed from the New York Post Boy (1748-49) by I. N. Phelps Stokes, during the preparation of his Iconography of Manhattan Island. A show appears here as late as 1862, in a caricature in Yankee Notions, in which Brother Jonathan acts as the showman, with Jeff Davis as a boy peering in terror at the scenes of horror disclosed to him.

THE HALFPENNY SHOWMAN

The showman was a familiar figure in England, particularly at the fairs. He carried his box about in the early 18th century, as we see from illustrations in John Ashton's Social Life in the Reign of Queen Anne. The Half Penny Showman (see p. 363), in W. H. Pyne's Costumes of Great Britain (1808) has a horn to attract customers, as has also the one in W. Heath's plate The Omnibus in Seymour's Evening's Amusements, 1830), who admonishes the children: "Run home to your mother, and cry for a Ha'penny, do, — if you wants to see the show."

What thrilling scenes were witnessed through those peep-holes! Frost tells of them, and Henry Morley (Memoirs of Bartholomew Fair, 1859) and Henry Mayhew (London Labour and the London Poor, 1861): The murder of Weare; the Queen of Sheba's visit to Solomon; the execution of Probert; conversion of St. Paul; Greenland Whale Fishery; building of Babel; Wellington at Waterloo; Daniel in the lions' den; such events of contemporary interest (1830) as the lying in state of George IV, and the murder of Maria Martin; coronation of William IV; Mazeppa; Paul Jones the Pirate; siege of Gibraltar. How the material at hand was exploited is indicated in Dickens's Our Mutual Friend: "A peepshow which had originally started with the Battle of Waterloo, had since made it every battle of later date."

The troubles of the poor fellows who trudged about England with these boxes on their backs are recounted by Mayhew, who gives this result of an interview with a showman: "There are two kinds of peepshows, 'backshows' and 'caravan shows' . . . The back shows are peepshows that stand upon trussels, and are so small as to admit of being carried on the back. The scenery is about 18 inches to two foot in length, and about 15 inches high. They have

In the country I works my battle pieces. . . 'That there is,' I tell 'em, 'a fine painting, representing Lord Nelson at the Battle of Trafalgar. In the centre is Lord Nelson in his last dying moments, supported by Capt. Hardy and the chaplain. On the left is the explosion of one of the enemy's ships by fire.'"

Around the middle of the 19th century the glory of the peep-show waned. C. Knight (Passages from a working life, 1864) says: "the raree showman is no more." Once the term "raree show" was used familiarly by writers. Witness Sir John Vanbrugh (The provok'd Wife, 1697), Pope, Sterne (Tristram Shandy), Thomas Brown, Fielding, Scott, Carlyle, E. Fitzgerald, Spurgeon (1869), Lowell (My Study Windows, 1870). And there is a peculiar reference in the Diary and Letters of Thomas Hutchinson, the American loyalist: "Mr. Copley is not in the Exhibition this year. He now exhibits his Major Pearson, and again his Lord Chatham, for what they call raree show." E. Walford, in Notes and Queries, series VII, 2: 267, asks: "What was this raree show?"

The peep-show was even the central figure in some works of popular literature, such as Mogridge's Sergeant Bill and his Raree Show (1839) and The Peep-Show Man: a drama, in two acts, by Thomas J. Williams. In the latter, Jack Trudget carries the show on his back, and introduces a "grand broadsword combat for the championship, between the Emperor Napoleon and the Duke of Wellington, at the battle of Bunker's Hill."

To-day, our knowledge of the peep-show is dim and confused, so that the word is abused as badly as the term "hurdy-gurdy," which is customarily and erroneously applied to the hand-organ of the piano type. About all that remains of the peep-show is pictures of the show and prints that were used in it.

THE HUNEKER COLLECTION

THE library of the late James G. Huneker has been bought by a number of his friends, and given to The New York Public Library as a memorial. The gift was made possible through the kind offices of Mrs. Huneker and of Mr. Edward Ziegler of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and other friends of Mr. Huneker. It comprises 375 bound and 264 unbound books, and 131 pamphlets on music, art, history and literature, including works of Emerson, Tolstoi, Ibsen, Flaubert, Saintsbury, and Schopenhauer, with a large collection of vocal and instrumental music.

It is an interesting library, and shows that Mr. Huneker bought books to read and to use. He was interested in such men as Flaubert, Huysmans, Remy de Gourmont, George Moore, Swinburne, Pater, and the Russian novelists. Books on modern French painting are well represented.

One has only to look at the books and then glance through Mr. Huneker's own writings, "Unicorns," or "Ivory, Apes and Peacocks," or "The Pathos of Distance," noting the titles of various essays, to see that the critic must have written only about people, and places, and things which interested him greatly. His library of reference was also a readable collection.

It was the modern, the unusual, the exotic, that attracted Mr. Huneker, and his books reflect his tastes. Modern music, modern painting — especially modern French art — and modern literature are the chief subjects represented. There is a little philosophy, Bergson, William James, Nietzsche, some literary history and criticism — many of Professor Saintsbury's histories. Literature predominates, and there are about 250 volumes (all unbound) of French literature. Most of these are novels, essays, or volumes of criticism. There are a few volumes of poetry, a few anthologies, but no drama. Among the authors represented are: Baudelaire, Stendhal, D'Annunzio, Zola, Marcel Prévost, Bourget, Maurice Barrès, all men whose work is notable for its literary style.

Among the books on music may be mentioned Kleczynski's "The Works of Frederic Chopin, and their Proper Interpretation," translated by Alfred Wittingham, and Eugen Segnitz's "Richard Wagner und Leipzig (1813-1833)."

The musical compositions in the Huneker Collection are of varied character. They cover no particular field, but include a number of desirable accessions. The greater part are publications of G. Schirmer of New York, and Theodore Presser of Philadelphia, mostly presentation or review copies.

The Schirmer volumes include most of Schirmer's edition of the piano works of Chopin for which Mr. Huneker wrote prefaces. There are also several works by Liszt which were not in the Library.

Among the remaining compositions, the following are especially desirable additions:

BRAHMS — Selected compositions for the piano (Augener Edition).

CHAIKOVSKY — Piano concerto. Arrangement for two pianos.

CHOPIN — Oeuvres complètes. Ed. by Klindworth. Berlin: Bote & Bock.

GODOWSKY — Sonata for the piano.

LISZT — Mephisto Waltz, arranged for piano and orchestra by Richard Burmeister.

OREFICE — Chopin; opera in four acts. Vocal score.

ORNSTEIN — Poems of 1917, for piano.

RAVEL — Jeux d'eau, for piano.

REGER — Concerto, for piano. Arrangement for two pianos.

STRAUSS — Guntram. Vocal score.

There were in addition, four of the large editions of Strauss symphonic poems (orchestra score) of which the Library had only the miniature editions.

In each volume of the collection a book-plate is being mounted, with this inscription:

GIFTS

DURING the month of May, 1921, the Library received as gifts a total of 3,800 volumes, 4,757 pamphlets, 103 maps and 43 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

From Mr. Charles Dana Burrage of Boston came a copy of the privately printed work "Twenty Years of the Omar Khayyám Club of America," 1921; also a facsimile of the first edition of Fitzgerald's translation of Omar Khayyám. From Dr. H. A. Garfield, Williamstown, Mass., came a collection of publications of the United States Fuel Administration, 50 in number. Mr. James Loeb, Munich, Germany, sent copies of volumes one and two of "Die Terrakotten der Sammlung Loeb, herausgegeben von Johannes Sieyeking, mit einer Einleitung von James Loeb," Munich, 1916. Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan gave the Library copies of the "Catalogue of Twenty Renaissance Tapestries from the J. Pierpont Morgan Collection compiled by Seymour de Ricci," Paris, 1913 (one of fifty copies containing colored plates); also copies of the catalogues of his collections of Germanic, Gallo-Roman and Merovingian Antiquities, compiled by Seymour de Ricci, Paris, 1910, 1911. From Mrs. George W. Perkins came a large collection of newspaper clippings concerning Woodrow Wilson, covering the period of July, 1912 - March, 1921 (in 50 volumes), also 32 volumes of the New York Times Index, and many volumes of court records in the United States Steel Corporation cases.

Interesting miscellaneous collections were received from the following: Mrs. Whitelaw Reid (143 volumes and 5 pamphlets); Mr. Jacob Brussels, Brooklyn (1,051 volumes and 225 pamphlets); the American Brewer (176 volumes); the Railway Equipment Register (345 volumes); and the Young Men's Christian Association, International Committee (52 volumes, 143 pamphlets and 14 newspapers, mainly relating to the war).

Gifts of prints were received from the following: Mr. J. Beurdeley, Paris (one of his etchings); Mr. Percy Grassby, Boston (5 of his woodcuts); Mr. Ralph M. Pearson (8 of his etchings); and Mr. George T. Plowman, Cambridge, Mass. (5 of his etchings.)

Gifts of music were received from the following: Mr. Richard Aldrich (15 volumes of light opera scores); Mr. Bernardus Boekelman (a collection of music, containing 29 volumes and 14 pamphlets); and Miss L. Henning (7 books relating to music and the stage).

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN MAY, 1921

DURING the month of May, 1921, there were received at the Library 22,752 volumes and 10,954 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 94,927. They consulted 243,823 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 234,382.

PROVENÇAL LITERATURE AND LANGUAGE, INCLUDING THE LOCAL HISTORY OF SOUTHERN FRANCE

A LIST OF REFERENCES IN THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

COMPILED BY DANIEL C. HASKELL

The material listed here represents a fairly good collection of books for the student of either the old Provençal or the modern revival. More than ordinary interest attaches to the modern books because they came to the Library by gift from Mrs. Thomas A. Janvier, who added to her enthusiasm as a book collector the advantages of an intimate knowledge of the country and the people gleaned from frequent visits and from an extensive acquaintance with the leaders in the literary movement. Besides the printed books there came from Mrs. Janvier eleven letters from Félix Gras, Gaston Jourdanne, Mistral, and Jules Ronjat.

INDUSTRIES AND INDUSTRIAL ARTS

Addyman, Frank T. My electrical workshop; a book for the electrical experimenter. London: The Wireless Press, Ltd. [1920.] viii, 249 p. illus. 8°. PGI (121)

Simple and popular, treating in an interesting way of magnets, electric currents, cells, wires and joints, electroplating, dynamos, induction coils, with a final chapter on the Magnetic North.

Bibliotheca chemico-mathematica: Catalogue of works in many tongues on exact and applied science, with a subject index. Compiled and annotated by H. Z[eitlinger] and H. C. S[otheran]... London: Henry Sotheran & Co., 1921. illus. 2 v. 8°.

OAB (117) (Zeitlinger)

Although these two attractive volumes constitute a trade catalogue of the firm of Henry Sotheran & Company, they really form a most readable history of science. There are 17,397 entries "including nearly all of the standard works and most of the earlier works of historical importance." Gives current prices, bibliographical particulars, and many annotations, as well as numerous plates, including portraits, sample text and title-pages. The classified index of nearly 100 pages should prove of great value to the reference librarian.

"These volumes are of so unusual a nature that they are worthy of detailed notice... Messrs. Sotheran are to be congratulated on their enterprise in producing a catalogue of books which is also a record of permanent utility, and by publishing it in its present form they have rendered a distinct service to those interested in the history and bibliography of science." — F. Simple and practical, intended for students. Has chapters on cloud forms and transformations, cloud distribution, heights, direction velocities, and association of clouds with weather type. Beautifully illustrated, partially in color.

Crain's market data book and directory of class, trade and technical publications. Chicago: G. D. Crain, Jr., cop. 1920. 462 p. 8°. VA (121)

Mine of statistical information on leading industries of the country. Extensive list of trade papers given under each heading, as well as a complete alphabetical arrangement of these publications. Exceptionally useful library reference book.

Denny, Claude W. The electro-deposition of copper and its industrial applications; the principles and practice of electro-deposition, with special reference to recent developments and applications in the electro-deposition of copper; for students, electroplaters, electrical engineers, designers, and manufacturers. London: Sir Isaac Pitman

"The object of this small work is to touch lightly on the principles of electro-deposition from a practical point of view, and to give special attention to the rapid strides made during the last five or six years, covering the period of the war, during which time the deposition of copper has come rapidly to the front." — Preface.

Dent, John A., and ARTHUR C. HARPER. Kinematics and kinetics of machinery, a text-book for colleges and technical schools. New York: John Wiley & Sons, Inc., 1921. ix, 383 p. diags. 8°.

This work is a revision of notes used by Professor G. A. Goodenough in the University of Illinois, to which is added a chapter on the gyroscope by Professor F. B. Seely. "Gives systematic methods for determining velocities, accelerations, and inertia forces which can be applied to practically all mechanisms. These methods are in the main graphical, the complicated forms of the equations making analytical methods too cumbersome for practical use except in some of the simpler types of machines. If the work is done to a large scale the results should be accurate enough for all practical purposes." There are chapters on the solution of linear differential equations and on the investigation of forces in the gasoline engine. Professors Dent and Harper are teachers in the University of Kansas and Pratt Institute respectively.

Denton, F. M. Elementary principles of continuous-current armature winding. London: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., 1921. x, 102 p. illus. 12°. VGI (121)

"The object of this book is to give an explanation... which, while being free from mathematics — and therefore easily read by the man who has forgotten his algebra — shall yet be general and accurate. The treatment given was devised by the author for the use of students at the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh (Pa.) and is believed to be original." — Preface.

Dunkley, W. G. Belts for power transmission; a systematic treatment of belt materials and types of belts, and of the transmission of power by belting, with specially calculated tables. London: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., 1920. xii, 104 p. illus. 12°. VFR (121)

"...No attempt has been made here to enter into a comparison as to the relative merits of this form of power transmission and other established methods, such as rope driving, chain driving and gearing. The endeavour has been to present and discuss the large number of factors and considerations involved by the subject of belt driving. Some pains have been taken to present the various subjects distinctly and in a logical sequence in order that the whole subject may be appreciated in easy and natural stages." — Preface.

Fierz-David, Hans Eduard. The fundamental processes of dye chemistry... Translated by Frederick A. Mason. London: J. & A. Churchill, 1921. xiv, 240 p. illus. 8°. VOR (118)

"For it is obvious that the ordinary laboratory apparatus, which is used in preliminary trials of the method, is not adapted for operations on a larger scale. So the process must be tested in miniature with such apparatus as may be subsequently magnified for large scale production... The book is divided into four sections, dealing with intermediates, dyes, technical details and, finally, a section on analytical methods for testing the products. It is thoroughly practical, numerous examples being given in detail of the most modern processes used in the production of typical dyes and intermediates. There is no other book in English, we believe, of quite the same character, wherein the fundamentals of theory and works practice are combined... The English translation, so far as one can judge by a comparison of certain sections with the original German edition, is very much better done than most books of this kind."—Chemical age, London, March 5, 1921.

Foltzer, Joseph. Artificial silk and its manufacture... Translated from the French by T. Woodhouse. London: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., 1921. xi, 244 p. illus. 8°. VLNE (121)

This up-to-date work treats fully of the development of the various processes. Chapters 20 and 21 discuss the organization and equipment of a plant; and chapter 22 states the distinctive characteristics, properties and uses of natural and artificial silks. There is also an interesting chapter on the conversion of cellulose into artificial hair, thread, ribbons, felt, leather, films, wall decorations, and cloths for flowers, bookbinding, waterproofing and ordinary textures. 117 detailed illustrations.

Gooday, Wilfred E. Petrol and petroleum spirits, a description of their sources, examination and uses... with a preface by Professor Sir John Cadman. New York: Longmans, Green & Co., 1919. xi, 135 p. illus. 8°. VHY (117) Outlines characteristics of crude oil, its origin, geology, exploitation and refining; the rectification and refining of petrol; recovery of petrol from casing-head gas, cracked spirit and shale naphtha; and the adaptation of petrol to certain precise requirements. The importance of standardization of testing is emphasized and chapter 5 deals with this subject somewhat in detail. Has 26 illustrations and 30 tables.

Griffiths, Edgar A. Engineering instruments & meters. London: George Routledge [1920]. xxiv, 360 p. illus. 4°. VBDN (121)

"It is impossible to describe in one volume all types of engineering instruments and meters, but the author has succeeded in covering a very wide field in a highly satisfactory manner. He has taken the wise step of including descriptions of instruments, which are at present used only in very accurate scientific work, in the belief that the novel features of these will ultimately be embodied in the appliances used for routine tests. The scientific principles underlying the various methods of measurements described are dealt with in a simple, yet thorough manner, and the book is provided with a large number of excellent drawings and photographs."—The Technical review, Feb. 15, 1921.

Hammond, John Hays. The engineer. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1921. 194 p. 12°. (Vocational series.)

Deals with the requirements, advantages and shortcomings of the engineering profession with chapters on the special qualifications necessary for the mechanical, civil, mining, electrical, chemical, marine, and military engineer.

Heermann, Paul. Technologie der Textilveredelung. Berlin: Julius Springer, 1921. ix, 564 p. illus. 8°. VLG (121)

This more or less general treatment of fibres, water, chemicals, dyes and pigments, mercerization, dyeing, printing, and finishing is designed to supplant the work of Hummel-Knecht published thirty years ago. Special features are important legislative acts relating to water, a discussion of Ostwald's color theory (with a color plate), and descriptions of certain processes hitherto scattered throughout the technical periodicals. The numerous illustrations are largely from trade catalogues.

Johnson, V. E. Modern high-speed influence machines, their principles, construction and applications to radiography, radio telegraphy, spark photography, electro-culture, electro-therapeutics, high-tension gas ignition, the testing of materials, etc. London: E. & F. N. Spon, Ltd., 1921. vii, 278 p. illus. 8°. PHD (121)

The author believes that the principal objections against the electrostatic machine may be overcome. He, himself, has experimented for more than fifteen years and he states that he has built apparatus capable of producing from 60 to 120 times the quantity of high-tension electricity that can be generated in the ordinary similar Wimshurst machine. These experiments, as well as the various types of other makers, are described. Although simply written and unburdened with mathematics, a knowledge of the ordinary phenomena of electrostatics and static electricity is presupposed. 93 illustrations.

Volume 2, Nonferrous and organic materials; a treatise for aircraft, automobile and mechanical engineers, manufacturers, constructors, designers, draughtsmen, students and others. London: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., 1921. xii, 594 p. illus. 8°. VEE (121)

Treats of aluminum, copper, nickel and their alloys, structure and properties of timber, timber testing, fabrics and coverings, dopes and varnishes, glues and gluing, rubber, paints and plywoods, with an interesting chapter on the x-ray method of examining materials. Well illustrated, and has many charts and tables.

"It has been my endeavor to write a book which, in addition to being accurate, logical and sufficiently rigorous, will furnish the student with numerous examples of the application of the principles of the science. It is with this object in view that four chapters have been devoted to the phase rule and its applications."—Preface.

"A working knowledge of the calculus has been, and is yet, one of the greatest weaknesses of many post-graduate students in chemistry and their teachers in many instances. The broadening out of the science is essential, and to date very few books have appeared which in various ways did not excuse the student from effort. The result has been that few graduates have the power of mathematics and physics behind their chemistry. To the student of physical chemistry the book will be found sufficiently advanced to call for his best concentration and yet leave him a higher plane in the original papers of Gibbs and others."—Canadian chemistry and metallurgy, April, 1921.

Sleeper, M. B. Wireless design and practice. Part 1: Transmitters and receivers. Part 2: Practical circuits. London: Henry Froude, Oxford University Press, 1920. 246 p. illus. 8°. TTF (121)

Practical and simple, devoid of difficult mathematics and intended for the layman. Gives tables of oscillating circuits, aeriads, design of receiving condensers, valve detecting circuits, oscillating valve circuits, damped wave and vacuum transmitters, and a final chapter on practical circuits, with drawings. Well illustrated.

Springett, Bernard H. Cold storage and ice-making, an elementary handbook. London and New York: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., 1921. ix, 122 p. illus. 12°. (Common commodities and industries.) VOI (118)

"This work has been prepared in order to provide a sufficiently comprehensive while necessarily concise handbook on the refrigerating industry... The object has been to present to the general reader, as well as to the untechnical user of refrigerating machinery, sufficient knowledge as to the first principles of artificial refrigeration, while avoiding the mass of technical terms, formulae and descriptions of machinery and methods which are inseparable from the usual publications on the subject." — Preface.

Struben, A. M. A. Tidal power; tides and their measurement; the estimation of potential tidal power; comparisons between systems of development; the financial aspect of the problem; difficulties to be overcome; and the lines for development. London: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., 1921. xii, 115 p. illus. 12°. (Pitman's technical primer series.) VDL (121)

"The practical utilization of the tides for power purposes has only come within measurable distance in recent years, owing to our increased knowledge of the motion and magnitude of the tides, and of the laws affecting the flow of water; and owing to the great strides that have taken place in hydro-electrical power development, which have placed at our disposal the very efficient modern turbine and electric generator and plant for the conversion and transmission of electrical energy to considerable distances." — Preface.

Swinton, A. J., editor. The aeroplane handbook. London: The Aeroplane and General Publishing Company, Limited, 1920. vii, 276 p. diagr. 8°. VDY (121)

Technical compilation intended for those interested in the manufacture and use of aircraft. Has chapters on testing, wireless telegraphy as applied to aircraft, dope, patents and patent law, performance, and propellers.

OEO (117)

Unusually attractive volume, giving the theory, history and development of the key driven calculator, the first practical recorders, the high speed calculators and finally the book bill and billing machines. Beautifully illustrated and has reproductions of drawings and specifications of important patents.

Walbridge, William S. American bottles, old and new. A story of the industry in the United States. Toledo: The Owens Bottle Co., cop. 1920. 113 p. illus. sq. 8°.

An attractive, beautifully illustrated brochure, dealing in an interesting manner with the history of early American glass, and that of antique flasks and bottles. Final pages are devoted to the invention of the Owens bottle machine and its development in this country and abroad.

Whitehead, S. E. Benzol, its recovery, rectification and uses... with an introductory note by the Rt. Hon. Lord Moulton. London: Benn Brothers, Ltd., 1920. xiii, 209 p. illus. 8°. VOF (118)

Clearly-written, well-illustrated discussion of theoretical principles involved in the process of the recovery of the vapours from the gas by means of solvents, as well as descriptions of apparatus and typical plants, by one whose business it was, during the war, to visit works in various parts of England.

"Mr. Whitehead traverses clearly the whole subject... to the working up of the finished products and their numerous applications. His book is the only one of its kind, and should prove an indispensable vade-mecum, not only to those who still carry on benzol extraction, but also to those whose plant is for the moment standing idle." — Chemical age (London), Jan. 1, 1921.

*Whittaker, C. M. The testing of dyestuffs in the laboratory. London: Heywood and Company, Ltd., 1921. 97, 3 p. tables. 4°. VOR (118)

"It may be thought that the compilation of a book dealing with the testing of dyestuffs in the laboratory will be superfluous in view of the numerous books on dyeing already available; but small-scale dyeing, of course, differs in many ways from large-scale operations, so that a book dealing specifically with the former should fill a distinct gap in our present literature."—American dyestuff reporter, Jan. 3, 1921.

*Whitwam, J. H. Textile calculations, manufacture and mechanism. London: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, 1920. xi, 427 p. diagr. 8°. VLD (121)

"The author has found that the average textile student commits certain formulae and rules to memory, and applies them mechanically; he is not sufficiently grounded in the theory and science on which these formulae and rules are based and constructed. It has, therefore, been sought in this treatise to give a full explanation of these, side by side with an exposition of the mathematical problems peculiar to productive routine and work in the spinning and weaving industries.

"Each variety of calculation, relative to the different branches of these industries, has been treated of, including woolen and worsted spinning, woolen and worsted weaving, mill management, cotton spinning, plain and fancy cotton weaving, and linen and silk weaving."—Preface.

Willaman, John J. Vocational chemistry for students of agriculture and home economics. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company [cop. 1921]. vii, 294 p. illus. 8°. (Farm life text series, ed. by K. C. Davis.) PKO (118)

"In the first 146 pages, dealing with pure chemistry, the treatment is general but accurate and well connected, so that a student may gain a clear understanding of many facts which are related to the practical problems in his work. The latter part of the book takes up the more purely agricultural topics of the soil, fertilizers, plants and animals. The material given in the text is well selected and is presented in a clear and interesting way... The book is well printed and has in it numerous attractive illustrations, which though not always strictly chemical in character are illustrative and suggestive. At the end of each chapter are questions and laboratory experiments, both of which will be valuable to teachers who use the text."—Joseph H. Chamberlain in Journal of the American Chemical Society, April, 1921.

"The following pages were written primarily as a preface or reason for the [writer's] second Pianoforte Sonata — "Concord, Mass., 1845," — a group of four pieces, called a sonata for want of a more exact name, as the form, perhaps substance, does not justify it. The music and prefaces were intended to be printed together, but as it was found that this would make a cumbersome volume they are separate. The whole is an attempt to present [one person's] impression of the spirit of transcendentalism that is associated in the minds of many with Concord, Mass., of over half a century ago. This is undertaken in impressionistic pictures of Emerson and Thoreau, a sketch of the Alcotts, and a scherzo supposed to reflect a lighter quality which is often found in the fantastic side of Hawthorne..." REFERENCE BOOKS

Cotton, C. W. E. Handbook of commercial information for India. Calcutta: Superintendent Government Printing, India, 1919. 360 p. illus. 8°.

Aims to give readers outside of India a bird's-eye view of the foreign trade of the country. Intended to supplement Sir George Watt's Dictionary of the economic products of India. Import trade is of secondary importance. Areas of export products are specified, ports used are designated, together with the method of marketing and the unit of sale and shipment. Appendices contain tonnage schedules in force at the five principal ports and a glossary of vernacular terms. Commercial organizations are given considerable attention. The book is indexed.

Dictionnaire suisse des contemporains; herausgegeben von Hermann Aellen... Dr. Wilhelm Josef Meyer... Edgard Marraud und Dr. Hugo Walser. Erste Lieferung, A-F. Bern: Verlag des Schweizerischen Zeitgenossen-Lexikon, 1921. 12°.

To be complete in two volumes.

Condensed biographical facts about eminent contemporary Swiss. Similar to Who's Who. Compiler states that most of his material was collected prior to 1915 and a supplementary volume is anticipated to bring the work up-to-date. Some biographies are given in German and some in the French language.

The Encyclopedia and dictionary of education; edited by Professor Foster Watson. Parts 1-4. London: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons.

To be complete in 31 parts.

A British reference work on education, and while foreign contributors have assisted in the compilation and some foreign references are included, the work is chiefly useful for facts concerning education in the United Kingdom. Articles, in general, are short and suited for secondary schools rather than for universities. Only part of the articles are signed and many of the bibliographical references seem out-of-date. Prospectus announces that when complete the encyclopedia will consist of four volumes of 2,000 pages with 2,250 separate articles.

Firkins, Ina Ten Eyck. Henrik Ibsen: a bibliography of criticism and biography with an index to characters. New York: The H. W. Wilson Company; London: Grafton & Co., 1921. 80 p. 12°. (Practical bibliographies.)

For general use rather than for the scholar. Not a complete list of Ibsen's writings. Includes selected list of critical and biographical material relating to Ibsen. Arranged in three lists: an author index, a subject index, and an index to characters. Alphabetical list of all characters in the plays and title of play in which they appear are given.

Holmes, Arthur. The nomenclature of petrology, with references to selected literature. London: Thomas Murby, 1920. 284 p. 12°.

A dictionary of rock names bringing up-to-date the Loewinson-Lessing Lexique pétrographique which appeared twenty years ago. Excludes (a) modifications of existing terms, (b) most compound terms built up from mineral qualifiers, (c) most obsolete terms. Includes list of books which define petrographic terms, appendices of French petrographic terms, German petrographic terms, Greek words and prefixes, Latin words and prefixes, and classification tables.*

Little, Arthur D., Inc. Reading list on papermaking materials; compiled by Clarence J. West, Information Department, Arthur D. Little, Inc. Cambridge, Mass., 1921. 170 p. 8°. (Bibliographic series. no. 6.)

Reprinted from the Paper trade journal, 1920-21. Originally published as Contribution no. 23 of the Committee on Bibliography, Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry.

A carefully prepared bibliography arranged by subject and consisting for the most part of references to articles in some 130 American and foreign chemical and paper trade journals. Analyticals from books are given also, these being listed under the author in the dictionary arrangement.

Plumon's dictionaries of technical terms. Paris and Liège: Librairie polytechnique, Ch. Beranger, éditeur; London: Selwyn and Blount, Limited, 1919.

Dictionaries which have already appeared include: The factory, 256 p.; Reinforced concrete, 238 p.; Shipping and transport, 767 p. Those announced include twenty-eight titles on practically every phase of technical construction. Most of the volumes, it is announced, are in English, French, German, Spanish, Italian and Dutch. Those which have appeared are French-English, English-French and, in the case of the Reinforced concrete volume, in French-English-Italian. Terms are arranged under subject with an index of words and some tables and bibliographies illustrated.

Rushmore, Elsie M., editor. Social worker's guide to the serial publications of representative social agencies; with an introduction by Frederick W. Jenkins, librarian of the Russell Sage Foundation Library. New York: Russell Sage Foundation, 1921. 174 p. 8°.

A checklist to aid social workers who use the Russell Sage Foundation Library, to supply students at a distance with a source guide, and to promote visits to and studies of social institutions. Omits the publications of institutions and organizations which do not appear regularly. Some technical periodicals are included. The condition of the files in the Russell Sage Foundation is indicated. An index by subjects supplements the main arrangement which is alphabetical by title or, in case of institutions, by place. Lists 4,000 institutions or organizations.

Scarone, Arturo. Uruguayos contemporáneas; obra de consulta biográfica; diccionario de datos referentes a compatriotas de figuración en las letras, artes, ciencias, parlamento, magisterio, milicias, etc., etc., y de algunos extranjeros desde largo tiempo incorporados y descollantes en nuestra vida publicado; primera edición, con un apéndice con datos complementarios. Montevideo: Imprenta y Casa editorial "Renacimiento," 1918. 676 p. 12°.

An illustrated dictionary of eminent contemporary Uruguayans. The work while of uneven merit, is useful because little reference material on this subject exists. The facts supplied have not been given in a uniform manner. Dates of birth are often omitted and only the briefest details given. Other biographies in the book are fairly complete. A great many names and portraits are included. There is an index of portraits. A second edition is announced as in preparation.

Weekley, Ernest. An etymological dictionary of modern English. London: John Murray, 1921. 1659 p. 8°.

Intended to meet the need of the etymologist who has an interest in words and curiosity as to their origins and earlier senses without wishing to go back to pre-historic roots or conjectural word-forms. Includes the foreign elements in the language. "The vocabulary dealt with is roughly speaking that of the 'Concise Oxford dictionary'...and Cassell's 'New English dictionary.'" Many slang words and archaisms are included. Foreign words will be found if they are likely to occur in reading and in educated conversation, as will many proper names. "For the small nucleus of Aryan words the parallel forms are given from the other languages, Teutonic and Romance, together with some indication of the word in Celtic and Slavonic, Persian and Sanskrit." Approximate date of appearance in the language of some foreign words is given. Quotations used in some cases. Inclines to the semantic rather than the phonetic school. Contains a bibliography of modern etymological dictionaries.

West African directory and year book, 1920-21; editors, Dusé Mohamed Ali; W. F. Hutchison. London: Africa and Oriental Review [1921]. 253 p. 12°.

The first edition of what is planned as an annual publication giving information particularly for traders regarding the West African states of Liberia, The Gambia, Sierra Leone, Gold Coast and Nigeria. The work shows some of the defects usually found in first issues of this kind. Much information of general interest, such as government departments, educational establishments, history, banking and currency, population and ethnology, missions, tribes and chiefs. A few biographies of eminent citizens are included as well as detailed statistics concerning industry and trade.

CHAPTER XVIII

Life in the New Building, 1911-1920

The formal opening of the new building took place on the sixteenth birthday of the Library, May 23, 1911. The ceremonies were held in the Fifth Avenue entrance hall in the presence of about six hundred guests. Invitations had been sent to the President and Vice-President of the United States, and the heads of the Federal departments; to the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor of the State of New York, the Speaker of the Assembly and the heads of the State departments; to the Mayor of the City of New York and the heads of the City departments; to the Presidents of the principal eastern colleges and universities; to the principal librarians in the country; and to the Presidents of the principal art societies, professional organizations and clubs of the City. Invitations were also sent to members of the judiciary, the clergy, the editors of the principal newspapers, the commanding officer at Governor's Island and his staff, the commanding officer at the Brooklyn Navy Yard and his staff, and to representatives of the families of John Jacob Astor, James Lenox, and Samuel Jones Tilden. A limited number of members of the families and friends of the Trustees of the Library were also invited, together with members of the families of deceased Trustees, persons who had made gifts to the Library, and persons who had been actively connected with the circulating libraries that from time to time had been absorbed into The New York Public Library.

At two o'clock in the afternoon the Trustees, the Director and Assistant Director, and a few invited guests, started from the Trustees room where they had assembled, to the temporary platform erected in the central arch on the west side, facing the Fifth Avenue entrance.

The order of the procession was as follows:

Dr. John S. Billings and Mr. Edwin H. Anderson
 Mr. John Henry Hammond and Mr. John W. Alexander
 Mr. Henry W. Taft and Mr. Edward W. Sheldon
 Mr. Cleveland H. Dodge and Mr. Justice Samuel Greenbaum
 Mr. Andrew Carnegie and Mr. W. W. Appleton
 Mr. George W. Smith and Mr. Charles Howland Russell
 Mr. George L. Rives
 Mr. John L. Cadwalader and Mr. Frederick Sturges
 Mr. Thomas Hastings and Hon. Charles B. Stover, Commissioner of Parks
 Bishop Greer and Archbishop Farley
 Mr. William J. Gaynor, Mayor of the City of New York, and
 Mr. Lewis Cass Ledyard
 Mr. John A. Dix, Governor of the State of New York, and
 Mr. Morgan J. O'Brien
 The Governor's Aide, Lieutenant-Commander De Kay
 Mr. William H. Taft, President of the United States, and Mr. John Bigelow
 The President's Secretary, Mr. Hilles, and the President's Aide, Major Butt.

The Right Reverend David Hummell Greer, D.D., Bishop of New York, made the opening prayer. He was followed by Mr. Rives who read an historical address. Mr. Thomas Hastings then delivered the key of the building to Commissioner Stover, who responded in a brief address and delivered the key to Mayor Gaynor. The latter then gave it to Mr. Bigelow who accepted it on behalf of the Library. Governor Dix and President Taft spoke of the place the library held in State and nation, and Archbishop Farley closed with a benediction.*

The building was then thrown open for inspection, till four o'clock by the guests invited to the ceremonies, from four to six o'clock by several thousand persons to whom invitations for this purpose had been sent.

* A full account of the opening, with the text of the addresses, was printed in the Bulletin of the Library for June, 1911, and was issued also in a separate pamphlet.

At nine o'clock the next morning its doors were opened to the general public. Visitors far outnumbered readers for the first few days. The crowd on Wednesday the 24th was so large as to defy counting, but conservative estimates put the number of visitors at from thirty to fifty thousand. Notwithstanding these throngs 315 readers were served with 654 volumes in the main reading room, and in the special reading rooms, 619 other readers found time to study.

The first book called for was Delia Bacon's "Philosophy of the plays of Shakespeare unfolded" The Library had no copy, and Mr. C. A. Montgomery, who made this first call, gave the Library his copy of the work a day or two later.

The first volume delivered was in Russian. Mr. A. Shub of 1699 Washington Avenue, filed a slip at 9.08 a. m. for N. Y. Grot's "Nravstvennyye idealy nashevo vremeni" (Moral ideas of our time: Friedrich Nietzsche and Leo Tolstoi) and received the volume six minutes later.

In the circulation room the first few days were given up mainly to registration of applicants for cards. On Wednesday and Thursday, the 24th and 25th, over 1800 applications were signed. On Wednesday 74 volumes were lent, all charged on cards issued at other branches. On Thursday 209 volumes were circulated.

In the children's room eleven volumes were circulated on the 24th and 408 during the seven remaining days in May. In these seven days, seventy-five children (forty-two boys and thirty-three girls) were registered as borrowers, of whom but two had ever before used any Branch.

The opening ceremonies being past, readers and staff adjusted themselves quickly to the new conditions. This period of adjustment was probably more trying to the staff than to the readers, and during the next eight months there were times when members of the staff rubbed their eyes and wondered what was happening. Though the building had been taken over by the Library, all the contractors had not gone and their workmen were with us day and night, during working hours and before and after, testing, adjusting, repairing furniture and equipment. It was not till the winter was well over that we really felt we were in our own home and were not subject to the insistence of contractors, workmen, or inspectors.

May, 1911, marked the opening of the new building and it marked also the establishment of the Library School. A letter from Mr. Carnegie to Mr. Anderson, dated May 9, was laid before the trustees at their meeting on May 10, offering to provide $15,000 for each of the next five years for the expenses of a library school, designed primarily to provide for trained assistants for the staff of The New York Public Library and also to instruct in the technique of library work pupils who preferred to work elsewhere than in New York City.

Miss Mary W. Plummer, for fifteen years connected with Pratt Institute as librarian or director of its library school, was appointed principal. The summer months were spent in the necessary preparation for students, equipment of class rooms, securing a teaching staff, advertising for students. Admission examinations were held in September and the school opened on October 2nd with a faculty of six and a student body of thirty-three.

The school course called for two one-year terms. The first year was devoted to lectures and practice work at the Central Building and the Branches. Students passing this test successfully were given "certificates" at the commencement exercises held in June, 1912. The second year course was devoted to what was called "paid practice work" and to attendance at a limited number of lectures. Students taking this course were put on the library staff and were paid for the time they served. In addition they had certain lecture courses and assignments in the field of bibliography and investigation and research into various related phases of library work. At the end of the second year they were given "diplomas" as graduates of the school.

Miss Plummer was a most happy choice for a difficult position. Her personality expressed itself in many ways, in the decoration and attractiveness of the school rooms, in the social gatherings for afternoon tea or for Halloween or other evening entertainments, in the choice of lecturers outside the library world, men and women whom it was good for students — and librarians — to know and whose stimulating and suggestive messages were heightened and strengthened by the happy phrases with which the speakers were introduced by the Principal. The commencement exercises too, at which librarians of distinction were invited to address the school, and which were preceded by a dinner and reunion of graduates, were happy events that owed much to Miss Plummer.

The first class completed its first year's work in June, 1912, and twenty-five certificates were granted. Of the nineteen pupils who took the second year course the following year, sixteen received their diplomas in June, 1913, and constituted the first graduates of the school.

Miss Plummer served the school for five years, until failing health forced her resignation. She died September 21, 1916. For the year 1916-17 Professor Azariah S. Root, on leave from his position as Librarian of Oberlin College, served as her successor. In April, 1917, Mr. Ernest J. Reece was appointed principal, his duties beginning September 1.

With the establishment of the Library School came an end to the system of training, begun by Doctor Billings in 1897, taken over by the circulation department in 1901, and continued under the name of "apprentice course," "training class" or some similar phrase for the next ten years. There was still present, however, the necessity of providing elementary instruction for assistants in minor positions who lacked the formal education requisite for admission to the library school. To meet this need a probation class was formed, composed in the main of candidates too young for the school, who were willing to serve a probation period of about four months. The Library School supervised this work on behalf of the Circulation Department, from 1911 to the spring of 1919, when the School found itself unable to continue, for financial reasons. The Circulation Department thereupon resumed entire charge of the course, making various modifications to meet the changed conditions.

Just before the opening of the new building, on February 20, 1911, Dr. John S. Billings, jr., was appointed medical officer, a new position in the American library world. In this capacity he gave each member of the Staff an annual physical examination, made surveys of the various library buildings, offered suggestions as to improvement in conditions of work, hours of service, and other phases of work affecting the health of the Staff. His suggestions and recommendations were always interesting and it was with regret the Library learned that the pressure of other duties forced him to offer his resignation November 1, 1917.

This transition period of change from the old buildings to the new was marked also by the appointment of an advisory committee on prints for the Reference Department, on May 10, 1911, consisting of Messrs. Howard Mansfield, Frederic R. Halsey and Edward G. Kennedy, all of them men of taste and experience in the world of prints. The appointment and the choice of the committee were due very largely to Mr. Cadwalader who hoped in this way to broaden the scope and influence of the print room and the print collection. The committee served a useful purpose in the early days in the new building, but its effectiveness was lessened by death and resignation and no new committee was appointed, its functions being taken over by the standing Art Committee.

The year 1911 was marked further by the death, on December 19, of the venerable president of the Trustees, John Bigelow, at his home in New York in the ninety-fifth year of his age. First and only President of the Tilden Trust, first President of the Trustees of The New York Public Library, editor of the Evening Post, American consul at Paris during the Civil War, American minister to France in the reign of Napoleon III., secretary of state of New York, he had spent a long and useful life in public service. On February 14, 1912, Mr. John L. Cadwalader, one of the original trustees, and first vice-president for the past three years, was elected President. Mr. George L. Rives, formerly second vice-president, was chosen first vice-president and Mr. Lewis Cass Ledyard second vice-president.

With 1912 the institution had settled down into an approximation of its usual routine. By this time we had been freed from most of the contractors who had spent so many hours with us in 1911, we had begun to feel we had some control over the building and its inhabitants, and our history settles down once again to a record of routine growth and development rather than to any narrative of events of extraordinary interest or unusual moment.

The year was marked by the addition of two collections of very different character. The National Shorthand Reporters Association deposited the Beale Shorthand Collection and the Military Service Institution transferred to us its library. The Beale books numbered some 1,884 volumes and 2,596 pamphlets, brought together by Charles Currier Beale, of Boston, whose name ranks high in the annals of American shorthand. The collection was particularly strong in files of periodicals and in early English and American text books before the introduction of the Pitman system. After the death of Mr. Beale, the collection was bought from his widow by the national association and deposited with us, the understanding being that after the association had repaid the subscribers to the fund with which the collection had been purchased title to the books would eventually revert to The New York Public Library.

The Military Service Institution books were an eloquent tribute to the collecting zeal, industry, and devotion of the late secretary of the institution, Brigadier General Theodore F. Rodenbough, U. S. A. (retired). They numbered about 8,000 pieces and were deposited on about the same terms as the American Bible Society collections.

Among the passengers lost on the Titanic April 15, 1912, was William Augustus Spencer, son of Lorillard Spencer of New York and Sarah Johnson Griswold of Lynne, Connecticut. Though he spent most of his life in Europe, particularly Paris, he never lost his interest in his native city and its institutions, and by his will, dated August 11, 1910, he left to The New York Public Library his entire collection of illustrated books in fine bindings, as well as one half of the residue of his estate, subject to his wife's life interest. Mrs. Spencer died October 26, 1913. The books, as they came from the executors of Mr. Spencer's estate, numbered 232 volumes, illustrated by more than 200 artists, and bound by twenty-six of the best modern binders. They were largely the work of French writers of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The illustrations represented such artists as Paul Avril, Adolphe and Alphonse Lalauze, Rochegrosse, Maurice Leloir, Robaudi, Giacomelli, many of the volumes including the original designs from which the illustrations were made, and most of them included plate proofs in various states. The bindings were very elaborate and ornate, some having required more than two years for execution. In design they departed widely from classic conceptions and afforded excellent illustration of the originality characteristic of modern French binders. Mercier, Marius Michel, Lortic, Gruel, Chambolle-Duru, Joly, Canape are names that come quickly to mind in a survey of the collection. The books were on exhibition in the main exhibition room from June to November, 1913, and the Library printed in the Bulletin for June, 1914, a descriptive catalogue illustrated with reproductions of noteworthy bindings and accompanied by an appreciative introduction by Mr. Henry W. Kent, Secretary of the Metropolitan Museum.

They gave a very good idea of Mr. Spencer's taste in literature, art, book-binding. His plans for the development of the collection were set forth at length in the tenth clause of his will. Here he directed his executors to convey to the Library on the death of his wife one half his residuary estate, to be invested as a separate fund, the income of which was to be used for "the purchase of handsomely illustrated books" which were to be handsomely bound if not purchased in this condition. He went on to say: "In short it is my wish, if the Trustees of The New York Public Library accept this bequest, that they form a collection thereby increasing the bequest made in the eighth clause of this my Last Will and Testament, of the finest illustrated books that can be procured, of any country and in any language, and that these books be bound in handsome binding representing the work of the most noted book-binders of all countries, thus constituting a collection representative of the arts of illustration and bookbinding." He also authorized the purchase of "any book or books with, or containing, the original designs, drawings or paintings made by the illustrator to illustrate said book or books, in order to form a more complete and valuable collection representative of the art of illustration." An essential condition of the bequest was an agreement by the Library to keep the collection together always in one or more rooms, separate from other collections.

The value of this gift was expected to amount to about a million dollars and the opportunity thereby furnished the Library for development of a collection of illustrated books in fine bindings was most enviable.

Dr. Billings died in New York City on March 11, 1913. He was first Director of the Library, a distinguished scholar and investigator in several fields, a strong, versatile, virile, kindly, gentle man. This is not the place for a tribute to his position in the field of American medicine or other realms of scholarly research, nor for an appreciation of his eminence as creator of the Surgeon General's Library and its famous "Index Catalogue," and we are perhaps still too near in point of time to sit in final judgment as to his place in the history of The New York Public Library. It is not right, however, to let the occasion pass without saying that, as in many respects the early days of the Astor Library reflect the personality of Joseph Green Cogswell, as the Lenox Library reflected the personality of James Lenox, so the first two decades of The New York Public Library bear many stamps of the personality of its first Director. There were few men of his calibre available for the trustees in 1895; there were few men of his independence, foresight, learning, and patience, who could have faced the problems of those early days with his sober determination. He lived a long and useful life, served his country in its hour of need, and after a generation spent in Washington, and at an age when most men think of laying down their burdens, came to a new home, to work in a new field, with new problems. When well beyond three score and ten he saw his beloved library firmly established as an institution of the City, adequately housed in a central building and with numerous branches in the design of which he had borne an honorable part. Without question when he bade farewell to these familiar scenes he must have gone with a sense of completion and accomplishment few men are so fortunate to possess in equal measure. A memorial service was held at the Library on April 25, 1913, at which Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, Sir Richard Osler, Dr. William H. Welch, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, Mr. Richard R. Bowker, and Mr. John L. Cadwalader gave expression to the appreciation in which this versatile mind was held in many different fields of learning.*

Mr. Edwin H. Anderson, Assistant Director since June 1, 1908, was on May 14, 1913, elected Director as successor to Dr. Billings.

The events of the next seven years are still so fresh in our minds as to require little more than passing summary.

Just a year, to the day, after the death of his friend Dr. Billings, John L. Cadwalader, second President of the Trustees of The New York Public Library, died in this city on March 11, 1914, in his seventy-eighth year. Thirty-four years had he served continuously as a trustee of the Astor Library and as a trustee of the new library, from November 5, 1879, until his death. He had been one of the men responsible for the consolidation of the three libraries, and in the councils of the new corporation his voice had been potent above most others. His friend and colleague, George L. Rives, paid a tribute to his wholesome life and influence in a brief memoir issued privately by the Trustees of the Library† and printed also in the Bulletin for April, 1914.

By his will Mr. Cadwalader left the Library the sum of $50,000 for the increase of certain salaries in the Reference Department and a second sum of $50,000 for the purchase of prints; he indicated a preference for old prints, but did not make this a condition of the bequest. He left also his interesting and choice, characteristic collection of prints, 360 in number, mainly mezzotints and stipple engravings, and a selection from his library of about 1,000 volumes relating to engravings, porcelain, art, fishing and shooting.

Mr. Rives was elected President in his place on May 13, 1914, and Mr. Ledyard First Vice-President on October 14.

Death took another good friend of the Library this same year when Mrs. Henry Draper died at her home on Madison Avenue December 8. The wife and helpmeet of a distinguished scientist, she had long known Dr. Billings as an officer of the National Academy of Sciences. His connection with the Library led her to take a personal interest in the institution and the Staff equalled by few of our benefactors. Her gifts numbered thousands of volumes and by her will she left a fund of $200,000 for the purchase of books as a memorial to Dr. Billings, a fund of $50,000 for assistance to members of the Staff who might be ill or disabled, and a third fund, from the residuary estate, amounting to $200,000 for purchase of books in memory of her father Cortlandt Palmer. She left also her collection of engraved gems and such of the books in her library as the Library might choose.

* An account of the proceedings at this meeting, with the text of the addresses, was printed in the Bulletin for July, 1913, and was issued also as a separate pamphlet.

Through a bequest under the will of Thomas A. Janvier and the gift by Mrs. Catherine Ann Janvier of her life interest therein, the Library received a notable collection of books relating to Mexico, 648 volumes, 151 pamphlets, and many maps, photographs, letters, etc. At a later date Mrs. Janvier added her own collection of Provençal books.

To the Music Division came this year the important collection of musical literature given by Mrs. Julian Edwards as a memorial to her late husband. It contained 90 full scores of operas, 150 full scores of cantatas, concertos, oratorios, overtures, suites, etc., 300 vocal scores of operas, oratorios, etc., and 325 books on musical subjects.

The Science Division rejoiced in the acquisition of 1,600 volumes and pamphlets on meteorology and terrestrial magnetism collected at the Central Park Observatory by the late Dr. Daniel Draper. After Dr. Draper's death the federal government took over the meteorological record work hitherto done by him, and the library he had collected passed to The New York Public Library.

This year marked also the establishment of two new centres of activity, the Manuscript Division and the Municipal Reference Library. Material for the former had long existed, but it was not until 1914 that the Library was able to put the manuscripts in charge of a special officer. On September 24 Mr. Victor Hugo Paltsits, who had for many years been first assistant in the Lenox branch, and who from 1907 until 1911 had been State Historian of New York, was put in charge of the manuscript collections, and on November 16 the manuscript research room was opened for students.

The Municipal Reference Library was placed under control of The New York Public Library on April 1, 1914. Various officials had in the past seen the need for such a service, but it remained for Comptroller William A. Prendergast to begin a municipal reference library as a part of the finance department. When this service was opened on March 31, 1913, the Comptroller explained that he had begun the work at the suggestion and request of several members of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, that he intended to keep it as part of the finance department no longer than necessary, and that he expected it to become at some future date a separate division of the City government under the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

On March 6, 1914, the Board of Estimate by resolution authorized The New York Public Library to assume management and to operate it as a branch in the Municipal Building. The Library was then consolidated with the old City Library in the City Hall, and both collections moved to new quarters set aside for them on the fifth floor of the Municipal Building. Mr. Robert A. Campbell, the first Librarian was appointed April 1. He resigned seven months later and was succeeded on October 19, by Dr. Charles C. Williamson, taken from his post as Chief of the Economics Division of the Reference Department. Dr. Williamson resigned May 1, 1918, to take a position with the Americanization study conducted by the Carnegie Corporation. He was succeeded by Mr. Dorsey W. Hyde, jr., who served as librarian until February 14, 1920, when he resigned to undertake the organization of a research bureau for the Packard Motor Truck Company of Detroit, being succeeded February 15 by Miss Rebecca B. Rankin who for some time had served as assistant librarian.

Before we take final leave of 1914, we must record the beginning of a shelf list in the summer of this year. The Circulation Department had for years rejoiced in shelf list records of its books, but the Reference Department had none. When we prepared for moving into the new building we made a step towards a shelf list by including a shelf list card among the sets of cards transcribed for the collections in the special rooms. In this way the skeleton of a shelf record was provided for the American History, Art, Genealogy, Science, Economics, and Technology divisions. No shelf record existed for the books shelved in the stacks or for the reserve, Stuart, music, Slavonic, Jewish, Oriental, public documents, or newspaper collections.

To provide the nucleus for a shelf record of the books in the main stack room we used the photostat machine for a speedy and accurate reproduction of the author cards. A systematic examination of the public catalogue was made and author cards were withdrawn for such classes of books as had no shelf list. These cards were sent to the photostat room where they were photographed and then returned the same day for refileing in the public catalogue. The photostat exposures were made, nine at a time, on a sensitized sheet, specially made for this work. The sheets were sent to the printing office to be dried, cut, and punched, and the cards thus made were alphabetized by classes to serve as the basis for a reading of the shelves and establishment of a shelf list. In all some 206,829 cards were reproduced in this way at less than one-third the cost of copying by any other process, and with complete elimination of the danger of error in transcription.

These cards, together with printed cards for all books catalogued since 1911 when we began printing an extra card for a shelf list, served as a basis for the first systematic comparison of books on the shelves with what the records called for, the first reading of the shelves as librarians call it. About 800,000 volumes were handled this time, of which number 6,000 were missing. About 25,000 were reclassified and 37,000 recatalogued.

The summer of 1914 was further marked by a series of experiments as to the best method of preserving the modern newspaper. Printed on paper made from mechanical wood pulp these papers are made to be sold to-day with never a thought as to their condition tomorrow, so far as the publisher is concerned. When the librarian binds them for preservation for future students he is confronted with the difficulty of sewing and binding — according to our present-day standards — anything so brittle and fragile as our current newspaper. A further difficulty faces him when he examines a paper bound but a few years ago. If it has been used he finds the edges frayed, the sheets brittle, yellow, broken almost beyond hope of repair, altogether a most despairing situation unless one is willing to cultivate indifference as to the needs of the student of to-morrow or the next generation.

During this summer we made numerous experiments as to the best way of treating new papers and old ones. The use of chemical solutions put on by spray or by dipping suggested itself and we tried "zapon" and all the other materials and compounds we had heard of or could learn about. At the end we decided that, all things considered, the best treatment for old stock and new was the covering of both sides of the sheet with a sheet of thin transparent Japanese tissue paper, using a rice paste approved for the purpose by the Bureau of Standards at Washington. In this manner the air was shut off from the paper, the tensile and folding strength was increased manifold, and the legibility was reduced but slightly.

We then told the publishers of New York city papers of the result of our experiments and offered to bind the current volumes in this way for any willing to pay the cost of the additional treatment. The World accepted the opportunity promptly and some other papers manifested interest though none of them took any action. From July, 1916, the current files of the World have been thus treated with very satisfactory results. In January, 1921, the Times and the Evening Post began to have their files so treated.

Few outstanding events mark 1915 beyond the opening of the George Bruce Branch in a new building, 78 Manhattan Street, on June 2. The building and site for this Branch at 226 West 42nd Street were originally presented to the New York Free Circulating Library by Miss Catherine Wolf Bruce, in memory of her father, George Bruce, the type founder, and the library was opened to the public on January 6, 1888. With the erection of the West 40th Street Branch and the opening of the Circulation Branch in the Central Building there was no need for a second branch on 42nd Street. The site and building were sold, and the branch closed in the old building on August 26, 1913. The new site was bought on December 9 following and building begun at as early a date as possible. War conditions made it impossible to open the new building, however, until June, 1915, after which time the old branch in a new neighborhood worthily sustained its reputation for usefulness.

Mr. Rives, third President of the Board of Trustees, died at his summer home in Newport, Rhode Island, August 18, 1917. He had served as a trustee of the Astor Library from 1883 to 1888, and as a trustee of the Lenox Library from 1893 to 1895. He was one of the men most prominent in the negotiations that led to the consolidation of 1895 and in the first quarter century of the new library his voice and counsel were of great weight and moment. Lewis Cass Ledyard, first Vice-President, was elected President in his place on December 12, 1917, and on January 9, 1918, Hon. Elihu Root was chosen First Vice-President and Mr. Cleveland H. Dodge Second Vice-President on February 13, 1918.

The spring of 1917 was marked by the formation of The New York Public Library Staff Association. A staff association had existed in an unorganized form since the monthly meetings with the Director had been held in 1897. Of late years these meetings had come at about quarterly intervals. At a general meeting of the Staff held in the Stuart Gallery of the Central Building on April 19, it was voted to form a permanent organization for social, professional, and economic betterment. A committee of ten was appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws for consideration at a second meeting. This meeting was held on May 28, and at it and its adjourned session of June 4, a constitution and set of by-laws was adopted, and at the June meeting the first officers were elected, Mr. Franklin F. Hopper, President; Miss Louise Griffith, Vice-President; Miss Alice Bancroft, Recording Secretary; Mr. Harry J. Grumpelt, Corresponding Secretary; Miss Josephine Curry, Treasurer. The association has served admirably to give organized expression to the wishes of the Staff, and the experience of the first few years gives every reason to believe it will prove to be one of the most useful features of the institution.

In May, 1917, the Trustees were informed that the French societies in New York had tendered a reception to the French war commission headed by Marshal Joffre and M. Viviani, and that for that purpose they had requested the use of the Central Building. As it would be necessary to close the building to the general public if the request were granted, an amendment or modification of the agreement under which the City occupies the building was secured from the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. The reception was held and formed one of the most memorable events of those stirring months that marked our entry into the war.

During the next two years the Central Building was often decorated for parades, reviews, or "drives," but never did it surpass in beauty its appearance on that evening. There were enormous crowds of people on the adjoining streets, but the terraces in front, and the streets and side-walks immediately surrounding the Library were cleared. Mounted troops guarded the approaches. Venetian masts and banners had been erected on the terrace, and admirable taste had been employed in their design and arrangement. The whole exterior of the building was illuminated by the rays of golden yellow search-lights. The Marshal and his Staff, the military, naval and diplomatic uniforms of the guests made the reception inside the building an extraordinarily brilliant spectacle to be taking place within a public library in America.

Our whole life had, of course, been affected in many ways since the war broke out. The year 1914, for us as for the rest of the world, changed the old order to the new. The first three years, however, did not touch us as closely or as intimately as the two that followed. The first obvious effect was to send us in the summer of 1914 an unusual number of applicants for positions, people thrown out of work by the industrial upheaval of the first few weeks. Then came the readers sent us because of the new problems raised by the war, students of some new form of destruction, searchers after new defenses, investigators of new economic conditions, chemists looking for formulas of products cut off by the war. The unemployment was a passing phase, now all forgotten. The students of war conditions and war problems were with us to the end.

As the world settled down to the change and reconciled itself to war conditions the next most obvious effect on the Library was the upsetting of our schedules of arrival of European books and periodicals. Readers still grumbled, to be sure, because we could not supply the Saturday Review within a week, or the Revue de Deux Mondes within ten days after publication, but most of them were reasonable and appreciated that Mars was more interested in munitions of war than in newspaper or magazine deliveries.

The flood of propaganda literature from both sides of the camp reached us at an early day. The Library recognized the importance of this phase of the struggle and prepared at once to collect, acquire, and preserve all printed matter about the war it possibly could. Our agents in Europe were instructed to remember that we wanted everything that would cast light on the struggle to-day or to-morrow.

The Bulletin for August contained an article on "The Literature of the War," taking up some of the more obvious books any one interested in any phase of the great struggle would care to read. A supplement appeared in the November issue of the Bulletin. In October appeared a study of the effect of the war on the reading done in the Central Building and the branches. Beginning with November appeared in each number of the Bulletin a list of books about the conflict recently added to the Reference Department.

As months went by several members of the Staff left us to take some part in the struggle, most of them in the early days as non-combatants. As the entry of our own country became more clearly foreshadowed we lost more to our own army and navy, and when the storm finally broke, the men of fighting age, without exception, stepped forward to meet the call. A list of members of the Staff in war service printed as part of the annual report for 1918 records 73 in the army and navy, 11 in the American Red Cross service, 11 in the American Library Association work, 10 in the Young Men's Christian Association service, 1 with the Young Women's Christian Association, and 49 in Government work of one kind or another.

We lost but one in action, William Berthold Behrens, who had entered the Library as a page, advanced himself to a position of responsibility in the Technology Division, had gone with his regiment (22nd New York National Guard) to the Mexican border in 1916, and had worked from the ranks to a commission as second lieutenant in the machine gun company of the 106th infantry. He was killed at Bellicourt on the Cambrai front, September 27, 1918.

Robert Shevitt, of the Order Division and, later, of the Current Periodicals Division, who entered the navy and was rated as Electrician, First Class Radio, was drowned in Brest harbor, April 14, 1919.

Three were wounded: Corporal Carl L. Cannon, 312th infantry, shot in the hip and gassed; Hugh Gordon, wounded and gassed at Chateau Thierry; Carl Peehl, 308th infantry, gassed.

Those of us who stayed at home had ample opportunity for war service. The women knitted for the Red Cross and other services, took their places in canteen work, saw to it that the men under arms were remembered by Christmas boxes and letters. Most of the men were called on for service in the "drives" or other ways.

The Library building saw pass before it most of the stirring parades and other civic events that marked the beginning, course, and end of the war. Not a "drive" for any war activity was started but a booth or a set of standards or a painting was added to the numerous forms of extra-library equipment with which the building was already equipped. Military and naval bands of all degrees of excellence and loudness, firing squads of soldiers or sailors or marines giving salutes with great variety in volume of sound in rapidity, troops of performing elephants, singers from the opera, stage celebrities, tanks, airplanes, wooden ships, canvas tents, wooden huts, ambulances and a bewildering succession of other evidences to martial activity made it difficult to realize that behind these enormous crowds stood a library trying to conduct its usual work. Parades became so common as scarcely to cause a ripple of excitement, but it is safe to say that no one who saw the crowds surging in front of the building on the 7th and 11th of November, 1918, will ever forget the sight or the event.

In the last twelve months of the struggle the Library had the privilege of seeing several of the investigators for the "House" commission use its collections, and those of us who had stayed at home felt that even as non-combatants far behind the lines we had not been without a share in the efforts towards victory.

The war had an unfortunate effect on the finances of the Library, decreasing the returns from corporate funds and making it difficult in many ways to meet the advance in prices. In both the Circulation and Reference Departments we were forced seriously to curtail our binding, to see our book funds cut in half, and to lose many of the Staff because we could not compete with the more attractive opportunities offered by the outside world. It was not a happy prospect and it would seem darker were it not for a firm belief that our cause is worthy of public support, is an essential part of the intellectual life of the community, and therefore is sure of realization of its hope of better things.

PROVENÇAL LITERATURE AND LANGUAGE, INCLUDING THE LOCAL HISTORY OF SOUTHERN FRANCE

A LIST OF REFERENCES IN

COMPILED BY DANIEL C. HASKELL

The material listed here represents a fairly good collection of books for the student of either the old Provençal or the modern revival. More than ordinary interest attaches to the modern books because they came to the Library by gift from Mrs. Thomas A. Janvier, who added to her enthusiasm as a book collector the advantages of an intimate knowledge of the country and the people gleaned from frequent visits and from an extensive acquaintance with the leaders in the literary movement. Besides the printed books there came from Mrs. Janvier eleven letters from Félix Gras, Gaston Jourdanne, Mistral, and Jules Ronjat.

Associated Mountaineering Clubs of North America. Bulletin. 1921. [New York, 1921,] 41 p. 16°.

This association now numbers forty-five clubs. During the past year it has assisted in the campaign to protect the national parks from commercial inroads; also in preserving the groves of California redwood. The current bulletin lists several new books on mountaineering, outlines the proposed expedition to Mount Everest, and gives information on other timely topics. Copies may be obtained gratis from Mr. Le Roy Jeffers, 476 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Audley, James A. Silica and the silicates. London: Baillière, Tindall and Cox, 1921. xiv, 374 p. illus. 8°. (Industrial chemistry, edited by Samuel Rideal.)

PND (118)

A comprehensive outline of the occurrence and uses of these substances and a satisfactory account of lime, cement, and mortar, with more detailed consideration of the ceramic industries, glass, and enamels. Bibliographies at the section endings. Although scarcely complete enough for the technician, there is much to interest the general reader and the beginner.

Contains numerous references to patents.

A timely book that "should be heartily welcomed by all those research chemists [dye chemists] and students specializing in or wishing to acquire an intimate knowledge of the important but complex chemistry of anthracene derivatives."—Chemical trade journal and chemical engineer, March 12, 1921.

Campbell, Norman Robert. Physics. The elements. Cambridge [Eng.]: University Press, 1920. vii, 565 p. 4°. PAE (117)

A confessedly incomplete coordination of a series of essays begun in 1904. A critical analysis of the subject matter of science; the nature of laws; discovery, proof and explanation of laws; theories; chance and probability; the meaning of science; science and philosophy; and measurement. Author is a member of the staff of the research laboratories of the General Electric Company, Ltd., London.

"The book [of which this is the introductory volume] aspires to be a treatise on physics, complete within its limits, written by a serious student of the science for other serious students. It is not in any sense a popular work addressed to those whose chief intellectual interests lie elsewhere; it assumes throughout entire familiarity with all the facts and theories of physics, ancient and modern."—Introduction.

Chalmers, T. W. The gyroscopic compass, a non-mathematical treatment. London: Constable & Company, Ltd., 1920. x, 167 p. illus. 8°. VXFD (Stack 3)

To explain the mode of action of this efficient instrument the author aims to employ the most familiar physical principles and conceptions. Discusses elementary gyroscopic phenomena, the gyroscope and the rotation of the earth, the various systems of damping, latitude and steaming errors, ballistic deflection, quadrantal errors, centrifugal forces, and descriptions of the Sperry, Anschütz and Brown types. The seventeen chapters appeared originally as a series of articles in The Engineer, London. Fifty-one illustrations.

"The author is to be congratulated on having produced a book which will appeal to all who are interested in gyroscopic action. Moreover, it will be of use to engineers and navigating officers who are responsible for the care of working instruments... The explanations of the fundamental dynamics are clear and sound... We have no hesitation in recommending this book."—Nature, May 12, 1921.

"There are many people who have to determine hydrogen ion concentrations for one reason or another, and it means a great saving to them if they can find all the details of such determinations brought together in one book... Cunningham, E. Relativity, the electron theory and gravitation. New York: Longmans, Green and Co., 1921. vii, 148 p. 2. ed. 8°. (Monographs on physics.) PAT (117)

First edition (1915) had the title: Relativity and the electron theory. The work is now doubled in size and covers a much wider scope in its attempt to generalize the theory of Einstein in such a way that the electron finds its natural place in the grand scheme of things.

"The book in appearance is very mathematical, although the use of formulae has been restricted as much as possible, but it also contains much interesting and readable text as well, and has been well printed and prepared."—Wireless world, June 11, 1921.

Einstein, Albert. Relativity: the special and general theory, translated by Robert W. Lawson. New York: Henry Holt and Company, 1920. xiii, 168 p., 1 port. 8°.

PAT (115)

"The present book is intended, as far as possible, to give an exact insight into the theory of relativity to those readers who, from a general scientific and philosophical point of view, are interested in the theory, but who are not conversant with the mathematical apparatus of theoretical physics. The text is divided into three parts which deal respectively with the special theory of relativity, with the general theory of relativity, and with considerations of the universe as a whole... Since the original text came from the pen of the highest authority on the subject and since the translation has been done in a very faithful and conscientious manner, the present volume can be highly recommended to all who are interested in the epoch-making discoveries of A. Einstein."—American journal of science, December, 1920.

Ltd., 1921. ix, 146 p. illus. 12°. (Pitman's common commodities and industries.) VMKC (121)

Traces history and development and discusses at length: treatment of skins, dyeing and dressing of leather and processes of glove manufacture. Has excellent chapters on making fabric gloves, marketing and distributing the products, organization of British glove trade. The appendix contains a glossary of terms.

"A most useful addition to the leather man's scanty library, as we believe it is the first British attempt to give, in a cheap and convenient form, any available data relating to the glove industry. It is especially apropos at the present time, when there is more than a possibility of Germany again entering the field, and this useful volume should be in the hands of leather dressers, skin merchants, and others who desire to post themselves quickly on glove trade matters." — The Leather world, March 31, 1921.

Faber, Oscar. Reinforced concrete design. Vol. II. Practice. New York: Longmans, Green & Co., 1920. xi, 246 p. diags. 8°. VEOM (121)

Part 1 deals with the determination of bending moments in beams for various arrangements of span and conditions of loading, using the "slope" formula. Part 2 explains column moments. Part 3 treats of the properties of standard columns and beams, live load allowance for rolling goods, and of the author's researches on shear resistance, with an appendix covering regulations of the London County Council. Well diagrammed.

"The book is one which every reinforced concrete engineer should study; it gives designers access to tables which save much time in calculations and which must have involved the author many hours of laborious work." — Concrete and constructional engineering, Jan., 1921.

*Falk, K. George. The chemistry of enzyme actions. New York: The Chemical Catalogue Company, Inc., 1921. 136 p. 8°. (American Chemical Society. Monograph series.) PPH (118)

In a movement to free Anglo-Saxon chemistry from the influence of German chemical literature, the Inter-Allied Conference of Pure and Applied Chemistry, in July, 1919, arranged with the American Chemical Society to publish a series of monographs on various subjects. The present volume is the first. Author is a member of the Harriman Research Laboratory, New York City.

"Dr. Falk's own work on enzyme action is well known and guarantees his competence to inaugurate the series. Broadly speaking, enzymes may be considered from three somewhat different points of view — chemical, biological or mathematical, using this term to connote, in the author's words, 'the better understanding of the fundamental chemical relations underlying an exact knowledge of chemical reactions'; it is mainly on these lines that the review is compiled. Accordingly, the first part of the book deals with the more recent theories of chemical structure, the velocities of chemical reactions and their general theory, before specific reference is made to certain reactions catalysed by enzymes. Sections on the physical and chemical properties of enzymes lead up to a discussion of the chemical nature of certain enzymes and the mechanism of their action. A final section is devoted to their uses and applications. The whole work forms a somewhat abstruse review of present-day physico-chemical theories and will repay the closest study by those interested." — Journal of the Society of Chemical Industry, Feb. 28, 1921.

*Gardner, Henry A. Papers on paint and varnish and the materials used in their manufacture. Washington: [Author,] 1920. 501 p. illus. 8°. VOP (118)

Brings up to date the series of technical papers which the author prepared as circulars of the Educational Bureau of the Paint and Varnish Manufacturers Association of the United States. Includes researches on the properties of several oils, fume control, tests of various coatings, waterproof glazes, illumination from paint, spreading rates, rare elements as pigments, quick-drying lacquer coatings, paint and varnish in the Great War, standard specifications of the War Department, and other special subjects of interest.

A dictionary of rocks and associated terms. When possible the originator and date of the word are given, followed by a brief characterization, name of locality, and bibliographical reference. It is stated that the only other independent work of the kind is that of Loewinson-Lessing, Paris, 1901. Appendix contains French and German terms, Greek and Latin prefixes, and classification tables.

"Gives evidence of a great amount of careful work and investigation of the complicated and scattered literature on the subject." — Geological magazine, Sept., 1920.

Jenkins, J. T. Textbook of oceanography. London: Constable & Co., Ltd., 1921. x, 206 p. illus. 8°. PSR (115)

Sufficiently untechnical to be of interest to the general reader. Deals with extent of the ocean, its depth, deposits, fauna, temperature, properties, icebergs, atmospheric gases and salinity, with extensive chapters on waves, tides and ocean currents. Conversion tables and a brief bibliography are appended.

Leggett, Bernard. Wireless telegraphy, with special reference to the quenched-spark system. London: Chapman & Hall, 1921. xv, 485 p. illus. 8°. TTF (121)

Author, an Englishman, suggests that national prejudice accounts for British lack of enthusiasm for the quenched-spark system now in extensive use in the United States, Australia, Japan, China, and Germany. He further states that no book in English has dealt adequately with the subject and that "much, including very many illustrations, has never been published in any country." The present work traces the history of wireless, but omits the names of Pupin and Heavyside. There are chapters on intensification, wireless on ships, land stations, military and aeronautical wireless, continuous wave systems, maintenance, and the propagation of electromagnetic waves. Free of bothersome mathematics and appears to be practicable. Two hundred and thirty illustrations. Reference lists at chapter endings.

"The object and the mechanism of the quenched-spark have been many times described, though the various applications are more fully explained here." — Engineering, May 6, 1921.

"A short outline of experimental work and general principles of ammonia synthesis by a chemist who has conducted a vast amount of research on the subject. Dr. Maxted is well equipped with detailed knowledge of the work and results obtained by his foreign contemporaries, and dismisses them, if briefly, in quite an informative and interesting way. The book will be well received by people directly interested in the subject, as well as by students." — Chemical trade journal, March 12, 1921.

"As a college text for students just being introduced to structural engineering this book will probably serve. It treats of all the materials and constructions that possibly could be classed under the head of masonry and discusses them in a quite correct manner. It is not, however, specially valuable beyond the class room, because, after the fashion of all books on masonry, it groups together a great number of things which have no particular relation to one another and has therefore to treat each one, on account of the lack of space, in a manner much less complete than the particular subject is treated in books devoted especially to it."—Engineering news-record, April 21, 1921.

"New and enlarged edition of an important work.
 Text slight, not wholly unsuggestive, but disappointing... It is the prints of these houses, planned and constructed by the town carpenter, that make Mr.
 Robinson's book valuable. These are humble houses of fine quality. They more nearly touch bottom than do many of our Georgian and classic mansions which consciously copy English forms and so lead us away from what is best in American building." — Evening Post, New York.

A HISTORY OF

BY HARRY MILLER LYDENBERG

CHAPTER XIX

*The Central Building, 1897-1911

The strategic advantages of the corner of Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street for any great public institution were obvious, and as the growth of the city foreshadowed the removal of the Croton distributing reservoir (into which water had first been let on July 4, 1842) many eyes were turned towards the corner, and many suggestions were offered for its use.

The reservoir stood on what had originally been a part of the common lands of the City granted by the Crown to the corporation under the Dongan charter of 1686. "It had been held by the Courts that the State had no power to dispose of this land, and it was also the law that the Corporation of the City, without legislative authority, was unable to act in the matter; so that it became necessary first to procure an enabling act of the Legislature, and then to persuade the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City that it would be for the benefit of all the people to remove the old Croton reservoir and devote the ground upon which it stood to a reservoir of learning and art." †

* In this chapter the chief authority, aside from the sources referred to in the footnotes, and a personal acquaintance with the work throughout its progress, has been a manuscript diary of Mr. P. B. Polhemus, superintendent for the architects from July 2, 1900, to February 15, 1906, thereafter continued by Mr. Franklin J. Ward, who was in charge of the drawings for the architects from 1899 to the end. These notes are now filed in the Library with the plans and photographs representing the work in its various stages.

The removal of the reservoir had been suggested as far back as the early eighties, and John Bigelow had spoken of it as a home for the Tilden Library as early as 1892.* When it was seriously proposed early in 1893 to replace the City Hall by a larger building the Tilden Trustees wrote to the Mayor on January 23, suggesting that the reservoir be razed, and the City Hall be moved to the reservoir site to serve as a home for the Tilden Library.

Better counsels prevailed, so far as the City Hall was concerned, but the Legislature did grant the Department of Public Parks permission to contract with the Tilden Trust for the use and occupation of any building that might thereafter be erected upon the reservoir site for use as a free library and reading room.† This provision was amended (Laws of 1896, Chapter 714) by the substitution therefor of a substantially identical provision known as Section 623 of the Greater New York Charter (Laws of 1897, Chapter 378, as amended Laws of 1901, Chapter 466).

In the address presented to Mayor Strong on March 25, 1896, the Trustees of The New York Public Library urged the reservoir site as ideal for their new building. This action followed the recommendation of the committee on site submitted February 5, 1896 (supra, p. 126-128). The wisdom of the suggestion appealed to many, though it was by no means received without opposition. When the matter came before the Board of Aldermen and Common Council the New York Board of Fire Underwriters filed with the Committee on County Affairs a vigorous Memorandum of 50 printed pages in opposition, basing its attitude largely on the ground that the reservoir was a very important and necessary part of the system of fire protection and water distribution.

The Aldermen on December 22, 1896, adopted a resolution providing that the land occupied by the reservoir was to constitute a public park, with a proviso that the reservoir was not to be removed until the new water mains had been laid and made ready for use as far south as Thirty-eighth Street.

The next step came on February 11, 1897, when the Board of Estimate and Apportionment authorized removal of the reservoir subject to the same proviso.

This was followed by the passage of an Act by the State Legislature ‡ providing for the construction of a public library in Bryant Park to be occupied by The New York Public Library, the act being passed on May 19, 1897. It authorized the Department of Public Parks "to remove the reservoir, now occupying a portion of such Bryant park, and to erect, construct, maintain, equip and furnish in said Bryant park, or in or upon any portion thereof, a suitable and appropriate fire-proof building, in accordance with plans to be made and prepared by the trustees of the New York public library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden foundations, and to be approved by the board of estimate and apportionment in the city of New York; such building to be used and occupied as a public library and reading room by the said the New York public library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden foundations, a consolidated corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state of New York, and for the purpose of carrying out the objects and purposes of said corporation, in accordance with the agreement of consolidation whereby said corporations [sic] was constituted, and the several acts incorporating the trustees of the Astor library, the trustees of the Lenox library and the Tilden trust."

This act is the basis for the erection and occupation of the Central Building. It ordered the Department of Parks to prepare and submit to the Board of Estimate forms of contracts, specifications and bonds for the faithful performance of the work and furnishing of materials, to be approved by the Corporation Counsel. The Board of Estimate was authorized to accept "such bid or bids, proposal or proposals, the acceptance of which will, in their judgment, best secure the efficient performance of the work" — not necessarily the lowest.

The Board of Estimate was authorized to contract with The New York Public Library for the use of this building "for the purpose of maintaining therein a public library and reading-room and carrying on the objects and purpose of the said corporation." The contract was to provide for use and occupation of the building by the Library so long as it maintained therein a public library and reading room and used the building for its proper purpose. It was further to provide for the establishment and maintenance of a free circulating library to "be open for the use of the public during the day time on Sunday and during the evening of each other day of the week for such term as may be prescribed by the proper authorities in control of said library when the same is opened, the hour for the closing of said branch of the library on each evening to be not earlier than ten o'clock."

The act of 1897 authorized the Board of Estimate to provide for erection of the building by selling corporate stock for an amount not to exceed $2,500,000. This limit was removed by the amendment of 1900, the total amount being left to the discretion of the Board of Estimate.

As soon as it was evident that the act would become a law the Executive Committee of the Library Trustees began to consider the question of plans, which under the law they were to submit to the Board of Estimate through the Department of Parks. At their meeting on April 9, 1897, they "Resolved, That a Report be presented to the Board of Trustees at its next meeting explaining the situation and recommending the adoption of a resolution referring the matter to a Committee, and authorizing the employment of one or more experts to assist such a committee in preparing a general scheme in regard to the requirements of the proposed building; and also recommending the adoption of a Resolution requesting all members of the Board to submit on or before May 1, 1897, their suggestions as to the character and plans of such a building."

The Trustees on April 14, requested the Executive Committee "to report at the next regular meeting of the Board as to the general characteristics of the proposed new library building, and as to the best method to be pursued in order to obtain satisfactory plans." The Committee held a special meeting on April 16 at which Dr. Billings read a memorandum, prepared by him, giving the probable cost of the building, and a detailed statement of the number and size of rooms, etc. The committee authorized the Director to confer with Col. Bernard R. Green, the constructor of the Congressional Library in Washington, and William R. Ware, Professor of Architecture at Columbia, and to secure their services for the Committee.

The "Memorandum" of Dr. Billings indicated a ground area of about 450 feet by 450 feet, a building of about 4,500,000 cubic feet. For removal of reservoir, furniture, architects' fees, heating, ventilating, and electrical apparatus, book stacks and shelving about $800,000 would be needed, leaving $1,700,000 for the building, or about 40 cents per cubic foot. "What is wanted is a building which shall provide in the best possible manner for the convenience and comfort of the public and of those engaged in administration, and which shall be economical as to the cost of administration. There should be no waste spaces to be heated and kept clean. All rooms used by the public or by clerks should have as much daylight as possible. The windows should reach nearly to the ceilings and be obstructed by framework as little as possible." There should be a single public entrance; the lending department, children's room and periodical rooms on the first floor, administrative offices on the south side and with the Director's offices between them and the public. The book delivery counter for the reference department should be near the centre of the main reading rooms. The ceilings of the reading rooms should be kept as low as is consistent with pleasing proportions. A dome over the reading room was undesirable, as was also a circular reading room, because of waste of space and difficulty in economical heating. The building should be heated by steam applied in part through hot water and at least 2,000 cubic feet of fresh air per person per hour for all occupied rooms should be warmed and properly distributed. The building was to be fire-proof and capable of extension to a capacity of 4,000,000 volumes. Brick and terra cotta with steel and plate glass were preferred as materials to granite or marble.

On April 30 the Committee held a second special meeting at which were present Dr. Billings, Professor Ware, and Col. Green. All agreed that a competition offered the best means of selection of the architect and Professor Ware submitted a draft of conditions proposed for the competition, which were discussed in detail and referred back to Dr. Billings and Professor Ware. At the regular meeting on May 7, Professor Ware read a revised statement of terms and submitted "floor plans drawn in accordance with Dr. Billings' suggestions, and a revised statement by Dr. Billings of the requirements of the proposed building, which were to be appended to the terms of competition." With a few slight changes the statement was approved and ordered submitted to the Trustees as the report of the Committee.*

Professor Ware preserved the original pencil sketch made at their first conference by Dr. Billings explanatory of his ideas about the building. In 1909 he gave it to Mr. Edwin H. Anderson, then Assistant Director of the Library, together with other sketches of the developments of the plan, all of which are now carefully preserved by the Library. This first sketch shows a building 350 feet long by 225 feet deep, very much the same in plan as the building stands to-day, with book stacks in the rear, 250 feet long and 100 feet deep, two interior courts about 100 by 75 feet in size, and reading rooms arranged around them. (A reproduction is given here.)

The terms of the preliminary competition as printed with date of May 21, 1897, announced John S. Kennedy, John Bigelow, John L. Cadwalader, S. V. R. Cruger, Lewis Cass Ledyard, Alexander Maitland, and George L. Rives as the Committee of the Trustees to which was delegated the securing of plans. Two competitions were called for, first an open competition in which sketches only would be required, followed by a restricted competition for which finished drawings would be made. The first was open to all architects having offices within the limits of Greater New York. Drawings for it must be submitted on or before July 15. From these drawings the judges, Professor Ware, Colonel Green, and Dr. Billings, would select the best twelve, and the authors of these would be paid $400 each. The Committee would then choose from these

* Mr. Hastings has the following comment to make on this scheme of competition: "Ever since the very beginnings of Architecture, competition among Architects as a method of obtaining the best design for an important building has probably always obtained, and there are indeed several most interesting stories told in connection with some of the most conspicuous examples in the history of art. There has always been, however, certain opposition to this method of selecting an architect, primarily because the method does not always obtain the best results. Certain architects who have a large amount of work to do and a reputation to maintain will not enter a competition open to all. On the other hand, the so-called closed competition by way of selecting a few men of wide reputation eliminates the consideration of the younger element, men not generally known, whose talent deserves consideration. With this in view a dual competition was decided upon by the Trustees of the Library; first, an open competition, six to be selected to compete with six others selected because of their reputation, and these twelve to constitute the men invited to enter the second competition, — not as in the case of the competition for the Cathedral of St. John The Divine, where all, several hundred, unpaid competed together with six paid competitors selected because of their reputation, all in an open competition. In this competition four from the large number of competitors were selected to enlarge upon their drawings, so constituting the second competition. None of the distinguished men invited and paid for their services, were included in these four. A very important consideration on the part of the Trustees of the Public Library and one which, alas, is not usually considered by those conducting competition, was the very important question of some consideration being given to the past record and executed work of the Architects, which, they felt, should count for something in the decision of the Jury. With this in view a very unusual and equally wise step was taken. In the open competition they gave 12 prizes, reserving the right to open the envelopes to obtain the names of the authors and then make their selection, eliminating six, retaining six on consideration of their competition plans together with their records, or experience. Furthermore, this same consideration entered into the second competition when these six combined with the six specially invited. The right then again was reserved to open the envelopes of the three chosen as best by the Jury before making their final choice, with this object again in view to combine the merits of their designs with the past record of their authors."

twelve competitors not more than six, who with six other architects were to be invited to take part in a second competition. To those then submitting plans would be paid $800 each, and from the plans the jury of selection was to choose not more than three to be submitted to the Trustees. From these three the Trustees were to send one to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for its approval.

The general statement of requirements followed in the main Dr. Billings' memorandum of April. To make certain that the requirements were consistent and reasonable, a sketch plan was included, giving the dimensions of the plot and indicating for each floor in diagrammatic form a suggested arrangement of rooms. The Committee was careful to say they had no prejudice in favor of these particular plans and that competitors were requested to make such alterations and changes as they chose.

The plans called for a building about 225 feet by 350, set back 75 feet from the Avenue and 50 feet from 40th and 42nd Streets. Book stacks were at the back, reading rooms on top. "This arrangement is suggested so as to give the Reading Rooms the maximum amount of light, to bring the stacks into easy and direct communication with them, and-to allow of the extension of the building towards the west at some future day by enlarging both the stacks and the Reading Rooms simultaneously and proportionately, with a comparatively small enlargement of the portions of the building devoted to administrative and other uses."

Public toilet and coat rooms were placed at the public entrances on 42nd Street and on Fifth Avenue, the visitors' room and toilet and coat rooms for the staff near the 40th Street entrance. In the basement, near the 40th Street entrance, were placed the boiler rooms, engine room, store room, bindery, shipping room. Above these rooms and connected by an elevator was the receiving room on the first floor, with the cataloguing and accessions rooms above on the second floor. The order room, director's office, and trustees' room came near the cataloguing room and the other administrative offices were near them on the floor below.

Opposite the main entrance on the first floor was shown the delivery room for the circulation department, running through two stories and next to the book stacks. Near the 42nd Street entrance on the first floor was a public lecture room, which ran down into the basement.

A limited amount of elevator service was provided near the 42nd Street end, but in the main it was expected that the public would be required to use the stairs which were easily accessible from each entrance.

In particular it was suggested that even if the competitors should judge it best to adhere substantially to the arrangement shown in the diagrams, they should present also an alternative scheme, showing the public reading rooms on the first floor instead of on the third, and giving the building perhaps greater extension on the ground and fewer stories in height. This was very characteristic of Dr. Billings' openmindedness. Putting the reading room on top of the stacks at the rear was his idea, and he believed this the best arrangement; he was anxious, however, that fullest opportunity for demonstration of their position should be given to those who believed differently.

Competitors were to submit floor plans for each floor on the scale of 50 feet to 1 inch, an elevation of the 5th Avenue, 42nd Street, and Bryant Park fronts, two sections showing the principal rooms and the staircases. The elevations and sections were to be on a scale of 25 feet to 1 inch. All drawings were to be of uniform size, 14 inches by 21, with a single line for a border.

Drawings for the preliminary competition were to be sent to the Secretary on or before July 15, 1897. The Committee would announce their choice, name the other competitors, and issue final instructions for the second competition early in August, and designs for the second competition must be submitted on or before November 1.*

The Committee gave the terms of the competition to the newspapers which eagerly commented on them as news and also carried paid advertisements inviting architects to enter the contest. Two editions of the printed terms were exhausted, each of 250 copies.

The Director called a meeting of the Staff, on Monday, May 24, explained the tentative plans, and asked for a submission of views at a meeting two weeks later. Three papers were read at this second meeting and a general discussion gave opportunity for expression of opinion by the others.

Dr. Billings sent the terms of competition to the principal librarians of the country and asked their opinion on the following points:

1. Is it well to place the large public reading room or reading rooms on the upper floor (as shown in the diagrams), with access by elevators, or is it better to put these rooms on a lower floor?
2. Is the space allowed in the diagrams for administrative purposes excessive or sufficient?
3. Are the sizes of the several rooms as given in the schedule sufficient?
4. What material should be used in the exterior of the building, brick and terra cotta, limestone, granite or marble?

To these queries replies were received from Dr. Bowditch and Mr. Whit-

* Mr. Hastings adds the following comment on the plans furnished the competitors: "These plans were merely diagrammatic to show the juxtaposition of the different departments of the Library, a simple single line marking the divisions, the halls in the four floors nowhere coming over each other, — in fact no walls coming over each other. It was no more than a verbal description made clear diagrammatically. The two courts, however, were determined upon and the location of the main reading room over the stacks. In a building of this monumental character, the plan is of the most vital importance from the artistic point of view. In the six months allotted to compete, the architects spent more than four of these months in the study of the plan without much consideration of the elevations. They believed that it was important to use steel as a material only as a substitute for wood and in such cases where the ancients would have used wood. This new material, in their judgment, being theoretically only an improved wood subject to the same limitations and not to be used anywhere to support masonry walls. This diagrammatic plan as given, while it helped solve the problem from a utilitarian point of view, made the artistic problem of plan only more difficult."

ney of the Boston Public Library (Mr. Putnam being absent in Europe), Mr. Lane of the Boston Athenæum, Dr. Justin Winsor of the Harvard College Library, Mr. Dewey of the New York State Library, Mr. Cheney of the Newberry Library, Dr. Gilman of Johns Hopkins University, Mr. Foster of the Providence Public Library, Mr. Andrews of the John Crerar Library, Mr. Larned of the Buffalo Public Library, and Mr. Willcox of the Public Library of Peoria, Illinois.

The American Library Association met in Philadelphia this year and at the sixth general session on June 24, Dr. Billings displayed the plans, explained the objects sought, and asked for comments. In the discussion that followed John Edmands, J. N. Larned, Ernest C. Richardson, Melvil Dewey, Bernard C. Steiner, James K. Hosmer, Charles E. Soule, Samuel S. Green, W. F. Stevens, and H. L. Elmen-dorf spoke in favor of the plans, and, on motion of Mr. Elmen-dorf, the chair appointed a committee of three to report "a suitable resolution of approval of the general plans of the New York Public Library as explained by Dr. Billings."

On the following morning the committee — consisting of Messrs. Elmen-dorf, Soule, and Larned — submitted the following resolution which was adopted by a rising vote:

Resolved, That the American Library Association expresses its hearty approval of the methods adopted by those in charge of the selection of plans for the New York Public Library building, both as to the general requirements submitted and the manner of competition.

We rejoice that the needs of the library for administration and public service are to be considered before questions of architectural style and ornament.

We find in the arrangement of a central stack with reading room above, an excellent provision for ample light, freedom from noise, ready and quick delivery of books, and opportunity for expansion as the growth of the library may require.*

Drawings were received on July 15 and for the week after that date Dr. Billings, Colonel Green, and Professor Ware worked diligently. They were able to make their award on July 22. Their report dated July 26 was submitted to the executive committee on the 27th and stated that 88 designs had been submitted, of which 29 followed substantially the scheme proposed in the tentative sketch (3 presenting a similar scheme and offering also alternatives); 20 put the main reading rooms on the first floor, 20 on the second floor, and 19 placed the reading rooms on the third floor, but made arrangements in other respects radically at variance with those suggested.

"The variety of the alternatives thus presented," the Committee went on to say, "their intrinsic excellence, and the unmistakable skill with which they had been prepared seem to warrant the opinion that they fairly represent the possibilities of the case, and that they furnish sufficient data upon which to judge whether it is really best to have the book-stacks on the west side, with the reading rooms in the third story, as proposed in the programme, or whether it is not equally feasible to have them in the second or first.

“The result seems to show conclusively that the requirements both of public use and convenience and of economical administration can be better met by the arrangements suggested in the tentative plan than any other. By concentrating the book stacks in a rectangular block on the west side, and setting the public reading rooms above them on the third story, with access to the stacks on each floor at the north and south ends and in the middle of the east side, the central supervision of the reading rooms and the central delivery of books can be secured with very simple mechanism, free and direct communication between the administrative department and the book stacks can be maintained, and opportunity for easily extending both the book stacks and the reading rooms towards the west can be provided for, whenever this may be desirable. Moreover, reading rooms placed at the top of the house are not only quieter, better lighted and more easily ventilated than can be the case with rooms of equal size in the first or second story, but they can be constructed without encumbering the floor with columns.”

The best twelve designs were those submitted by the following:

J. H. Freedlander
Haydel & Shepard
H. Hornbostel, G. E. Wood, and G. C. Palmer
Howard & Cauldwell
Lord, Hewlett & Hull
Clarence S. Luce
Parish & Schroeder
Roos & Weber
W. Wheeler Smith, associated with Walker & Morris
C. W. & A. A. Stoughton
James E. Ware & Son
Whitney Warren

The Executive Committee next took up the question of the terms for the second competition, which were discussed and adopted at its meeting on July 27. It was decided to invite the following architects to enter the second competition:

McKim, Mead & White
George B. Post
Cyrus L. W. Eidlitz
Carrère & Hastings
Peabody & Stearns
Charles C. Haight

On the 28th the following were selected from the first twelve in the preliminary competition:

J. H. Freedlander
Haydel & Shepard
H. Hornbostel, G. E. Wood, and G. C. Palmer
Howard & Cauldwell
W. Wheeler Smith, associated with Walker & Morris
Whitney Warren

The Committee then sent to the twelve architects thus chosen the terms for the second competition dated August 2, calling for delivery of plans on or before November 1. In general these terms followed those of the first competition although the size and arrangement of the rooms, and other details, were changed. The predominant feature of the main reading room over the book stacks at the west end of the building was adhered to. A large public entrance on 42nd Street was added and the central circulation room placed in the north court directly opposite this entrance.

As printed the programme required the competitors to submit plans in substantial accord with the diagrams prepared by the Committee, although they were at liberty to submit alternatives. The Committee reconsidered this, and by a circular dated August 19, notified all competitors that any plan submitted in conformity to the general requirements would receive consideration.

The competitors were themselves to choose three practicing architects, who with three members of the Board of Trustees and the Director were to constitute the jury of award. This jury was to submit to the Trustees the three designs they deemed best, from which one was to be selected by the Trustees for recommendation to the Board of Estimate.

Floor plans for each floor were to be submitted on a scale of thirty-two feet to the inch; also an elevation of each of the four fronts, and two sections, all to the scale of sixteen feet to the inch, and a perspective showing the north and east fronts from a point near the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street. All drawings were to be on sheets 30 inches by 20 (afterwards made 33 by 20). Indiana limestone was mentioned as material for the exterior, but the trustees were not committed to it, most librarians regarding brick as best from a practical point of view.

The designs were to have no device or motto, but were to be accompanied by a sealed letter containing the name and address of the architect submitting it, and to be addressed in typewriting to the Secretary. Drawings and envelopes were to be numbered as received and were to be referred to by number. The envelopes were not to be opened until the jury had made its award.

The three architects chosen for the jury were Walter Cook, Cass Gilbert, Edgar V. Seeler. The trustees were John L. Cadwalader, Alexander Maitland, George L. Rives. These with Dr. Billings constituted the jury of award.

The jury met at the Astor Library on November 2, 1897. Their report dated November 8 selected design number 11 (Carrère & Hastings) as fulfilling in a high degree all the requirements of the competition and being decidedly superior to the others. No. 5 (Howard & Cauldwell) was placed second, and no. 8 (McKim, Mead & White) third.

The Board of Trustees met on November 10 and selected the design of Carrère & Hastings as that to be submitted to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, the architects being formally notified by letter on the 11th following.

The plans thus selected, with slight changes, were duly submitted to the Board of Estimate, which formally approved them on December 1, 1897, authorized the Department of Public Parks to remove the reservoir and "to erect, construct, maintain, equip and furnish" a suitable and fireproof building to be occupied by the Library; employment of Carrère & Hastings as architects was authorized and a contract between the City and the Library to this effect was approved.

On December 8 a lease and agreement for the use and occupation of the library building was executed between the City and the Library. This granted to the Library the building to be erected on the reservoir site as long as the corporation maintained a public library and reading room therein. The City was to maintain the building and keep it in repair. The Library was to occupy it as soon as possible after completion and was to keep it accessible at all reasonable hours for general use, free of charge to the public; one or more reading rooms were to be open on week days, holidays included, from 9.00 a. m. to 9.00 p. m., and on Sundays from 1.00 to 9.00 p. m.; a circulation branch was to be maintained therein by the Trustees to be opened for the public during the day time on Sunday and during the evening of other days for such time as may be prescribed by the Trustees, the branch to be closed at night not earlier than 10 o'clock.

The Library retained title to and control of its collections in the building. It agreed to submit to the Mayor a detailed printed report of its operations and transactions and of its receipts and expenditures. The City was to have access to the building, but the Library was to appoint, direct, control and remove all persons employed in the building. The City was to provide funds for maintenance and repair of the building, to furnish a supply of water and adequate police patrol and protection. The Department of Parks was to care for the approaches.

The Department of Public Parks on December 6, adopted resolutions providing for the removal of the reservoir, the erection of a building, and the retention of Carrère & Hastings as architects. They were directed to proceed forthwith to prepare drawings, forms of contract, and specifications.

The contract between the City and the architects on December 9, 1897, granted Carrère & Hastings as fees, five per cent upon the total cost of the building, including all fixtures necessary to render the building fit for occupation, but excluding furniture not designed by the architects; the fees of consulting engineers were to be paid by the City, one for heating and ventilating, one for electrical lighting and machinery, one for structural work and foundations, these engineers to be suggested by the architects, approved by the Library, and appointed by the City.

The Park Department on December 13 appointed Theodore Cooper consulting engineer for construction work and foundations, Alfred R. Wolff* for heating and ventilating, Pattison Brothers for mechanical and electrical installation. Subsequently, on February 20, 1900, the compensation of these engineers was fixed by the Park Board at $3,000 per annum for Mr. Cooper, and at five per cent on the cost of the work for the other two. Carrère & Hastings engaged, at their own expense, on April 26, 1899, Albert L. Webster as consulting engineer for the plumbing, paying him at the rate of four per cent on his part of the work. The consulting engineers held as high professional rank as the architects.

Preparation of drawings and specifications for the removal of the reservoir and laying the foundations of the new building was begun at once, but it was more than a year before action could be secured by the City. The contracts above mentioned were executed in the last days of Mayor Strong's administration. The jury of award on the second competition had first met on that rainy day when the contest for the first mayor of the greater City was settled in favor of Judge Van Wyck as against General Tracy, the Republican candidate, and Seth Low, candidate of the Citizens' Union.

The outlook did not seem promising when the new mayor at one of the first meetings of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, January 13, 1898, took occasion to express in unmistakable terms his disapproval of the leasing of the reservoir site for library purposes. When a committee of the trustees appeared before him on March 23 to urge favorable action on the recommendation of the Park Department for an issue of bonds for $150,000 for removal of the reservoir he expressed in equally unmistakable terms his opposition to bonds for any purpose until the Comptroller had learned more exactly just what was the city debt limit.

Bridges were of greater public need than libraries, and until money was available for such purposes it would be useless to spend it for libraries. The mayor repeated his opposition to the grant of the site by the former administration, though that was, he admitted, a closed incident.

A few months later, on July 11, 1898, when the question of an appropriation of $100,000 for the zoological garden was before the Board of Estimate, the Mayor again set forth his views, saying, as the newspapers reported, "I would be willing to vote $15,000,000 for a public library that the city would own, but instead we are compelled to give land and $6,000,000 for a public library that private individuals will control. The city, however, must pay all the employees and pay the expense. No public lands would be given over to private control if I had my say." As a matter of fact the City was not "compelled to give land" to private control, nor was it to "pay all the employees and pay the expense." It was useless, however, to argue with the Mayor, and the Library was forced to wait for time to mollify him.

The Corporation Counsel rendered an opinion on May 13, 1898, that the debt limit had not been exceeded, but it was not until March 17, 1899, that the attitude of the Mayor permitted the Board of Estimate to authorize a bond issue of $500,000 for removal of the reservoir and laying the foundations of the new building, though the plans and specifications had been approved by the Park Department on March 3, 1898.

This action marked a long step forward, but the end was not yet attained. Other departments of the city government had to be heard from. When the question came before the Board of Aldermen on March 29, the Brooklyn aldermen opposed it, but on April 4 following, the measure passed the lower house. It then went to the Municipal Council, which at its meeting on April 11, referred it to its finance committee for investigation and report. The committee reported favorably on April 25, but the measure went over till the next meeting when it came up, but action was again deferred; it was finally passed on May 9. The Mayor approved the ordinance on May 10.

When the Board of Estimate on March 17 authorized the issue of $500,000 in bonds, it also approved the form of contract for the removal of the reservoir and laying the foundations of the new structure. As this contract was the first in a series of twelve required to complete the building, it may be well at this point to stop for a moment's digression and a survey of the progress of a proposed contract through the various city offices where consent and approval were necessary for valid action.

The process was in general as follows: After the architects had their drawings and the form of contract and the specifications ready they submitted the contract and specifications to the Department of Public Parks. When this department approved them they were sent to the printer. Proofs were sent to the Corporation Counsel who returned them with his approval or indicated the changes he felt advisable. The architects then sent the plans to the Park Department, whence they were forwarded, with the printed contract and the specifications, to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment with request for authorization of and appropriation for the work. This Board usually referred the matter to a sub-committee, frequently to the engineers in the Comptroller's office. Occasionally they would approve, frequently they would call for changes.

If changes were called for the steps were reversed, from the Board of Estimate through the Park Department to the architects and their engineers and the Library. Sometimes they acquiesced, sometimes they fought. In either case the progress, once a decision was reached, began over again, through the Park Department to the Board of Estimate.

When finally approved the Board made an appropriation, authorizing the sale of city bonds. Sometimes this furnished an occasion for delay, sometimes not. The Park Department then advertised for bids and fixed a day for their receipt. When opened by the Department the advice of the architects was usually asked as to the bidders, the law in this case allowing award to other than the lowest bidder if such a step was deemed wise.

The Park Department recommended one of the bidders to the Board of Estimate which usually awarded it on the basis of the Park Department's recommendation. Once awarded the contract was executed by the Park Department, the contractor, and his sureties. It was then sent to the Comptroller and was in force when he had certified that there were public funds available for its execution.

The process was not planned to emulate the circumlocution office, for every step was necessary for proper protection of the interests of all concerned; the effect, however, scarcely resulted in undue haste.

April and May, 1899, when the first contract was let, marked a period of four years since the birth of the new library, and almost eighteen months since the contracts between the city, the library, and the architects had been executed. There was little tangible to show as result. The delay, however, though discouraging, was not in reality as serious as it looked. The intervening time had been well spent by the architects in making preliminary studies. First of all it was necessary to learn how the reservoir was built. Photographs, measurements, studies of printed accounts of the original Croton system by Schramke, Jervis, and King, served as basis for drawings indicating the probable construction of the reservoir, the portions to be removed, the lines of excavation for the main building, etc.

The architects found their office at 44 Broadway too far away from the site of the new building, and they bought the residence at 28 East 41st Street, on the southwest corner of Madison Avenue, remodelled it for their purposes and moved their whole force into it, where their headquarters remained for some ten years.

When it came to writing the specifications for the removal of the reservoir and laying the foundations of the new building they decided that with plans still so undeveloped and with so much still to learn about the nature of the ground under the reservoir, it was impossible to give final design for the foundations. The specifications provided therefore that the material from the reservoir wall was to be used at a price per cubic foot, designing of the foundations to be done as the work progressed.

By March of 1899; as stated before, the specifications and form of contract were ready for submission to the Park Department. Here they were quickly approved and forwarded to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment on the 11th. On the 17th the Board of Estimate adopted resolutions approving the form of contract and authorizing the Comptroller to issue bonds up to the limit of $500,000 estimated as necessary by the Park Department and the architects. Notwithstanding the delay in approval of the bond issue by the Aldermen and Council the contract was advertised for bidders on April 8. Twenty-six bidders bought drawings at $1.00 a set, and 12 submitted bids on April 27.

The contract had been divided into four sections: 1, removing masonry and rubbish; 2, cleaning 18,000 yards of cut and face stone and stacking it on the site; 3, cleaning and delivering at the pier on Riker's Island for the use of the Department of Correction several thousand yards of other stone; 4, foundation work.

The bids were as follows:

	SECTION 1	SECTION 2	SECTION 3	SECTION 4
Isaac A. Hopper - - - - -	$235,250.00	$ 18,000.00	$ 7,500.00	$289,618.89

Sections 1, 2, and 3 were alternates, of which one was to be chosen and added to the fourth section. On the recommendation of the architects that the entire contract be let to one man, and on the basis of the aggregate of sections 2 and 4, as shown in the following table, the Board of Estimate gave the contract on May 17 to Eugene Lentilhon at his bid of $378,692.39.

Work began on June 6. The Commercial Advertiser of that date in describing the first steps of the attack on the old landmark said:

Workmen came with shovels, picks and crowbars to the Forty-second street gate early this morning, and for the first time in years the rusty gate in the ivy was unlocked and the iron-studded door opened. Inside the air was fully twenty degrees cooler than the 95 degrees odd on the street. There were three small connecting square chambers, forty feet high, the middle was separated from the two flanking it by high brick arches. The roofs of the two outer spaces were capped by high-arched domes, and there was a lower one for the centre space, resting upon the crowns of the two side arches. Green mold covered the straight and massive inner walls for half their height, and moisture trickled down here and there across them. There were festoons of white mildew clinging to the brick of the arches, and over the one separating the west chamber there was a jagged track in the masonry that ran from the upper left hand corner, and tapped the keystone of the arch.

The floor was a rough scaffolding of square beams, laid with spaces of several inches, and below there seemed to be the ruins of some excavation. Into each side chamber below this flooring two great pipes could be seen entering from the street, and in the centre of each room there rose through the flooring the long stems of two enormous valves, capped by bevelled wheels and worked by a hand-gear beside them; from one of them a little rusty water was still oozing.

There is about 110,000 cubic yards of masonry in the reservoir. When the contractor gets well under way, which may not be for a month or so, he estimates that 1,000 cubic yards will be removed daily, with a force of 500 men on the site. The débris will be lifted into carts by derricks and taken to private dumps in the North River at the foot of Thirty-ninth and Fortieth Streets. It will there be loaded upon scows and towed far out to sea. The contract, as originally referred to the board of estimate and apportionment by the park board, consisted of twelve bids, some of which were alternates, and have been stricken out.* The plan of cleaning and delivering several thousand cubic yards of the coping at Riker's Island, to be unloaded and removed by the department of correction, has been abandoned, together with the suggestion that none of the stone be used for the library.

An account of the condition of the work some five months after its beginning is given in the Mail and Express for November 15, 1899, from which the following is quoted:

In order to obtain access to the interior of the reservoir, before any material could be removed, it was necessary to blast this passageway [from 42nd Street] through the immense triple walls and to tunnel through the great bank of clay on the inside. The outside wall, built on a batter and four feet thick at the base, is faced with great blocks of hewn granite and lined with massive rough building stone. Inside of this stands a row of transverse arches, whose piers are at right angles to the outer wall, occupying a space about fifteen feet in width. Next comes the inner or core wall, which is vertical, and again four feet thick. This is lined with puddler's clay from its top, forty-two feet from the floor, sloping to a point about 30 feet from the base of the core wall. On top of this again, battered to the slope, is an 18-inch facing or lining wall.

It took seven weeks to tunnel through this mass of stone for an entrance for trucks and carts. Once this was done a second problem had to be solved. Running north and south through the middle of the reservoir, invisible from the street, was another mighty rampart of stone and concrete, twenty feet wide and faced on either side with the same banks of clay and lining walls. . .

Viewing the reservoir from the top of the division wall, the outer masonry looks like the ramparts of some ruined city. The sloping banks of stone and clay have been entirely removed from the western half, leaving the exterior mason work exposed, with here and there a great breach penetrating nearly its whole thickness. The bottom has to be excavated in parts to a depth of fifteen feet below the floor. Here has arisen another and totally unexpected difficulty.

Crushed together by the weight of the millions of tons of water which it formerly had to bear, the earth beneath the two-foot layer of concrete with which the bottom is lined has assumed an adamant consistency. Pick and crowbar glided from it like rifle bullets from Krupp armor plate. Mr. Lentilhon found himself obliged to use dynamite to loosen the very soil he had contracted to excavate. After the charge has been exploded, it can be worked with pick and shovel. . .

Asked as to the immense quantity of material he is digging and blasting out, Mr. Lentilhon said: "Quite a little is reserved by the city. The contract requires me to store 20,000 cubic yards of building stone. You see that we have already stacked about 1,000 yards along the western wall. This is to be used in constructing the New York Library. My contract is by no means finished when I have torn down the reservoir. I am to receive for its removal $105,000. The remainder of the $373,000, which is the total amount of my bid will be for constructing the foundations of the new edifice.

"All the battered stone in the corners and entrances belongs to me. I have had my men split it up into paving blocks, and two streets in South Brooklyn have been paved with it. We have got out 100,000 paving blocks up to now, and they bring six cents apiece. The puddler's clay used for lining I have had to dispose of for filling."

The architects directed that the following kinds of stone were to be saved for use in the foundations and to be stacked at convenient points on the grounds: the flat granite copings, the rubble outside facings of the reservoir walls, the stone linings of the basins, the best and largest stones from the body of the walls. The battered face granite and coved cornice granite were, in the main, broken into paving blocks and used or sold by Mr. Lentilhon.

After the inner slopes of clay and stone were removed from the western section, the masonry walls on the north and south of this section were attacked, working eastward from Bryant Park; at the same time the bottom was stripped down to rock, the plan being to start the foundations on the west and carry them to the east. The rear wall was left standing until its stone could be used for the foundations. By early 1900 the inside of the reservoir was practically cleaned out.

On October 9, 1899, a sketch plan showing the foundations approximately as expected was sent to the contractor as a guide, and on November 17 a preliminary excavation plan was sent showing the limits within which the supposed rock was to be uncovered.

In January, 1900, the architects issued the drawings for the fence which the specifications stipulated was to encompass the entire site. They planned it as a distinct ornament, with a base and a cornice, and mistakenly overlooked its latent advertising possibilities. As erected it was plainer, patently designed for display. On April 6, 1900, Park Commissioner Clausen granted to the firm of McNamara & Hart the "personal privilege" of using the fence for billboard purposes in return for $1,000 a year. The newspapers estimated the privilege was worth ten times that sum and they protested at various times against the use of the fence for such a purpose.

When Mayor Van Wyck's administration was succeeded by that of Seth Low in 1902 William R. Willcox was appointed Commissioner of Parks for Manhattan. He soon began an action at law to oust the firm of McNamara & Hart from their use of the fence, and they in turn secured from a Supreme Court Justice an order restraining the Park Department from interfering with them. Commissioner Willcox carried the case to the Appellate Division which decided that the former Commissioner had no authority to grant the use of the fence for advertising.

Thereupon the advertisements were painted out and the fence remained an inconspicuous green with only a memory of its inscriptions recommending the use of various whiskies or corsets, or during the presidential election of 1900 urging the passerby to vote to "down the trusts" or otherwise save the country. This quiet lasted but a few short years, however, and when Mayor Low was succeeded by Mayor McClellan, Mr. Willcox was succeeded as Park Commissioner by John J. Pallas.

Mr. Pallas had as a private citizen been a walking delegate or business agent of the pattern makers' union. As an official charged with the care of the parks of Manhattan one of his first acts was in February, 1904, to renew to McNamara & Hart the permission to use the fence for advertising purposes, the revocation of which by Commissioner Willcox, had been supported by the courts.

Thereupon a wordy battle ensued, with the Commissioner on the defensive and the newspapers, the Municipal Art Society, and various citizens on the offensive. The Commissioner took the position that the City could not afford to overlook the revenue it received from the rental of the privilege — said to be $1,500 per annum, and that "the neighboring business men find the lighter color of the signs much less objectionable than the heavy dark green that they replaced." The struggle lasted some months, with much heat and feeling on the part of the citizen soldiers, but the advertisements remained for nearly a year.

On December 21, 1904, Calvin Tomkins, President of the Municipal Art Society, bringing an action in the Supreme Court as a tax-payer, secured from Justice Scott an injunction restraining Commissioner Pallas and the advertising firm of McNamara & Hart from using the fence for advertising purposes. The Court's order commanded removal of the signs within 30 days of the time of service. Commissioner Pallas received a copy of the order through the Corporation Counsel on January 5, 1905, and forthwith ordered the lessors to paint out the signs and restore the fence to its former condition. When they failed to heed the order he sent Park Department painters to do the work on January 10. After this second and final removal of the advertisements the fence kept its "heavy dark green" color to which Commissioner Pallas objected until the work on the approaches rendered a fence useless and it was taken down.

This little tempest has carried us far out of our course, however, and it will be well to return to a survey of the progress on reservoir removal.

Demolishment of the main reservoir walls was begun in February, 1900. The architects wished to have the north and south walls removed first, to clear the way for the Library, but had no little difficulty in securing compliance from the contractor.

During the summer of 1899 borings had been made at various parts of the ground as the work progressed, in general about 75 feet apart. Contrary to expectation the results indicated rock in general about ten feet below the proposed basement floor level. To avoid excessive rock excavation it was determined, after consultation with Mr. Wolff and Mr. Webster, to make the cellar the least possible height. In addition the grade of the basement floor was raised two feet; this had previously been put level with the 5th Avenue curb opposite the centre of 41st Street and fixed as datum level 100' 0". Foundation plans were begun on this basis, but before completion it was found, by digging test pits to bed rock that the results of the borings were false, the large boulders with which the plot was strewn having been taken for bed rock when the drills reached them.

The basement floor was thereupon put back to its previous level and the main cellar floor was put 13 feet below it, at level 87' 0".

The first working drawing was issued to the contractor on May 25, 1900, showing the walls of most of the stack room. Other plans followed at intervals of a week or so, the completed drawings being issued October 12.

No corner stone was found in the reservoir. Two large tablets, one of granite, the other of marble, were found and carefully boxed and stored in the yards of a marble worker. Later they were brought back to the site and the granite tablet originally set over the 5th Avenue doorway opposite 41st Street, was placed in the floor of the south court at the centre of its west side.

It reads as follows:

The marble tablet had been set in the 5th Avenue vestibule of the reservoir placed near the top so it could be read from the head of the stairs. It is now set in the south wall of the 40th Street corridor on the first floor of the Library building over the door to Room 101, and it reads as follows:

HISTORICAL AND DESCRIPTIVE ACCOUNT OF THE CROTON AQUEDUCT

The Law authorizing the construction of the work, passed May 2nd, 1834. STEPHEN ALLEN, WILLIAM W. FOX, SAUL ALLEY, CHARLES DUSENBERRY and BENJAMIN M. BROWN were appointed Commissioners.

During the year 1834, two surveys were made — one by DAVID B. DOUGLASS and the other by JOHN MARTINEAU.

In April, 1835, a majority of the Electors of the City voted in favour of constructing the Aqueduct.

On the 7th. May following the Common Council "instructed the Commissioners to proceed with the work."

DAVID B. DOUGLASS was employed as Chief Engineer until October, 1836; when he was succeeded by JOHN B. JERVIS.

In March, 1837, BENJAMIN M. BROWN resigned, and was succeeded by THOMAS T. WOODRUFF.

In March, 1840, the before mentioned Commissioners were succeeded by SAMUEL STEVENS, JOHN D. WARD, ZEBEDEE RING, BENJAMIN BIRDSALL and SAMUEL R. CHILDS.

The work was commenced in May, 1837. On the 22nd, June, 1842, the Aqueduct was so far completed that it received the Water from the Croton River Lake; on the 27th, the Water entered the Receiving Reservoir, and was admitted into this Reservoir on the succeeding 4th, of July.

The DAM at the Croton River is 40 feet high, and the overfall 251 feet in length.

The CROTON RIVER LAKE is five miles long, and covers an area of 400 acres.

The AQUEDUCT, from the DAM to this Reservoir, is 40½ miles long, and will deliver in twenty-four hours 60,000,000 imperial gallons.

The capacity of the Receiving Reservoir is 150,000,000 gallons, and of this Reservoir 20,000,000.

The cost, to and including this Reservoir, nearly $9,000,000.

By the spring of 1900 enough of the reservoir had been removed to allow laying of the foundations. Except at the south end, where the engine and boiler rooms and adjoining cellars go deeper than the general cellar, these rested everywhere on dirt, thoroughly compacted glacial drift. Three tons per square foot was fixed by Mr. Cooper as the bearing load. He furnished sections of the foundation of each wall, giving thickness and shape required by his calculations. These were then coordinated and worked into form by the architects, showing door openings, pipes, ducts, chases, worked out from the plans of the other engineers.

While the reservoir was being torn down, the 42nd Street car line was being changed to the underground trolley system, and this interfered much with cartage facilities to and from the reservoir. Added to this complication came a flood. On the morning of November 14, 1900, the 48-inch water main in 42nd Street burst and within a short time the site was flooded, through a brick outlet which formerly drained the reservoir. In two hours the water rose above street level, about 3 feet below the top of the foundations, and then ran down 42nd Street, shortly after which it was shut off. This immense body of water sweeping in at high speed served as a good test of the foundations and it was with no little relief that architects and contractors discovered after the flood had gone that no damage had been done to the walls except that part of the pointing mortar not yet hardened was washed out of some of the joints. Fortunately all the workmen, fully 150 in number, and the 35 horses working in the excavation at the time, escaped without injury and the only loss was that of probably $200 worth of cement and other material impossible to remove.

After the inflow of water had been stopped the old drain functioned properly and carried the water from the excavation into the street sewer, leaving things in a very muddy condition for a few days and several large eels by way of recompense.

By August, 1900, the second contract was ready for bids. This contract included various kinds of work, such as steel setting, waterproofing, carpenter work, not called for in the first contract. The first had included only excavation for the building proper, and the new contract included the engine room and boiler room vaults to the 40th Street curb line. The first included work down to level 77' 0", the second to level 52' 10".

The Board of Estimate appropriated $100,000 for the contract. Six bidders bought plans and four submitted bids on September 6, 1900, as follows:

	CONTRACT	BLASTING 3,000 CUBIC YARDS OF ROCK	TOTAL
Thomas Dwyer - - - -	$102,747.00	$10,500.00	$113,247.00
Eugene Lentilhon - - -	126,400.00	750.00	127,150.00
John H. Parker Company - -	125,900.00	7,500.00	133,400.00
Louis Wechsler - - - -	104,700.00	9,000.00	113,700.00

All bids being over the allotment the contract could not be awarded.

On September 14, 1900, Mr. Lentilhon, in a letter to the architects, offered to extend his contract to cover similar work in contract no. 2, mentioning in the letter excavation, concrete, brick, and rubble. This would transfer about $65,000 of work from the second contract to the first.

This proposal was approved by the Corporation Counsel, as both parties, City and contractor, were agreed and the total outlay would not exceed the amount appropriated for contract no. 1.

The plans were then altered by coloring the masonry blue and red to distinguish the two contracts and the specifications were changed by the insertion of fresh pages defining the work.

Mr. Lentilhon at this time told the architects orally he was willing to include rock excavation also if they wished it, and rock excavation was accordingly inserted in no. 1.

Contract no. 2 was then revised to include the following work: masonry colored red on the drawing, all waterproofing, steel framing and templates, carpenter work, and all sheet piling needed for excavation, plumbing work, temporary latrines in the rear, pumping of all water. Six months was the time allowance, but this had to be extended as in the case of practically all contracts.

It took time for consideration of these revisions by all concerned, but at length the Park Department submitted the revised forms to the Board of Estimate on November 14, 1900, and the Board approved the terms on December 27 following.

In the meantime Mr. Lentilhon had pushed ahead on as much of his work as could be done before the second contractor appeared, such as removing the retaining wall along the sidewalk, which was considered for purposes of payment as excavation above grade 87, and the removal of the fence he had erected, for which a special order had to be issued by the Park Department.

As the foundations were still being set it was necessary during the winter to protect at night masonry set during the day, and on December 21, 1900, the Park Department issued a special order to the contractor for this protection for the sum of $500. No masonry was set when the thermometer registered below 32°F.

On January 21, 1901, the Park Department advertised a second time for bids on this revised contract no. 2. Four were submitted on February 7 at the following figures:

Herman Probst	- - - - -	$36,950.00
Eugene Lentilhon	- - - - -	38,860.00
Thomas Cockerell & Son	- - - - -	42,000.00
Williams & Gerstle	- - - - -	42,739.00

As Mr. Lentilhon's bid was but a few hundred dollars higher than the lowest the architects strongly recommended that his tender be accepted on the ground that such a step would benefit all concerned, as he already had contract no. 1. The Board of Estimate, however, decided to give it to the lowest bidder on March 8, and Mr. Probst signed the papers March 26, 1901.

From now on this part of the work was constantly delayed by a series of large and small disagreements between the two — later, three — contractors.

Mr. Probst began work on April 1, being engaged at first mainly in pumping and in setting sheet piling along the 40th Street curb line as the Lentilhon men excavated. The drawing for the temporary toilet building was issued in June, but the building was not put up for over a year and a half, not until the western wall of the reservoir was removed.

The larger part of the walls of the engine room were built in June and July, 1901, and the southern walls of the main building were extended as far as they could go while the boiler room was being excavated.

Up to this time very little bed rock had been uncovered, and, as stated before, the foundations of the greater part of the building were set on well compacted glacial drift. As the deep excavation for the pump room, boiler room and engine room progressed, however, bed rock was uncovered in June, 1901, at about 20 feet below the curb, that is at levels 67 to 80. The architects asked Mr. Lentilhon to excavate this rock as part of his contract, but he refused, offering, however, to do it as a separate order at the rate of $4.00 per cubic yard. This offer the architects refused and on September 18, 1901, they ordered him, in writing, to excavate this rock. He replied by letter the same day, referring to his letter of September 14, 1900, as the basis of what his work included.

During this little interlude the architects had prepared specifications for this rock blasting as a separate contract. It required several months for the various city departments concerned to investigate the circumstances and come to a decision. Finally all agreed that Mr. Lentilhon could not be compelled to excavate this rock without a lawsuit, the outcome of which was doubtful. In the meantime work stood still.

By November, 1901, the supplementary contract for this rock excavation, known as 1A, had been advertised. Bids were received on the 21st day of the month as follows:

F. Thilemann, jr.,	above 65' 6" level,	$ 8.00 per cubic yard ;	below,	$12.00 per cubic yard
E. Lentilhon,	above 65' 6" level,	14.00 per cubic yard ;	below,	5.00 per cubic yard
Norcross Bros.,	above 65' 6" level,	11.50 per cubic yard ;	below,	12.50 per cubic yard

The Comptroller compared these bids carefully and had computations made by the Park Department engineer, showing the amount of rock estimated at each level. Finally the contract was given to Mr. Thilemann and signed on January 10, 1902. Bad weather prevented any action for a month. The architects notified him on February 14 to begin work and on February 27 he began setting his boiler, drills, etc., beginning drilling at the east wall of the pump room on February 28. Blasting began on April 28, and, much to the relief of the architects and to the surprise of many of the residents on 40th Street, made satisfactory progress. Some of the neighbors had made up their minds that their houses would be harmed, and their window glass and bric-a-brac shattered by the blasting. An informal association was organized and on the morning when blasting began most of the men were in the street, the women on the stoops, prepared for the worst. The police captain from the West 30th Street precinct was present in person, with a detail of policemen reported by some as numbering five to six, and by others as high as fifteen; a lawyer stood ready to begin injunction proceedings; and altogether the stage was set for a very pretty little party. The first blast went off harmlessly, the others followed in like fashion and it was not long before the residents could return to their daily routine undisturbed.

The newspapers voiced some indignant protests against the project in general, the carelessness of the contractors in particular, the City for doing the work, the Library for asking for it, the architects for planning it and the contractors for executing it. The City and the contractors were indifferent, however, the Library without responsibility, and the architects could only plaintively urge that "In criticizing this part of the work the public should bear in mind that the delays have been due entirely to red tape, and to the legal complications which arose in connection with the different contracts for this part of the work. They should also bear in mind that owing to the legal status of the work we have had little or no control over the contractors, and also the fact that the contractors have been unusually difficult to manage" (as usual).

By the end of September, 1901, the reservoir had been entirely removed, except the west wall, the stone in which was to be used for the boiler room foundations. The foundations of the main building were entirely completed to within four feet of the basement floor, except where they were kept back by the boiler room excavation. The eastern half of the engine room was up to the sidewalk level and beams for the sidewalk were set. The boiler and pump rooms and adjoining portions were excavated to rock and had sheet piling set on the east, south and west sides. Material, sheds, steel work of contractors no. 1 and 2 were on various parts of the ground. The wooden fence, and the low retaining wall of the reservoir had been removed on 40th Street, but the fence elsewhere was in place.

As soon as the removal of the reservoir and the setting of foundations were well under way the architects took up the matter of the construction of the building proper. During these four years they had been developing the plans of the superstructure and making detailed studies. They were now ready to take up construction.

Before narrating the progress of the reservoir removal it will be best at this point to take up various changes in design of the building that had come about as a result of the detailed studies of the drawings made in the preceding four years.

The first set of drawings at $\frac{1}{8}$ " scale served to give a general idea of furniture, etc. They were followed by a set at $\frac{1}{16}$ " scale showing wall thicknesses and similar details. Mr. Hastings began at $\frac{1}{4}$ " a study of the Fifth Avenue elevation and in the development of this study made several changes from the competition drawing. The Ionic pilasters were changed to Corinthian columns; the central attic was made higher and changed in design; piers replaced the columns at the sides of the central pavilion; the high part of the building over the main reading room was raised. The first official printed view of this elevation was given in the Bulletin for February, 1898, and affords an interesting contrast to the perspective (following a photograph of the plaster model) printed two years later in the Bulletin for January, 1900.

In the text that accompanies the first view Mr. Hastings expressed his purpose as follows:

In the study of the exterior of the Library the main object has been to express in façade the interior arrangement of the building. The three main arches, or entrances, running through two stories, show in façade the main entrance hall, or staircase hall. The large pediments showing above the roofs, are designed distinctly to express the fact that in this portion of the building are the main reading rooms. The attic story over the main cornice, without windows, but lighted by skylights on the roof, contains the Stuart collection, picture galleries and other exhibits. The series of arches (very large in scale) either side of the entrances on the first story express two large rooms in this portion of the building; one for the children's reading room [which was later moved to the basement], and the other for the periodical room.

The façade of the building is set back about ninety feet from the street building line, and all of the terraces in front are to be studied with two monumental groups of figures, or fountains at either end.

It has been the desire of all those connected with the Library to have a simple and dignified design, not depending on an over amount of ornamentation, Renaissance in style, based upon classic principles, and modern in character.

In the autumn of 1898 the study of the corner pavilion and adjoining colonnade was begun at a scale of $\frac{3}{4}$ " to the foot. During this work the heights of stone courses were settled. This is based on 9 courses of brick laying up $23\frac{1}{2}$ ", which makes one brick and a joint equal $2\frac{11}{18}$ inches, and the stone courses were then made of heights to bond with the brick.

Study on the other elevations was then started and by January, 1899, the floor framing was taken into consideration. The architects sketched out on the one-sixteenth scale plans the general position of girders best suited to their architecture and the uses to which the rooms were to be put, and sent this material to Mr. Cooper who suggested the weights and strains to be allowed in laying out the work.

In general these were as follows:

Total weight for floors where book stacks were expected	300 lbs. per square foot
Total weight for all other floors - - - - -	250 lbs. per square foot
Total weight for roofs - - - - -	110 to 150 lbs. per square foot
Compressive strength of rubble masonry - - - - -	8 tons per square foot
Compressive strength of brick work - - - - -	10 tons per square foot
Compressive strength of cut marble - - - - -	20 tons per square foot
Compressive strength of cut granite - - - - -	25 tons per square foot
Compressive strength of steel - - - - -	12,000 lbs. per square inch
Tensile strength of steel - - - - -	16,000 lbs. per square inch
Weight of brick masonry - - - - -	120 lbs. per cubic foot
Weight of marble or granite - - - - -	170 lbs. per cubic foot
Weight of 8-inch fireproof partition - - - - -	40 lbs. per cubic foot

These assumptions being approved by the architects, Mr. Cooper began to lay out his framing on the one-sixteenth scale plan. Mr. Wolff began his study of the heating plant, and Pattison Brothers their study of the electric plant about this same time.

By April, 1899, study was sufficiently well advanced to start the $\frac{1}{8}$ th scale drawings. It was decided to make all plans and elevations at this scale, with details of the elevations at $\frac{3}{4}$ scale. Later the interiors were worked out at $\frac{1}{4}$ scale.

Mr. Wolff, now having the position of his ventilating flues well blocked out, the necessary thickness of walls for construction was determined and then an extra eight or twelve inches was added to the thickness of the walls where flues occurred in large numbers. Locations of main axes were determined, and gradually, as the plans progressed, the other figures were added.

When the plans were first called for in 1897 prices of building materials were low; by 1899, they had risen 25 per cent. In 1897 the limit of cost was fixed at $2,500,000. Because of this rise in prices and because the building had now been made larger and more elaborate, the architects realized that this sum was hopelessly inadequate. As a result of estimates by themselves, the consulting engineers, and reliable builders, it was concluded that the building as planned would cost $5,000,000. It was therefore decided, after much thought by the Trustees and the architects, to ask the Legislature to leave the cost to the discretion of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, without fixing a limit. This was done and it became law as Chapter 627 of the Laws of 1900 on April 23.

The final working tracings were begun by the architects in May, 1899. In June Mr. Wolff forwarded his drawings showing the layout of his work as completely and correctly as could be done until the time came for actual execution.

As to the amount of work to be comprised in this next contract for the general structure, the architects, after a conference on December 5, 1899, with President Clausen of the Park Department, decided to include in it the entire building above the foundations, including the walls, floors, partition blocks, roof, all exterior and interior stone work. Finishings and fittings, plaster, wood work, plumbing, mechanical and electrical equipment were to be left for later contracts.

For the material for the exterior the architects made a strong recommendation for marble. In his memorandum of April, 1897, Dr. Billings had expressed a preference for brick or terra cotta rather than marble or granite. The terms of the final competition, August, 1897, mentioned Indiana limestone as the material for the exterior, but added that the trustees were not committed to it and that most librarians favored brick from a practical point of view.

By the time the contract for the general structure was ready the architects had concluded that white marble was preferable to all other materials. They felt that white marble was more durable than any other building stone except certain fine-grained granites and certain colored marbles which would be unsuitable and more expensive. It lent itself more easily to carving than did granite. White marble was preferable too on the ground of color. A light sandstone was too coarse grained and it lacked the requisite strength. Indiana limestone was at its best when first worked; then it was bright and clean and full of character, but as it grew older it lost its crispness and became dull and lifeless; it was not a suitable stone to expose to the smoke and dust and dirt of a city. White marble was least attractive when first set, but with age it acquired a beautiful soft gray tint without losing any of its sparkle or character. White marble would cost more than Indiana limestone, but the character of the building would justify the choice.

By January, 1900, the large perspective, the elevation at $\frac{1}{4}$ " scale and the block plan at $\frac{1}{16}$ " scale were finished. Enlarged photographs were sent to the Paris exposition.

After these drawings were finished a number of minor changes were made in the working drawings, the principal being the following: on the side elevations the stone filling of the lower part of the first floor windows was changed to bronze work as on the front elevation; the heads of the basement windows were lowered one stone course around the outside; the rustications on the front face of the piers beside the centre pavilion were removed; the sculpture in the Fifth Avenue pediments enlarged in scale; the stack room windows spaced equidistant instead of their previous arrangement in groups of three; the skylight over the centre pavilion, originally of saddle form was changed to hip form; the axes of the side elevations respaced.

It was decided to batter the walls of the stack room, both inside and out; and after consultation with Mr. Cooper the design of the main reading room ceiling was omitted when designing the roof trusses, for these would be made according to constructive requirement, with the ceiling hung from them in a way to be determined at a later date.

The boiler and engine rooms now began to take settled form and were added to the drawings. Dr. Billings objected to their being beneath the building, and other objections were urged against putting them along the west side. They finally came to rest along the south side engine room at the east, boilers at the west, and coal bunkers over the boilers. By April, 1900, the different requirements of architects, heating engineers, and mechanical engineers were developed and satisfied, and it was possible to make a set of plans reconciling their various requirements.

On May 29 the architects sent to the Park Department prints of all drawings necessary for action by the City authorities on contracts nos. 2 and 3. Contract no. 2 was to include the entire foundation work of the boiler and engine rooms up to the sidewalk, excavation, masonry, waterproofing, steel work, pumping, temporary toilet for the main building. No. 3 was to include the main building as already determined.

The Park Department advertised on August 27, 1900, the bids to be opened on September 6. Just about this time, however, came before the courts the question of the constitutionality of the "prevailing rate of wages" law. The decision of the Supreme Court* made necessary a readvertising of the bids for contract no. 2, and the contract was finally awarded on March 8, 1901, to Herman Probst. When completed it cost $36,577.80. This delay allowed more time for study and consideration of contract no. 3, advertising of which was put over till the next spring.

Work began in the spring of 1900 on a plaster model, $\frac{1}{8}$ " scale, by Lostis & Neumann. As there was no money available from city funds, the Library advanced the necessary amount, being repaid later from the modelling allowance in contract no. 3. The model was completed by the end of the year and after erection in the Director's office at the Astor Library building where it was studied for a few weeks, it was set up in the Governor's Room in the City Hall on December 29, 1900. It then was sent to the exhibition of the Architectural League in the Fine Arts building, 215 West 57th Street, where it remained from February 16 to March 9. Thence it went to the Lenox building and thence to the Pan American exposition at Buffalo. After this exposition closed it came back to the modelling shop which by that time had been built on the library grounds.

By this time the studies of the general structural plan had borne fruit, and the specifications and drawings for the contract for erection of the building had taken approximately their final form.

The preliminary prints and typewritten specifications of this contract — no. 3 — were sent to the Park Department in May, 1900. The various city departments concerned had them under consideration for some ten months and at length the corrected specifications were printed.

* 166 New York 1-44, argued January 7, decided February 26, 1901.

The architects' estimate for this contract, $3,000,000, when submitted to the Board of Estimate by the Park Department on October 30, 1900, was reduced to $2,850,000 by the Comptroller, at which figure the Board of Estimate authorized an appropriation on January 29, 1901.

The contract was advertised on March 4, 1901, bids to be opened on April 11. Copies of the drawings and specifications were displayed in the Central Park Arsenal for this month, and the architects had representatives in attendance to answer questions, explain the drawings, etc. Sixteen contractors paid $20.00 for complete sets of the prints, and thirteen bought partial sets.

As the estimating progressed the architects became convinced that the bids would exceed the appropriation. That would mean serious delay. On their advice, therefore, the Park Department postponed the receipt of bids, and the architects set to work to devise changes that would decrease the cost without lessening the quality of the work. They decided to make the columns in the exhibition room of green Cippollino marble instead of green Connemara, and to permit the marble of different parts of the building to come from different quarries. The interior marble was separated from that of the main building, permitting a division if estimates ran too high.

At length the revised contract was readvertised and bids were opened on June 13, 1901. Five firms made tenders, as follows:

1.	$2,788,000.00	Quarry at South Dover, N. Y.	Eugene Lentilhon
2.	2,820,951.00	Dorset Valley, Vt. (West Rutland for staircase)	P. J. Carlin
3.	2,835,578.00	Dorset Valley, Vt.	P. J. Carlin
4.	2,865,706.00	Valley Quarry, Dorset, Vt.	Norcross Brothers
5.	2,884,000.00	South Dover, N. Y.	Marc Eidlitz & Sons
6.	2,884,964.00	West Rutland, Vt.	P. J. Carlin
7.	2,995,706.00	South Marble Co., Ga.	Norcross Brothers
8.	3,062,703.00	West Rutland, Vt.	Eugene Lentilhon
9.	3,108,513.00	Freedley's East Dorset, Vt.	Thompson, Starrett & Crimmins
10.	3,188,833.00	South Dover, N. Y.	P. J. Carlin
11.	3,196,936.00	Columbian Vert	Thompson, Starrett & Crimmins
12.	3,256,157.00	Dorset Valley, Vt.	Thompson, Starrett & Crimmins
13.	3,294,950.00	Marble Hill, Ga.	Eugene Lentilhon
14.	3,464,591.00	South Dover, N. Y.	Thompson, Starrett & Crimmins

None of the bidders took advantage of the clause allowing the court marble to come from a different quarry from that of the exterior. The architects, in a written report to the Board of Estimate, stated that Mr. Owen Brainard on their behalf had visited all the quarries named; that in general they preferred Dorset marble to South Dover because in the course of time it would take a better color, but that either would be acceptable; that the second and third lowest bids, from P. J. Carlin, were based on an unopened quarry and therefore should not be considered; that Lentilhon and Norcross Brothers were the only acceptable bidders coming near the allowance and either of the two would be agreeable to the architects.

The Board of Estimate decided on June 20, 1901, to give the contract to Norcross Brothers, feeling that though the bid exceeded the allowance by $15,706 it would be eligible because of the premium to be realized from the sale of the bonds and the amount expected to remain from the allowance for contract no. 1.

Within a week L. Laffin Kellog, representing Mr. Lentilhon secured from Justice Blanchard in the Supreme Court on June 25 a temporary injunction requiring the city to show cause on July 1 why there should not be a permanent injunction against giving the contract to Norcross Brothers. The action was brought by William Bradley as a taxpayer, and Justice Blanchard appointed Henry M. Powell as referee to take testimony.

On July 30 Justice McAdam in the Supreme Court denied the application. On the advice of the Corporation Counsel the Park Department signed the contract on behalf of the City August 26, 1901.

The case was carried to the Appellate Division where on November 15 was given a unanimous decision affirming the order of the lower court, Justice George L. Ingraham writing the opinion.

Notwithstanding these legal complications Norcross Brothers entered upon the execution of the contract as soon as it was signed, erecting the necessary buildings, derricks and other equipment on the site, engaging competent foremen and superintendents, delivering some material, and actually starting masonry work. They had already bought the quarry, and began to make sounding borings and to prepare the quarry for operation, transferring machinery from Tuckahoe, New York, to Manchester, Vermont, about five miles southeast of the quarry.

They did not, however, make complete preparations to quarry and deliver the marble until the suit was settled, holding that whereas they might recover damages from the City for work actually performed if the decision should be against them, it was improbable that they could recover damages for money invested in machinery at the quarry or in building railroads or supplying other general equipment. Because of this complication the contractor was not ready to begin operations until the winter had set in, and a Vermont winter made quarrying and building difficult and slow.

The time limit of three years set for execution of the contract lengthened to six years, and here it may be well, in view of the great amount of criticism directed against the Library, the architects, the contractor, in these six years, to stop a moment and consider the peculiar difficulties and problems that surrounded this contract from the beginning. In the first place it represented a larger marble building than had ever been built in this country. It required some 530,000 cubic feet of marble, and the significance of these figures is better realized when one recalls that the Chamber of Commerce building required but 25,000 cubic feet on its exterior and the Broad Street façade of the Stock Exchange only 50,000.

Moreover quarrying white marble is not easy. The white marble strata run in layers, frequently starting at the surface and running at an angle to depths of forty to fifty feet and rising again, with thickness of layers varying frequently from five or six feet to thirty or forty. The intervening layers are heavily clouded, sometimes with blue or gray marble, streaks of this discoloration frequently dipping into the layers of white marble and no amount of foresight, of experience, or of test borings, can determine exactly where the white marble is to be found, and in what quantity.

When work began everyone expected that the amount of waste would be small and that it would decrease as greater depths were reached. Instead of the 25 per cent expected, the waste actually amounted to 65 per cent. This meant, of course, that a very much larger amount of marble had to be quarried to get the necessary 530,000 cubic feet than had been expected. Incidentally it may be said that though this waste was large the "waste" was not all wasted, for much of it was used in other first class buildings, the new Harvard Medical School in the Boston fenway being a case in point.

It is scarcely necessary to explain that white marble is secured by cutting blocks between the veins that run more or less frequently through the quarry stone. It is not difficult to get a large amount of marble with a white face for ashlar or for parts of a building where the block is set in the wall with but one face exposed. In the case of reveals and jambs, angles, projections, columns, sills and similar features two or three faces are exposed. For these one face can be cut parallel to the vein and thus give a white surface, but the other exposed faces will run at right angles to the veins, which are bound to show. It was not easy to get marble so lightly veined as to leave these faces sufficiently white for use in the case of such stones as were used on the lower floor and on the Fifth Avenue façade, large stones, with frequently double and triple faces.

Another difficulty arose in connection with the location of the quarry and with the question of labor. This quarry at Dorset had been idle for over 25 years because of litigation. In the meantime railroads had been built on either side several miles distant, developing the country along their line and opening up numerous small quarries that provided marble for monuments and light work. To attract the labor which had drifted away while the quarry was idle meant building homes for the workmen to live in. The local population did not take to quarry work and it was necessary to send teams, mechanics, laborers from the outside.

At one stage of the work it was necessary for the contractor to build a new highway entirely around the quarry and to remove the old highway which ran immediately above a very good vein of marble. A task of this kind entailed considerable work in itself and it may be imagined that the preliminary authorization was not obtained with any great amount of alacrity or interest from the local selectmen and other officials for whom local matters and local problems seemed much more important than any connected with hastening the delivery of marble for a library building in distant New York City.

At first it had been thought that the marble could be hauled by teams from Dorset to Manchester, but as it became apparent that much more marble must be cut than was first estimated, the need of a railroad became more evident. The contractors had expected that a railroad branch, for which a charter had been obtained, would be built immediately, but after repeated promises with no sign of fulfilment they were at length forced to obtain an independent charter, buy the right of way, and build six miles of railroad from the quarry to the station at Manchester, at an expense of over $100,000. Legal proceedings were required for almost every foot of the right of way as the farmers opposed the project constantly; for one section Norcross Brothers bought two rights of way to save time.

At Manchester a large saw mill was erected with fourteen saws and two rip saws, which at times ran night and day with a capacity of 12,000 cubic feet a month. From the mill the blocks were shipped to the cutting yard at Port Morris, 142nd Street and Southern Boulevard, about seven miles from the library. The yard lay between the tracks of the New York Central and New Haven railroads, allowing shipments by either or both roads. It proved to be one of the largest stone yards in the neighborhood, equipped with 400 horsepower boilers, nine planers, two electric cranes, seven gangs of saws, two rip saws, four large rubbing beds, not to speak of the necessary smaller tools. It had a capacity of 200,000 cubic feet a year.

In March, 1901, the architects requested Lostis & Neumann to begin their work on the models with expectation of being paid out of the lump sum allowed for modelling when the contract was awarded. They took up first the $\frac{3}{4}$ " scale model of the corner pavilion and before the contract was finally settled had it sufficiently finished for judgment by the architects.

In August, drawings were begun for the office and modelling buildings. The former was a frame structure, 23 feet wide by 80 feet long, with an office for the builders on the south end, one for the architects in the centre, and a large drafting room on the north, with a large window ensuring good light; a fire-proof closet for storage of plans was provided also. The modelling room was of frame also, 30 feet wide by 60 feet long, with a saw tooth roof which gave two large skylights with north light; a large store room adjoined on the east side.

On September 24 the architects issued to Norcross Brothers the drawings necessary for beginning work, namely plans and elevations, framing and plumbing plans, working sections of foundations and work immediately about them, wall chase plans, and office building drawing, all at $\frac{1}{8}$ " scale but the last, which was at $\frac{1}{4}$ " scale. The $\frac{3}{4}$ " scale drawings were not sent at this time as joint-ing was not finally completed and the Norcross quarry not yet ready for work. These drawings, showing the exterior of the building complete, with jointing up to the top of the water table at the first floor level were issued on October 31.

In the meantime work had started on the full size details needed and after much study the drawings giving the heavy base and rusticated work of the basement and the water table above were issued on November 7, and on November 11 the final and revised plan of the basement framing was ready.

On November 18 the office building was ready and the drawing room and drawings were moved into it.

It had been hoped to lay the cornerstone in November or December, 1901, so that the outgoing City administration might take part in the ceremony, but the plan had to be abandoned because the quarry was not yet in working condition.

Work in the modelling room began in December, progress on the drawings and the models usually being simultaneous. The $\frac{1}{8}$ " scale model was set up here on its return from Buffalo, and the $\frac{3}{4}$ " scale model of the corner pavilion was brought from the modeler's shop. The models of the adjoining colonnade and of the centre pavilion were then made and united into one, giving the complete front from the northern foundation to the southern corner pavilion, with a complete bay of the return on the side.

As a result of the study of these models it was decided to make certain changes: formerly the pier walls beside the columns were to be battered $3\frac{1}{4}$ " both in the centre and side pavilions, the same amount as the entasis of the columns, the other walls to be vertical, but this showed so great a contrast it was decided to batter 2 inches all these walls which came in contact with columns; previously the flat surface of the basement rustications had been carried upright beside the windows, making a white band around their heads, and it was now decided to cut off the rustications when they reached the exterior windows, court windows being left as before; the ornamental work over the heads of the first floor windows was completely re-studied.

Full size detail drawings of the 42nd Street entrance were sent to the contractor and from them full size models were made and sent to the marble cutting yard.

The $\frac{3}{4}$ " scale model of the work around the main entrance hall was now started, also the main cornice at 3" scale, the balustrade at the first floor level, and a full size model of the entire colonnade including two columns and the window between from the ground to the top of the upper balustrade was set up on the ground as nearly as possible in the position it would occupy in the building. As the work progressed on these models, changes were made on the drawings and vice versa until the studies, changes, restudies, further changes brought results satisfactory to all.

As many of these changes had entailed changes in the amount and cost of the work as contracted for, it was necessary to settle them legally before work could proceed. With the approval of the Library, Commissioner Willcox of the Park Board and Norcross Brothers signed on August 12, 1902, modification A to the contract. Besides the changes indicated it called for others, as follows:

The architects decided to reduce the diameter of the columns slightly and to joint at the same heights as the other marble work the fourteen free standing columns which had been monoliths in the original specification.

The axes of the windows on 42nd Street had been re-spaced and a pavilion put in the centre similar in its upper part to the corner pavilions, with a newly-designed entrance in the basement.

As the walls of the north court, in the basement, to be used for the central circulation room, would be covered largely with book shelves, it was decided to substitute brick for the marble specified.

The main exhibition room was changed in detail. As the walls were so heavy, channels were omitted against many walls. The reveals in the stack room windows were reduced.

Even before Modification A was settled re-study both of models and drawings was under way for the remainder of the building, principally the marble interiors.

The 42nd Street staircase and halls were entirely re-studied at $\frac{3}{4}$ " scale. The 42nd Street entrance was made much more elaborate, columns being added, and instead of being cut into three parts was designed as one hall from entrance vestibule to the central circulation room. The room on the first floor over this entrance was decided to be unnecessary as a hall and was made a reading room, the marble finish being omitted. The hallways in front of the elevators must necessarily be constructed with the marble work solidly banded in so that the floor framing could be properly supported, but the rest of the marble in the north stairs was left to be set as ashlar after the building was enclosed.

The central portion of the 40th Street elevation was now restudied, by means of drawing and modelling. This had never been entirely satisfactory to the architects. The corresponding part of the 42nd Street elevation had previously been altered to a pavilion, but this was structurally impossible on 40th Street and it would also be inadvisable as too important a treatment for a subordinate elevation. It was finally treated with a coved and ornamental central arch and carving in the panels at each side.

A second bay was added to the full size model erected on the building, and various minor changes worked out on it, particularly in the ornament between the first and second floor windows, Mr. A. P. Proctor, a specialist in animal sculpture, being engaged to model the lion head. The large drops under the rosettes were removed, except over the fountain and in the portico, and in their place in the colonnade three small leaves were inserted. The model was taken down February 9, 1903.

Mr. Hastings had now concluded that the sculptures in the two Fifth Avenue pediments were unnecessary to the success of the design. This decision removed a source of trouble, for it would have been necessary to have this sculpture modelled before the stone was cut and set, and it would have been an extremely difficult matter, in a public work, with political and legal limitations and restrictions, to have secured a satisfactory sculptor. This freed the architects from the necessity of designing any sculpture before designing the building. The pediment groups, the statues in the niches, and the group in the centre pavilion attic were all left for a later contract (no. 9).

The cornerstone was laid at 3.55 p. m. on Monday, November 10, 1902, a beautiful autumn day. The exercises consisted of an invocation by the Rev. Dr. W. R. Huntington of Grace Church, an address by Hon. John Bigelow, President of the Library, followed by the laying of the stone by Mayor Seth Low, who spoke briefly of the significance of the occasion. Archbishop Farley dismissed the thousand invited guests with his benediction.

The stone was inscribed MDCCCII, nothing else. It had been brought from the Valley quarry at Dorset, Vermont, and was a perfect specimen of the marble intended for the exterior. It was seven feet, four inches long, four feet wide, three feet deep, and it weighed seven and one-half tons. As the stratification was horizontal it was set on its natural bed as it lay in the quarry.

It was placed in position by a boom derrick operated by an electric motor. As a precaution against possible failure of the street current, a hand windlass had been erected at the base of the derrick with the rigging made fast to the main hoisting-rope, ready for instant use, with laborers stationed at the cranks ready for the signals. These were sent from the site by an electric bell operated by a button under the foot of the foreman mason. To avoid any possibility of delay, the operation of setting had been rehearsed four times in the morning of the day.

The relic box under the stone is nineteen by thirteen by ten inches in size, and contained the following documents:

Mr. Bigelow printed at his own expense an account of the ceremonies, with the text of the addresses, etc.*

As in most things there was an unofficial as well as an official ceremony, the former being the more interesting. Dr. Billings described the unofficial event in a letter to his wife on August 12, 1902, as follows: "Yesterday, Carrère, Hastings and myself had a little private cornerstone laying, setting the first block of marble on the new building on the N. W. corner. I took the trowel, spread the bed of mortar a little, Hastings dropped a new ten cent piece (1902) into it, down came the stone, I tapped it three times with a hammer and said — 'May this building be all that the builders, the architects, the trustees, and the people of New York hope and expect.' " †

JOHN FLANAGAN

The following article appeared in "The Conning Tower" of the New York Tribune, June 21, 1921:

Flanagan — kindly, patient, courteous, handsome Flanagan — has clicked the indicator for the last time. That is what the coat room man told me when I missed the long familiar figure. He will not again examine the books you carry, nor bid you check your umbrella, nor direct you to the proper division. He will not pass the time of day, nor swap a joke.

Doubtless the Lord might give us another such concierge as Flanagan — but almost certainly He will not. Flanagan's dignity was as constant as his good nature. He wore his uniform, not with the crumpled abandon of the free American attendant, but with an almost military precision and neatness. Indeed, one might at first have thought him rather a veteran soldier than a retired police officer. In the twenty years I knew him his hair had turned silvery and his face had begun to take on the look of benevolence one sometimes sees when the peace of age has succeeded to the rigor of late middle life.

From his post at the library's main entrance he watched visitors surveying the marble span of the vestibule, painters who came to copy canvases in the gallery, school pupils and college students, literary workers and research experts; idlers who thumbed illustrated magazines in the periodical room; Bolsheviks who stole books to prove the community of all wealth; designers delving into the past for motifs, of which the present seems strangely destitute. These and many other human types he saw. Every now and again somebody happened along who fancied the library was a post-office, and once I was chatting with Flanagan when in burst a precipitate man with the somewhat startling query, "Which way to the trains?" That is to say, it was somewhat startling to me; but Flanagan said, "Almost every day some fellow mistakes this for the Grand Central."

Flanagan was on duty at the reception to the King of the Belgians and afterward spoke of the monarch's height and stately, though gracious, bearing. He was glad, for the sake of the royal profession, that a few good kings were left. He was there when Cardinal Mercier descended one of the broad staircases and blessed a child thrust forward by its mother, while the crowd rendered tribute to the prelate who had shown himself also a man. Flanagan was alive to such moments, just as he was alive to interesting topics of the day, or to a bit of fun.

Some folk would have missed Potter's lions less than they miss Flanagan. Not that he has passed on, mind you, but he has passed out — out of the multitude of questions, out of the winter drafts from the ever-swinging doors, out of the ken of old frequenters, who hope that he may live long to enjoy his leisure. It were no bad thing if some of the bibliotaphs one encounters on library staffs were so humane as Flanagan, and made so pleasant the approach to learning!

AGRICOLA STRONG.

(Mr. Flanagan, who came to the Astor Library as Doorman, February 1, 1898, went on leave of absence from the Library April 10, 1921. He has had the operation for cataract, and reports that his eyesight is improving. — Editor, Bulletin.)

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of June, 1921, the Library received as gifts a total of 3,825 volumes, 5,482 pamphlets, 104 maps and 3 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following: From the Heirs of Cornelia Livingston Cray, through Mr. Edward Cray Cammann of New York, came an ivory and brass seal, containing in the handle statuettes of Napoleon Bonaparte, and the little King of Rome, presented by Napoleon Bonaparte to General Frederic Antoine Lallemand, who was an Aide on his staff. General Lallemand presented this seal to Cornelia Livingston Cray and her husband at their house in New York where he had been a guest. From Mr. John Powell Lenox, Oak Park, Illinois, came the 16th volume of his "Christ in Art" Collection, presented to the Library in 1920. Mr. William S. Tod, of Paris, gave the Library the "Description géométrique détaillée des Alpes Françaises par Paul Helbronner, Annexe du tome 2, Dessinés et peints par l'auteur de 1899 à 1903," Paris, 1921, in portfolio.

From Mrs. Eleanor Dithmar came a collection of theatrical scrap books, for the period 1884-1901, and volumes 1 and 2 of the Theatrical Miscellany (15 volumes in all); from Messrs. Horace S. Ely and Company, 213 volumes of New York Laws, Revised Statutes and digests; from Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee, Washington, D. C., one volume and 61 pamphlets, all scientific and political publications of Simon Newcomb; from Mr. Francis Mondin, West New York, N. J., a collection of books on occultism, comprising 63 volumes and 169 pamphlets; from Princeton University Library, a collection of French Departmental Publications, in all 1,181 volumes and 89 pamphlets; from Dr. T. Mitchell Prudden, a miscellaneous collection of books, comprising 106 volumes; from Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, a miscellaneous collection of biographies, histories, etc., 128 volumes in all; and from Mr. Henry W. Toll, a large collection of corporation house organs, containing copies of 620 periodicals.

The New York Agency of the Banca Commerciale Italiana gave a copy (number 669 of 1,000 published) of "Gli atti del Comune di Milano fino all'anno 1216, a cura di C. Manaresi," Milano, 1919; from the Italian State Railways, General Agency for America, New York, came a set of 19 Italian railway posters; from Dollfus-Mieg & Cie., came volumes one and two of "Société Industrielle de Mulhouse: Histoire Documentaire de l'Industrie de Mulhouse et de ses environs au 19^{me} Siècle," Mulhouse, 1902; from the New York Office of Credito Italiano came "La Pubblicità nei Prestiti Italiani di Guerra, Studio critico documentato di Guido Rubetti," 2nd volume, Milano, 1919; from the Bibliothèque National à Plovdiv, Plovdiv, Bulgaria, came a copy of "Les Manuscrits et les Incunables Slaves de la Bibliothèque Nationale à Plovdiv, par B. Tzonev," Sofia, 1920; and from the Minister of Science and Arts, Brussels, Belgium, came 17 volumes and 10 pamphlets, mainly relating to Belgium and the war.

Mr. Yone Noguchi, Tokyo, Japan, presented to the Library a copy of his work, "Japan and America," Tokyo, 1921; Mrs. Carrie Giles Carter, West Newton, Mass., gave two copies of "The Life of Chauncey Giles as told in his diary and correspondence, compiled and edited by his Daughter, Carrie Giles Carter," Boston, 1920.

From the Misses Welcher, Westport, N. Y., came as the second installment of the S. P. Avery (Jr.) bequest, a collection of etchings and line engravings, engravings on wood by Isaac Pesoe, Swiss Views, etc., comprising 2 volumes, 37 etchings and 15 drawings; from Mr. S. J. Woolf came three of his lithographs, Theodore Roosevelt, Mark Twain and Edgar Allen Poe.

Chev. Eduardo Marzo gave the Library the full score (manuscript) of his Messe Solonelle No. 1, his Mass in honor of St. Sylvester, and 13 of his other compositions and arrangements; from Mr. Joseph Robie came a large collection of popular songs and piano pieces of the period 1895-1915, 650 in number; and from Mr. Emerson Whithorne came 12 of his compositions.

DURING the month of July, 1921, the Library received as gifts a total of 5,384 volumes, 8,134 pamphlets, 146 maps and 847 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

From Mrs. A. G. Spalding of Point Loma, California, came the Albert G. Spalding Collection of material relating to baseball, including other sports, such as cricket, football, etc. The collection comprises 1,403 volumes, 1,672 pamphlets, 102 periodicals, 561 photographs and an album of photographs, 17 original drawings by Homer Davenport, 13 original drawings for half-tone, 17 half-tones, 7 framed pictures, 12 letter cases of clippings and manuscript letters, 3 boxes of clippings, a collection of manuscript letters, and other material.

The Beta Theta Pi Fraternity has deposited with the Library the William Raimond Baird Collection of books relating to college fraternities, etc. This collection was made by the late William Raimond Baird of New York City and South Orange, N. J., and by him given to the Fraternity. It contains 1,228 volumes and 144 pamphlets.

The following collections were received: From Messrs. Horace S. Ely and Company, six Real Estate Atlases of New York City, Boroughs of Manhattan and The Bronx, and an engraving (Vûe du Canal proche de Haerlem, grave d'après le Tableau Original de Vandermeer); from the New York Evening Post, through Mr. Henry S. Canby, Editor of the Literary Review, a miscellaneous collection of books and pamphlets, comprising 16 volumes and 20 pamphlets; from Mr. C. M. Oberoucheff, over 1,000 copies of Russian newspapers, including about a dozen titles; from Mr. P. P. Pullis, a large collection of books and pamphlets, including sets of "Poor's Railroad Manual," "Poor's Manual of Public Utilities," "Moody's Manual," etc. (711 volumes and 11 pamphlets); from Mr. Walter Wayne Smith, Church Historian, Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Independence, Mo., 33 volumes and 31 single copies of "The True Latterday Saints Herald," and "The Saints Herald"; from Mrs. E. A. Smith, a miscellaneous collection of books, pamphlets, periodicals and newspapers, containing 166 volumes, 44 pamphlets, 6 periodicals and 7 bundles of newspapers; from Mr. Melville E. Stone, a miscellaneous collection of 139 volumes, including "The Original Lists of Persons of Quality, Emigrants, Religious Exiles, Political Rebels and others who went from Great Britain to the American Plantations 1600-1700... edited by John Camden Hotten," London, 1874, the complete works of Voltaire in 69 volumes, Geneva, 1785, etc.; and from the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society, Point Loma, California, the "Papers of the School of Antiquity," Nos. 1-3 and 5-12, also three volumes of the "Manuels Théosophiques" and "La Clef de la Théosophie. . . par H. P. Blavatsky. . . révisée et éditée par Katherine Tingley."

Mr. A. Allen Lewis, Southington, Conn., gave the Library 26 of his wood-engravings, the "Journey to Bagdad" series. From Miss Kitty Cheatham came a copy of her book of songs, "A Nursery Garland"; from Miss Rosalie Housmann came a miscellaneous collection of music (8 volumes and 70 pamphlets), including "The University Course of Music Study," New York, 1919-1921, and "Songs by American Composers"; from Miss Caroline V. Kerr came a miscellaneous collection of books on music, 21 volumes in all; Mrs. Douglas Powell gave the Library a large collection of vocal and instrumental music, including songs, vocal scores of oratorios, anthems, secular choruses, etc., containing 330 volumes, and 3,000 pamphlets; and from Witmark & Sons came 18 pieces of sheet music, including songs by Caro Roma, Frederick Vanderpool, Arthur Penn, Ernest R. Ball, and others.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN JULY, 1921

DURING the month of July, 1921, there were received at the Library 14,208 volumes and 8,401 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 74,330. They consulted 177,203 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 190,274.

A LIST OF REFERENCES IN

COMPILED BY DANIEL C. HASKELL

The material listed here represents a fairly good collection of books for the student of either the old Provençal or the modern revival. More than ordinary interest attaches to the modern books because they came to the Library by gift from Mrs. Thomas A. Janvier, who added to her enthusiasm as a book collector the advantages of an intimate knowledge of the country and the people gleaned from frequent visits and from an extensive acquaintance with the leaders in the literary movement. Besides the printed books there came from Mrs. Janvier eleven letters from Félix Gras, Gaston Jourdanne, Mistral, and Jules Ronjat.

INDUSTRIES AND INDUSTRIAL ARTS

Broughton, H. H. The electrical handling of materials. A manual, in four volumes, on the design, construction and application of cranes, conveyors, hoists and elevators. Volume II, Structural work. London: Benn Brothers, Ltd., 1920. xv, 292 p. illus. 4°. VFG (121)

When completed, the four volumes will constitute a thoroughly revised edition of the author's Electric cranes and hoists. Volume I has already been noted in New technical books, vol. 6, no. 1. Volume II deals with structural work and mechanical equipment, such as gearing, transmission devices, bearings, etc.

"It is evident that the author has set himself the task of dealing with the electrical handling of materials in a more comprehensive manner than has ever before been attempted; and it is also now apparent, as we would have expected from the excellence of the author's previous works, that he is succeeding in accomplishing his ambition... The type is clear and the illustrations are of fine quality, and it should be pointed out that most of the latter have never before been published... Almost the only work which deals really and effectively with the subject from a to z." — The Electrician, June 17, 1921.

Fremont, Ch. Files and filing, translated under the supervision of George Taylor... from the French, "La lime." London and New York: Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., 1920. xi, 148 p. illus. sq. 4°. VFV (121)

Traces the origin and evolution of the file and explains in detail correct methods of use, with discussions of force required, estimation of fatigue, efficiency, influence of various factors, etc. Also tells how files are cut, of their durability, and testing. The volume is attractively printed in square quarto with 221 excellent illustrations largely reproduced from early plates. The two sketches of cutting machines suggested by Leonardo da Vinci are noteworthy.

Reviewed in Ironmonger, Jan. 8, 1921; Work, Jan. 15, 1921.

Hall, Ansel F., compiler. Handbook of Yosemite National Park, a compendium of articles on the Yosemite region by the leading scientific authorities. New York and London: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1921. xiii, 347 p. illus. 8°. PSK (120)

This well-illustrated guide covers history, Indians, ideals and policy, administration, geology, life zones, birds, mammals, reptiles, fishes, insects, trees, the giant sequoia, flowers, camping and mountaineering, motoring and photography. References at chapter endings.

Van Deventer, John H., editor. More work per man. Tested and selected methods of managing men... New York: The Engineering Magazine Company, 1921. x, 440 p. charts. 8°. TME (228)

A compilation from the periodical Industrial management of articles by various authors. Tells how to pick the man for the job and how to solve the labor turnover problem; training and education of labor; the foreman; employment management and labor maintenance; industrial relations and the shop committee; wage systems and other incentives; the human element in industry; and the reduction of waste and fatigue. Well illustrated with diagrams and forms.

REFERENCE BOOKS

British Optical Instrument Manufacturers' Association. Dictionary of British scientific instruments. London: Constable & Co., 1921. 335 p. 8°.

Besides a comprehensive dictionary of terms used in the description of scientific instruments, the work contains a sketch of the British optical instruments industry, an account of navigating instruments, some facts about British optical glass, and notes on the work of the Royal Meteorological Society and the Royal Observatory at Greenwich. Gives illustrations of about 250 instruments.

The Cleveland Foundation, compiler. The Cleveland year book, 1921. Cleveland: The Cleveland Foundation, 1921. 311 p. 12°.

Projected as one of a series of annual summaries of events and progress in Cleveland. "As completely as possible in its condensed shape, it aims to serve all persons who need accurate and concise information about the city. This first volume includes much historical and explanatory data."

Ratel, C. Bibliographie mondiale moderne (1910-1920) de la plupart des ouvrages et documents parus durant cette époque concernant exclusivement la préparation mécanique des matériaux et minéraux et toutes branches s'y rattachant directement. Paris: Chez l'auteur, 1920. 344 p. 8°.

A closely classified bibliography of minerals and mining, including material to be found in the books, documents and periodicals of France, America, and England. The titles are given in the original and in French translation. Periodical references include approximate number of pages and illustrations. An attempt is made to give prices. Emphasis is placed on the commercial side and much space is given to labor conditions. The mechanical rather than the chemical aspect of mining is selected for inclusion. Indexed.

The Times diary and index of the war, 1914-18. London: Hodder & Stoughton, 1921. 324 p. 8°.

A good chronology and index to dates for the war period. Better for British events and participation than for the Allies. Includes peace conference and a few settlements of major importance in 1919 and 1920. Tabular appendices include casualties, British transport and troops, naval losses, airship losses, etc. The index references are to dates and consequently could be used with any newspaper or periodical.

Wagner, Henry R. The Plains and the Rockies; a bibliography of original narratives of travel and adventure, 1800-1865. San Francisco: John Howell, 1921. 193 p. 4°.

Particularly useful because of the long notes which are really a digest of the contents of the books described, with an historical account of the author's mission. Attempts to be a complete bibliography of books containing personal experiences of authors between the dates given above, with frequent reference to books printed after 1865. Titles are fully catalogued. The work has a good index.

In the winter of 1902/3 the entrance lobby came to take its final shape. From sketches made in the spring of 1902 on $\frac{3}{4}$ " scale the modellers made a $\frac{3}{4}$ " scale model in two halves, showing the entire room. This model was then studied carefully by Mr. Hastings and as a result drawings and other models were made repeatedly until the design approached satisfaction. The main vault retained substantially the same curve given it at first, but was changed considerably in panelling and penetration. It was studied directly on the model and then redrawn. Mr. Cooper then examined it and pronounced the buttress rather light, not so light as to make the roof likely to fall, but light enough to make him fear it might settle enough to spall the marble. To strengthen it the floor of the Stuart room immediately above was raised one step which allowed the crown of the vault to be raised eight inches. It was further decided to change the filling over the portico vaults and over the main vault to solid Portland cement concrete; this stiffened it and also transmitted the thrust to the large piers beside the portico and relieved the free standing piers of a large part of their forward thrust. The brick piers in front of the Stuart room were greatly enlarged, thus adding weight to the buttresses and bringing the line of thrust inside their bases. A further criticism of the engineer was directed against the jointing of the grain of the penetration, and to meet this, the joints which previously had radiated through the grain from the axis of the penetration, were changed to radiate from the vault axis; this made the grain stones practically part of the main vault instead of part of the penetration.

The main stair cases were also redesigned at this period. In earlier studies they had been supported on steel beams resting on the side walls underneath, but the architects decided now to make them of honest masonry construction throughout, by no means as easy of accomplishment as of decision, nor easy to secure in a way to satisfy the architect as well as the engineer. The span of the arch of the staircase is 17 feet. The first effort planned the soffit of the stair string straight and parallel with its upper surface, but many trials to obtain a line of thrust proved this impossible. A slight curve was then given it, greatly increasing the curve at the ends; the treads and risers were of solid stone, extending through the stair thickness and showing a finished surface in its soffit. In this form it was submitted to Mr. Cooper, who criticized it strongly though he did not absolutely disapprove it. He contended that when the treads wore out, replacement was impossible except by cast iron surfaces. He refused to consider each head as resting on the one below and as being prevented from twisting by being recessed into the string. The stair was then changed to its present form, making the soffit a complete arch in itself, the treads being supported on it, and the curve being changed until it was satisfactory. The beams supporting the landings and smaller flights were replaced by brick arches, and the stair now rests everywhere on masonry support.

In connection with the main vault a stone vault was placed over the flight of stairs, a comparatively slight change from the structural point of view as the buttresses were deemed sufficient.

The portico also was changed in design though the changes in main outline and construction were slight. The two arches between the piers were heavily latticed and panelled, and the niches at the end were made round, their domes being latticed to match the arches.

On the second floor the walls of the hall immediately back of the main entrance hall, which at first had been studied with arches and niches, were now made plain, leaving a marble surface on which mural decorations could be put at a later date if desired.

So too on the third floor the main hall was restudied. It had been hoped to treat it in marble, but this would have cost too much, wherefore it was decided to leave it with a brick wall to be finished in wood in a later contract. The end portions, forming the ceilings over the upper run of the main stair case, were made very elaborate, with marble arches and domes. The marble for the domes, however, was finally omitted because of expense, and a plaster finish substituted.

By this time certain minor changes had been made, such as omission of metal coverings for wash surfaces of cornices; the bond of the marble work was reduced in pediments, cornices, and other places where cost could be lessened; the rustications on the side of the centre pavilion went through several changes, finally being left only at the back end, with the outer line vertical not staggered; the panels over the fountains were modelled and remodelled until satisfactory, panels were added to the soffits of the three main arches; the three large heads of Minerva over the arches were modelled by Philip Martiny; the carving in the court frieze was omitted as unnecessary. The eight semi-circular panels over the court windows on the first floor were modelled first at small scale, then at full size and two alternating designs were selected for execution. The balconies of the windows on the stair landings in the court were made smaller.

As these changes were decided on, estimates of the cost were secured from Norcross Brothers, and such as did not lead to an extra charge not covered by the credit from Modification A, and such as were necessary to prevent delay in work were temporarily authorized by the architects. About November, 1903, they were set forth in tabular form and in this shape were carefully examined by architects and contractors in an effort to bring the cost to a reasonable figure. After deducting Modification A, the list finally showed an extra charge of $64,862. The architects then laid the case before the Park Department and the Library, explaining that the changes were practically all due to the extra cost of the honestly constructed staircases and the vaults over them, unquestionably a very desirable improvement. A request for additional money at this time was deemed inexpedient.

The architects thereupon cut the charge down by making the following changes: omitting the marble vaults over the stairs and landings on the 42nd Street staircase, and substituting plaster; omitting some carving on the high cornice, also the carving of the moulding over modillions of the main cornice; concrete in the cellar floor except in the stack room was omitted for a later contract; the columns of the main exhibition room were changed from Cippolino marble to Vermont marble of particularly selected graining; the domes over the main staircases to the third floor were changed from marble to plaster.

These changes brought the extra of $64,862 down to a credit of $1,542, in which form it was approved by the Park Department and the Library. By a clerical change made in the Park Department Modification A was separated and a new modification, B, submitted to the Board of Estimate calling for an extra allowance of $25,598, in which form it was granted on December 31, 1903.

During all this time routine office work had gone on as usual. During the winter of 1902/3 outside work had been stopped, but the elevations of the chases and the flues to be built into the walls had been laid out from the rough plans developed several years before. Shop drawings of the steel framing were received from the American Bridge Company and of the marble work from Norcross Brothers, and were carefully examined and checked. These drawings represented the last chance the architects had of expressing their intentions and seeing that the builders had a proper understanding of all details of size, riveting, jointing, etc. It is a pleasure to record that practically no mistakes occurred in this part of the work.

During the spring of 1903, the modellers worked largely on the interior models which were necessary for execution of the work up to the second floor. By July 24 their work had gone so quickly the shop was closed until further consideration could be given to the rest of the building.

In the spring of 1903, work was begun in earnest on the plans for the furniture and shelving in the various rooms, following in the main the general ideas of Dr. Billings. The Director went to Europe in July, leaving the details to be arranged between his assistants and the representatives of the architects. In the meantime the specifications for the contract for the stacks — known as contract no. 4 — had been written by Mr. Brainard, the civil engineer associated with Carrère & Hastings. In order to get it under way he had sent the specifications to the Park Department with request for preliminary approval. By some oversight the specifications were approved and advertised, as the architects were notified on August 31. As the Board of Estimate had not approved it, and Dr. Billings had passed on it in nothing but a general way, the architects had not prepared final drawings when this word came. By great effort the complete set of drawings was finished within a week, taking the tentative plans as a basis.

The bids required that a full size model of a stack be set up in the Central Park arsenal, and some bidders complained that the time was too short for compliance. Bids were therefore extended to October 29. Ten firms took plans and specifications for estimating, but bids were received from only four. As the specifications required bidders to work out their own construction, and to submit a full sized model, and as the contract evidently presupposed considerable capital, small competitors were automatically ruled out.

The bids when opened gave the following figures:

Van Dorn Iron Works - - - - -	$ 716,650.00
Library Bureau - - - - -	754,915.00
Snead & Company - - - - -	856,187.00
Art Metal Company - - - - -	1,377,887.00

The highest bid was too much for consideration. The architects and the Trustees preferred the Snead bid and recommended to the Board of Estimate that it be accepted. The lower bidders made a vigorous protest, but the Board gave the contract to Snead & Company. The question of approval of the plans then came up. As these had not been approved by the Board, and as the protesting bidders were still active the Board refused to approve the plans and threw the whole contract out. They later agreed to reconsider the matter, but finally on December 29, 1903, decided to stand by their rejection.

The architects thereupon began plans and specifications which would better meet their requirements than those that slipped through in the previous summer; they were particularly anxious to see that the framing was satisfactory and that the specifications would be so worded as to make it impossible for irresponsible or incompetent contractors to take advantage of the information made public at the first bidding, and thereby send in a bid incapable of performance. The architects had a model made up, and worked out framing plans and constructional details in a way satisfactory to themselves, the Library, and Mr. Cooper, their consulting engineer. It was by no means an easy task to plan a stack that would be strong enough, be neat and symmetrical in appearance, and be capable of fulfilling the technical requirements, such as uniformity of spacing for shelving, etc.

At length, however, the plans and specifications were approved by the architects, the Library, the Park Department, the Corporation Counsel, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and in August 1904, they were again advertised.

On September 22, bids were received from six firms, their tenders being as follows:

	AS SPECIFIED	ALTERNATIVE
P. J. Carlin - - - - -	$734,310.00
Hecla Iron Works - - - - -	755,950.00	$620,950.00
Van Dorn Iron Works - - - - -	823,300.00*
J. B. & J. M. Cornell - - - - -	887,250.00
Snead & Company - - - - -	916,703.00
Library Bureau - - - - -	969,025.00	881,725.00

* Or $858,300 — Variations in shelf and painting.

The Library Bureau alternative was principally in the shelves and their method of support. The Hecla Iron Works submitted no model as specified, and their alternative bid and model departed from the fixed requirements in having the columns cast iron, the floors fireproof fibre instead of marble, and no three-inch air space provided between the lowest shelf and the floor. For this reason their bid was not considered. The other bidders had submitted models conforming to specifications except that the Snead showed minor variations in shelf supports. In some models the finish was poor in workmanship and painting, in others it was medium. The Snead model excelled all in finish, and the architects and Trustees joined in recommending to the Board of Estimate at its meeting on November 18, that the Snead bid be accepted on the ground that the tender came nearest to meeting the requirements, and the experience of the Company in the Library of Congress and elsewhere demonstrated ability to finish a task of this size.

The Board of Estimate awarded the contract on November 18, 1904 to Snead & Company as recommended.

Suit was thereupon brought by the Hecla Iron Works, Justice Marean in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn granting them a temporary injunction on November 28. Justice Dickey on December 21 refused a permanent injunction. On January 13, 1905, J. Edward Swanstrom appeared before the Board of which as president of the borough of Brooklyn he formerly had been a member, to ask reconsideration of the contract on behalf of the Hecla Iron Works. He asserted that the contract had been secured by the Snead Company through misrepresentation and suppression of fact. The attorney for the Snead Company insisted that the Hecla Company's bid had been rejected because of its failure to submit a model in conformity with the specifications. The Board referred the matter to the Corporation Counsel for an opinion as to the legality of the award and he reported in favor of granting the contract on February 17 following.

The next step was an affidavit by Robert A. McCord, Secretary of the Hecla Company, asserting that when the bids were opened a man representing himself as a city employee had intimated to him (McCord) that for $75,000 the contract would be awarded to the Hecla Iron Works. Mr. McCord, of course, indignantly refused to consider any such proposal. On receipt of the affidavit Comptroller Grant wrote to District Attorney Jerome on January 16, asking him to investigate the charges.

The District Attorney submitted his report to the Comptroller on February 22. He had found no evidence of commission of a crime and submitted affidavits from several of the competing bidders to the effect that Jacob A. Costuma, of 9 East 87th Street, a general foreman in the Park Department in September, 1904, had talked about "swinging the contract" to certain bidders irrespective of the amount of their bid if only he were paid $75,000, but the affidavits failed to substantiate any hint that Snead & Company had received the contract otherwise than on the merits of its bid. The report was accompanied by an affidavit from Costuma's wife to the effect that her husband had gone to Florida about three weeks ago, and that she did not know where he was nor what was his post office address.

The Board of Estimate saw no reason to change its decision, and so informed the Hecla Iron Works. Mr. Neils Paulson, President of the Hecla Company, sent a long letter of protest* contesting that his company was fully as well equipped to build the stacks as the Snead Company; that the Snead Company had, through their attorney before the bids were opened, tried to intimidate other bidders by asserting that the specifications described stacks the patents of which they held; that Mr. Poulson was really the inventor of the stacks and not Bernard Green who had patented them; that the Hecla Company had bought property and commenced to build in anticipation of receiving the contract when it learned it was the lowest bidder; that it made no difference to him or the company in a financial way whether the contract was given them or not, but he made this plea in support of the good name of himself and his company.

This was the final shot from the Hecla Company and it proved unavailing. The noise of contention was not yet settled, however. At this time The New York Daily News was fighting the McClellan administration in every way possible. It contended that a "gambling combine" controlled the city administration, and asserted that it would expose "the man higher up and his agents and methods." In its issue for March 24, 1905, appeared an article by W. A. Lewis spreading at length the Costuma story. In the issue for March 26, was an assertion that of the Snead bid of $889,000, the sum of $220,000 was allotted as "velvet" to be shared by certain persons.

On Friday the 23rd of March the News had displayed on its front page the following headlines: "Easy graft in Library contracts! Learned and ingenious rogues. One of the Big Contracts in Connection with the New Library on Fifth Avenue the Channel of Thievery. High-Up New Yorkers and an Honored U. S. Official at Washington Implicated." The text that followed stated that Dr. John S. Billings, Director of the Library, was a brother-in-law of Bernard R. Green, Superintendent of the Congressional Library, and patentee of the stacks made by the Snead Company, which stacks were defined in the specifications in everything but name. The changes on this theme were rung through a column or two.

Dr. Billings called to the attention of the District Attorney the misstatements in this article, and in its issue of Wednesday, April 18, the Daily News printed the following editorial:

A RETRACTION AND AN APOLOGY

The New York Daily News has unwittingly done grievous wrong to Dr. John S. Billings, librarian of the New York Public Library, and his distinguished associates of the Public Library Board. In issues of the Daily News from March 22 to March 26, 1906, inclusive, articles and editorials assailing this Board, to which has been entrusted by the citizens of New York the work of securing for this city the greatest public library in the world, were printed. The publication was made in the belief that we were performing a public service, but we now learn that our statements and criticisms had no foundation in fact, and were cruelly unjust to Dr. Billings and other members of the Board — gentlemen whose citizenship and scholarship are sources of public pride.

Information was supplied to us, on which we acted in good faith, and the publication was made wholly without malice, and honestly made in the belief of its truth.

The Daily News is sincerely sorry that it published the unwarranted attacks on these gentlemen, and hereby publicly regrets the same.

We unhesitatingly retract all charges against them of any irregularity whatever in the performance of their duties as trustees of the Public Library, and desire to do whatever lies in our power to remedy any harm or wrong which has been caused them because of the error into which we were led.

The emphasis of the language of Editor Thomas C. Quinn left no doubt as to the completeness of his retraction. While these accusations and charges were flying through the air, the contract had been signed and Snead & Company were busy at work on the drawings of the main stack room. These were finished during the winter and spring, and the setting of columns at the building began on July 15, 1905.

For several years the plans for the mechanical equipment of the building had been under careful study by the architects and by the consulting engineers. By the latter part of 1904 the plans and specifications for the heating plant — contract no. 5 — were ready for advertising. Bids were received on December 8, 1904, as follows:

It was awarded to the lowest bidder, but work was delayed until October, 1905, as the building was not yet ready for installation.

By May, 1905, the architects had the following changes in design to submit, based on a more careful study as the work progressed: it was felt that the main exhibition room was too much cut up and 12 of the 36 columns first called for were omitted; changes in the panels and carving in the entrance lobby were suggested, and the ten arches in the upper part of it were changed from carved flat bands to moulded arches.

Norcross Brothers had been unable to get any more stainless (Meiers puzzolan) cement, the supply in this country having been exhausted. To prevent delay in setting the marble they suggested that they reserve for marble work the little they had, and lay bricks — according to the specifications these must be laid in stainless cement when within six feet of marble — in regular (Kane's trowel brand) cement. They found a further difficulty in getting their workmen to use the proper kinds of mortar for the different parts of the brickwork, as both mixtures looked alike when made up. When the specifications were written it was feared that ordinary cement would stain the marble, but experience showed otherwise. The architects recommended that the large credit offered for this change by Nørcross Brothers be accepted and the Park Board so acted after its doubts and fears that inferior results would ensue had been settled. As this change was not formally signed by the three parties it was later included in Modification C.

The cornice of the first floor^d hall back of the entrance lobby proved troublesome for a while, as the contractors insisted that the model submitted required the carving of practically the whole surface on account of the curl projecting above the surface, whereas they had planned to plane the surface by machine and carve the scroll only. It was finally adjusted by making a new model, but this model contained a flower not shown originally and the change involved an extra charge.

More or less extensive changes of design were made in the windows in the main reading room and in the walls between them, in the windows opening from the third floor hall above the roof, and in the third floor main stairways. So too the first floor hall near the 42nd Street stairway was changed to take the full width of the hall instead of only the part in front of the staircase, somewhat as the basement hall had been changed in plan.

The architects had again decided that they wanted the stone supplied for the sculpture in the two Fifth Avenue pediments. For a time they thought of having it in the 42nd Street pediment also, but this was abandoned. A sketch made for the sculpture by George Maynard years ago was carefully examined and stone was ordered which seemed proper in quantity and jointing to cover all possibilities.

This stone came from another quarry opened near the one devoted to the Library work, somewhat higher on the hill above Dorset valley, and was known as "plateau stock." The name proved confusing and gave an idea of inferior material; the product was cheaper, not because it was inferior in quality, but because there was less waste in getting it out in large pieces such as were required for cornices, etc. It was slightly grayish in color, uniform, rather than white with streaks. This made it better for carved or molded work than stone from the "Valley" and "Danby" quarries. Question later arose as to the admission of this plateau stock on the ground that it was inferior in quality. This fear was based on the fact that a credit was allowed for its use, but this cheapness was due, not to inferior quality, but, as has been said before, to economy in getting it out. It was used, not because it was cheaper, but because it was better adapted to work requiring large pieces.

The extension and roof over the boiler and engine room had been included with the Norcross contract and at that time they had been treated both in material and design as part of the building. More mature consideration, however, pointed to their treatment as part of the terraces and grounds. The terrace walls always having been planned as granite, the engine room walls must therefore be changed from marble to granite. Milford pink granite was selected after trials of several kinds of granite as being satisfactory in color and texture in itself, and as giving a pleasing contrast with the marble of the building. In the final study of the plans for this room the windows along the wall were omitted, ventilation to be secured through a cast iron ridge at the top.

When the $\frac{3}{4}$ " scale model of the attic of the centre pavilion as designed under Modification B was set in place, the effect was not satisfactory. After attempting a few minor changes it was finally decided to revise it entirely, simplifying it greatly, and the result justified the effort.

The American Bridge Company had just submitted shop drawings of the roof framing when the architects decided to make a radical change, and ordered all work stopped. They then restudied it, decreasing the skylight areas, and flattening them down to the roof as much as possible. Ventilator openings were put in the ridge instead of the foot of the skylight. The concrete between the sleepers of the roof called for in the specifications was omitted; thus lessening the load.

It was thought that the two fountains flanking the front centre pavilion would be somewhat too high as seen from the street, and they were re-designed, flattened down a bit, and simplified as to ornament. The steps between them were changed from granite to marble.

About this time a final study was made of the steps at the 42nd Street entrance, which were not in keeping with the development of the pavilion over this entrance.

When the plans for the building were first drawn in 1897 it was a natural thought to provide for bicycles and an entrance and storage accommodations for them were provided at the northwest corner of the cellar. By 1904, however, the bicycle had, of course, practically disappeared, and the entrance was replaced by a solid wall. The cellar space planned for bicycles in 1897 became the carpenter shop in 1911.

In the contract design the high roof over the reading room contained three pediments, one towards the front and one at each end of the room. It was now designed to make hipped ends instead of gables and to introduce breaks into the cornice over each of the returns of the piers of this high portion; previously the crown mouldings had run through without a break.

By the autumn of 1904 the contractors had come to the problem of stone cutting for the vault over the entrance lobby. The architects had planned this, as already told, as a notable feat of architecture and engineering, a great marble, barrel vault. The thrust, however, was very great and required most careful consideration. To assist the stone cutters the architects had a $\frac{3}{4}$ " model set up, each "stone" being cut separately and showing its full shape, both front and back faces. The model was then submitted to the engineer who made some minor alterations and expressed his satisfaction. Before he would agree to give his written approval he called for stiffening rods bedded in the concrete over the vault. He explained that he did not consider these rods as constituting iron work that supported stone, but he rather considered that the concrete thus reinforced by the iron rods was real masonry construction.

With the drawing prepared by Mr. Cooper showing the reinforcement required and a tabulation of the other changes decided on since adoption of Modification B, the architects secured the consent of the Library and then went to the Park Department for approval. So much time had elapsed since the second modification and the personnel of the department had changed so much that the new officials required elaborate explanations as to the justification and necessity for the changes. Particular consideration was given as to the relative cost of granite and marble and the architects were called on for a written assurance that the "plateau stock" marble; alluded to above, was in no way inferior to that used in the rest of the building though it cost less. Modification "C," embodying these changes was at length signed on August 14, 1905.

In the spring of 1906, plaster casts of the inscriptions proposed for the attic and frieze of the centre pavilion were set up. Those in the panels of the attic were accepted substantially as indicated by the plaster casts, namely: (to the south)

For the frieze the architects suggested "The New York Public Library." Some of the trustees thought, however, that the city should be given a more emphatic recognition as builder, and the plaster model to this effect read "Erected by the City." These casts were kept in place throughout the year and were the subject of much thought by the architects and trustees and, to a lesser extent, by the city authorities and the public. It was finally decided that proper acknowledgement to the city could be given inside the building, and was fixed upon as the inscription. The first date marks the consolidation, the second the laying of the cornerstone. Late in the year these inscriptions were cut in the marble.

By December, 1906, the roof was finished, and the building was completely protected from the weather. With its very heavy masonry it was very damp. To help towards drying, the architects urged upon the city authorities a contract with Frank Dobson, who was installing the heating plant, calling for temporary operation during the winter at a cost of about $40,000. Late in the winter the Comptroller disapproved the suggestion on the ground that the cost of this heating would be greater than that of repairing the damage done to Norcross' work by freezing. Fortunately the winter was mild and the contractors struggled through. Towards the end, however, Norcross Brothers objected to the use of salt in the traps to prevent freezing, and proposed salamanders in the cellar. After some delay the Park Department issued a special order and they were installed. In retrospect, the gas they generated seems greater than the heat, but in all fairness it must be admitted that if they were placed sufficiently near a trap they usually kept it from freezing.

When the vaults of the 42nd Street staircase were taken out of contract no. 3, the architects had hoped to put them in a new contract, probably that for the interior finish. Norcross Brothers were now ready to set the stairs, and called for a settlement. It was therefore decided to put these vaults into a fourth modification of the contract, at the same figure for which credit had been allowed for them in Modification B, and this Modification D was finally approved by the Corporation Counsel and signed on January 22, 1907.

The building was now getting ready for plumbing. Preparation of plans and specifications had begun as early as 1904. The architects engaged at their own expense Albert L. Webster to oversee this work. At first it was thought that the plumbing fixtures would be confined to toilets and scrub rooms, rain water drainage being included in the general construction contract. As plans developed, however, basins were added in the stack rooms and several of the offices, which complicated the system and required extensive cutting of walls.

By January, 1906, the requirements were embodied in the suggested plans and specifications which were sent to the Park Department on January 9, 1906, and thence to the Corporation Counsel for approval. It was returned on January 25 with request for changes in regard to the provision for buying material that might be patented, and the contract and specifications modified to suit the Corporation Counsel's office were approved by the latter on February 15. It was then sent to the printer. As result of a conference between the Corporation Counsel, Mr. Rives, and the architects on March 13 the form first submitted was approved. The corrected proofs were sent to the Park Department on March 19 and immediately forwarded to the Corporation Counsel's office once more. After several months' delay it was submitted to the Board of Estimate for approval on June 22.

On motion of the Comptroller it was returned to the Park Department with the request that it be modified with regard to the fire pumps and filters, the drains for the storage batteries, and a few unimportant matters. The Comptroller objected to the pumps on the ground that they would be used so seldom they surely would be out of order when needed, and if a fire did break out, the house pumps would serve to check it until the fire engines arrived. He objected to filters because the City would probably install a general filtration plant in the near future. He objected to drains in the storage battery room because he objected to an independent electrical generating plant of any kind in the building — the first rumble of the thunder of an approaching storm. The Park Department returned the contract to the architects for report and they fought valiantly for the fire pumps and filters. They were willing to pass by for the present the question of the generating plant. Whether their recommendations were approved or rejected, however, they so arranged the piping that the apparatus cut out could be installed at a later time if necessary. Against the better judgment of the architects and over their emphatic protests the Board of Estimate approved the amended contract in November, 1906. As the changes were so extensive the specifications were reprinted and finally the contract was advertised on February 11, 1907, bids being opened on March 21.

At that time six bids were submitted, as follows:

Michael J. O'Brien - - - - -	$ 93,000.00
Byrne & Murphy, Inc. - - - - -	96,651.00
Wells & Newton Company - - - - -	101,450.00
P. F. Kenney Company - - - - -	106,000.00
Christopher Nally - - - - -	107,800.00
Boyd Equipment Company - - - - -	117,534.00

On April 5 the Board of Estimate awarded the contract to the lowest bidder and it was signed on April 27.

By August of 1907, work on contract no. 3 was finished, just about six years after the contract was signed and three years after the time limit called for by the contract. It had been a period of disheartening delays for all concerned. Beginning with the protracted litigation that forced delay in the first few months and brought winter's hand to stop the active operations, every possible means of delay seemed with unvarying accuracy of aim to hit upon the library as a target. These years saw a succession of strikes and lockouts in every one of the building trades and every one affected the library in some way. Financial difficulties beset the contracting company, which at one time was in the hands of a receiver. Worst of all was the difficulty at the quarry. As we saw before, architects, contractors, quarrymen, all had failed to realize how difficult it was to get white marble of a quality that would meet the exacting standard of this building, nor had they realized how many more yards it would be necessary to cut to secure the quantity needed for this work. The rate of progress at the building was fixed by the amount of usable marble taken from the quarry. When it was all over, however, every one concerned felt the result justified the insistence of the architects on their high ideals. The total cost of the contract, including modifications and extras, was $2,866,536.39, a very moderate advance over the accepted bid of $2,865,706.00.

The building was now completed as to design, work was in progress on the heating and ventilating apparatus, and the book stacks; and the plumbing had just been authorized. For finishing there were needed therefore only contracts for interior finish, for electrical and mechanical equipment, the approaches and exterior grading, and for the movable furniture and equipment.

Work on the book stacks had begun in July, 1905, and progress was rapid notwithstanding frequent interludes in the way of strikes. It must be remembered that this was the period in which Sam. Parks and his "entertainment committee" urged their claims for a closed shop in the structural steel field, and the erectors engaged in setting steel here worked and struck in patient obedience to the commands of the general who regulated the affairs of the house-smith's union. No real delay in the progress of the building resulted, however, as the erection of the stacks was in many respects quite independent of the work in other parts of the building. After the main stack room was completed Norcross Brothers laid the floor of the main reading room, built the masonry walls and set the roof. The stack floors were then laid and the iron work painted. The contract had one modification, calling for marble floors in most of the stack room windows. Towards the end the work went more slowly as there was no need of finishing until the rest of the building was done, but the winter of 1909-10 saw the stack room substantially completed.

Section 2 of this contract comprised the stacks in all rooms except the main stack room and this work had to go hand in hand with that of the interior finish contractor. Drawings for the stacks in these rooms were made at the same time as those for the interior finish. To provide shelves as nearly as possible of uniform length they were made to vary by 2-inch units. A second modification in the contract took care of the changed distribution, card frames and numbers in the stack room, brown shelves in the special rooms and various other small matters.

The contract was finished in 1910 at a final cost of $927,048.87.

Work on the heating and ventilating contract went in very satisfactory fashion. By foresight, good judgment, and cooperation with other contractors, the Dobson company had few errors in execution to grieve over. The heating plant was first used for temporary heat in October, 1907, and except for the two summers following has been in continuous use since then. The contract was not completed till April, 1911, as the piping and other apparatus in the engine room were held back by the delay in execution of the dynamo contract. The final cost of the work was $300,531.65.

The plumber's work did not go so smoothly. This was due partly to the fact that the foremen were not always careful to learn just what was required before the work was set; and partly to the fact that much of the work had to be done over or replaced because of inferior quality. The contract was prolonged, too, because the position of all work was dependent on the layout of the interior finish. The entire system was in operation by the beginning of 1911, but work was not finally completed and accepted till December, 1911, when the final payment on the contract price of $93,000 was made.

After the general contract for the building the next large contract was that for the interior finish. The first studies to this end had been begun in January, 1904, and they were kept up intermittently as the office had opportunity. Late in the year, work was begun seriously and by June, 1905, the first cloth tracings — treating the windows — had been started. In July one of the large rooms in the building was fitted up as an office and a large force of draughtsmen were moved into it. By January, 1906, all tracings were nearly completed and in May they were submitted to the art commission which approved them heartily and speedily.

In this work the ceilings of the two front corner rooms on the first floor proved exceptionally difficult to design. The windows extend nearly to the ceiling and the problem was complicated by the presence of two girders running east and west and hanging about four feet below the ceiling and therefore below the tops of the windows. Mr. Hastings tried off and on for six months to find a satisfactory solution, but the girders baffled him. He then laid the work aside for half a year and the solution came to him by a happy inspiration. The girders served as two sides of a parallelogram with an oval centre, and the tops of the windows were carried down to this hanging rectangle by four semi-circular niches, altogether a very pleasing effect and an interesting extrication from a very unfortunate situation.

A deadlock had existed for several years in connection with the main reading room. From the very beginning Dr. Billings had insisted that it should be treated as two rooms capable of administration and operation as one room or two. In 1897 he felt it was unwise to provide for a room capable of seating over 700 readers, or rather he felt provision should be made for ultimate care of such a number, but thought the day was distant when so many seats would be needed. He always had in mind a glass screen running to the ceiling which would allow either side of the large room to be used at will and would allow the heating cost to be cut in half if necessary. To any such division the architects were strongly opposed.

Another point of difference lay in the desire of the architects to run a railing some three feet or so away from the wall shelving that lined the room. Dr. Billings was as strongly opposed to this as the architects were opposed to his scheme of a divided reading room.

When it became necessary to break the deadlock, a conference was called between the trustees, the architects, and the Director, Mr. George L. Rives serving as chief diplomat, mollifier, and moderator. In the end compromise was effected, the architects giving way on the question of railing, and Dr. Billings receding from his no-surrender attitude on the division of the reading room.

The heating apparatus of the central circulation room was included in this contract as the design of the room had been so radically altered that the plant as originally planned was inadequate.

The specifications for the interior finish were written in the architect's office by Mr. Owen Brainard, Mr. John S. Humphreys and Mr. Franklin J. Ward. Part 1, the specifications proper, was done by Mr. Brainard. It had been begun in the autumn of 1905, and was rewritten and revised with much advice, and after many conferences with numerous architects and specialists in the various trades. The second part consisted of the schedules of finish for each room and was written by Messrs. Ward and Humphreys, revised by Mr. Carrère.

The specifications were sent to the Park Department on June 30, 1906, and after slight alterations were approved by the Corporation Counsel and ordered printed. A little later the architects sought to have the sculpture for the exterior included by means of an allowance for $180,000. The Corporation Counsel refused to include it in this form and the specifications were printed without it.

On March 11, 1907, the contract was advertised for bids, all drawings having received their final touches and all city authorities from whom consent or approval was necessary having given their approval. One month was allowed for estimating and seven bids were opened on April 11.

The figures appeared as follows:

THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY — CENTRAL BUILDING
Bryant Park and Forty-second Street Façades

The last bid represented a combination of several of the best men in each trade, such as Batterson & Eisele for marble, Pottier & Stymus for woodwork, Klee-Thomson for plaster, and others of equally good character, and the bid served as a fair illustration of the comparison between high class men bidding on the highest class of work as the architects specified, and a bid from a commercial contractor intending to handle the contract in a commercial way under the same specifications. The John Peirce Company was well known and had a good reputation and the contract was awarded to it on April 19, 1907, being signed on May 8. As the Comptroller did not certify that there was money in the treasury to pay for the contract until October 2, 1907, the latter date was taken as the official date of the contract.

The general construction work was finished in the summer of 1907, and work on the interior finish did not get well under way until late in the same year. This lapse of several months was the only time in which substantial progress was not being made. As soon as the interior finish work began, the other trades took up the step in harmony with the progress of this contract.

The principal sub-contractors were the Hayden Company for the woodwork, the Henry Bonnard Company for the bronze work, J. B. & J. M. Cornell for iron, Klee-Thomson for plaster, James Wall Finn for painting, Wm. Bradley & Sons (really the same as the John Peirce Company) for marble. Considerable delay in letting the contract for the metal book stacks included in this contract was encountered; the architects hoped that the Snead Company, contractor for the main stack room, would qualify as sub-contractor, but the Snead Company and the Peirce company could not agree as to price and the contract finally went to the Jamestown (N. Y.) Metal Furniture Company.

Work on the shop drawings and the execution of the work both began at the top of the building. After the contractors had made drawings satisfactory to themselves, the architects checked them over, Mr. John S. Humphreys as to requirements of design, and Mr. F. J. Ward as to mechanical points. Work on other contracts, such as registers, radiators, electrical switches, lighting fixtures, plumbing fixtures, were noted on these drawings so that they showed all the requirements of all the trades in every room. Once they were made, execution went on with unusual harmony and extremely few errors. The contractor had allowed $200,000 to provide for unforeseen errors, and of this sum exactly $150 was used. About two years and a half were required for the drawings alone. The engine room came last, due primarily to the delay in securing assent of the City to the installation of dynamos.

Little radical change was made during the progress of this contract. The numerous small changes were embodied in a modification and in this the most important item related to the bronze windows. According to specifications they were to have been of cast or rolled bronze, but between the time the specifications were written and the contract let, a new form of bronze work—extruded metal — was invented. This seemed so desirable that special arrangements were made at an extra cost of $6,000 for constructing the bronze windows of this extruded metal.

Work on the contract was completed in May, 1911, the final cost being $3,122,797.28.

The contract for electrical and mechanical equipment included electric wiring, book lifts, book conveyors, pneumatic tubes, telephones, fire alarm gongs, etc. Originally it included clocks and dynamos, but the Comptroller cut these items out and they were inserted in later contracts. The consulting engineers, Messrs. Pattison Brothers, had begun work in the spring of 1904, and within two years had the plans and specifications in shape for approval by the City. The Comptroller's office made it plain before the matter was officially brought up that it objected to the two wire system of installing the electric wires (preferring the three wire system) and that it would refuse to approve any contract calling for an independent plant for generation of electricity. The generating plant was therefore removed from the specifications and the amended document was sent to the Park Department on November 27, 1906. After following the usual procedure the Comptroller finally agreed to approve it in the spring of 1907 with omission of electric clocks, extensions of wiring through furniture, etc. He objected also to a system of house telephones on a switch-board separate from the public telephones. Once the corrections called for by the Comptroller were made, the contract was advertised June 10, and ten bids were received June 27, from the following:

Lord Electric Company - - - - -	$173,891.00
Western Electric Company - - - - -	181,449.00
Harry Alexander - - - - -	186,000.00
Tucker Electrical Company - - - - -	195,651.00
John Peirce Company - - - - -	198,000.00
Commercial Construction Company - - - - -	207,000.00
J. Livingston, Jr., & Company - - - - -	208,000.00
Reis & O'Donovan - - - - -	209,440.00
Peet & Powers - - - - -	228,000.00
Charles L. Eidlitz - - - - -	234,684.00

The contract was awarded to the lowest bidder on July 8, and work began July 12. Progress was swift and competent and well in harmony with the other trades. The few changes made were embodied in a modification of the contract calling for an extra charge of $2,678.35. Work was completed in May, 1911, and the final cost was $176,569.35.

The next contract, the ninth, included all the approaches to the building within the curb lines entirely around the building and back to the line of the old reservoir retaining wall on Bryant Park. It included also the treatment of the south court, and the two public comfort stations in the Park, though the administration of these was entirely in the hands of the City and not the Library. The sculpture on the Fifth Avenue front was included also.

The competition drawings had included a scheme for the approaches, but when the final drawings were started in the autumn of 1905, radical changes were made. Just before the contract was advertised, Fifth Avenue was widened and 42nd Street was widened just before it was completed.

Drawings and specifications were sent to the Park Department in September, 1907, and it was not until August 20, 1908, that the tedious progress through the offices of Corporation Counsel, Comptroller, Board of Estimate, Park Department had been completed, the contract advertised, and bids opened. They ran as follows:

* Rock excavation $2.50 per yard extra.

The contract was awarded to Norcross Brothers and signed November 5, 1908.

Except for the sculpture there was nothing unusual in this contract and it was practically completed early in 1911. Two modifications were added, $11,554.52 in amount, making the total cost (except for work on the sculpture not yet completed, August, 1920), $534,544.52.

The problem of the sculpture had been difficult from the beginning. City requirements called for advertising in open competition, really an impossibility in the case of works of art. Mr. Carrère had tried to secure a special appropriation of $180,000, but legal niceties prevented. In the approaches contract, an allowance for modelling was admitted and this was expected to cover the preparation of the models, special arrangements with the contractor being depended on to cover the final carving. On this basis the following sculptors were employed, everybody concerned understanding that the amounts allowed were inadequate, but the artists agreeing to do the work primarily as a labor of love:

Frederick Macmonnies, the two groups in the fountains, $25,000 for modelling, carving to be done by Norcross Brothers Company. The group in the niche to the north of the main entrance consists of a man seated on the Sphinx, representing Truth. Above him is carved in stone this inscription from Esdras (i, 3):

BUT ABOVE ALL THINGS
TRUTH
THE VICTORY

In the corresponding niche to the south, seated on Pegasus, is the figure of a woman, representing Beauty. Above her is carved the following lines from the twenty-first stanza of Whittier's poem "The Shadow and the Light":

BEAUTY
ETERNAL VOICE AND INWARD WORD

The groups in the pediments were assigned to George Grey Barnard, $20,000 for the modelling, John Donnelly for Norcross Brothers doing the carving. The northern pediment represents History, the southern Art.

To Paul W. Bartlett were assigned the six statues in front of the attic, with an allowance of $20,000 for the modelling and $5,000 for the carving. Named from north to south they represent History, Drama, Poetry, Religion, Romance, and Philosophy.

The two lions on either side of the main approach near the Fifth Avenue sidewalk are by Edward C. Potter who was paid $8,000 for modelling and $5,000 for carving. The public, voicing itself through the newspapers, has not taken kindly to these lions, or rather it would be more accurate to say that when the lions were first set up many comments about them appeared in the newspapers, most of the writers criticising them as too tame or mild or catlike. Apparently a figure with the action of an heraldic animal was wanted. Artists and architects have held that the sculptor succeeded admirably in designing figures that would serve as decorations, and that were as realistic as the situation demanded.

The tenth contract included the electric generating plant, the engines, dynamos, storage batteries, and the machine shop. These items had originally been included in contract no. 8, but had been cut out by the Comptroller's office. The City engineers had from the beginning opposed the installation of a private plant. The architects, the consulting engineers, the Library trustees had with equal tenacity insisted that with a building as large as this, electricity could be made as a by-product of the steam generated for heating six to eight months a year, that the current so produced would be made cheaper than it could be bought from the Edison Company, and that even if it was decided to purchase current, the position would be strengthened in the negotiations, if it was understood that a private plant stood in the background ready to run if a satisfactory price was not quoted. After conferences running over several years the City — acting on the advice of the engineers in the Comptroller's Office — agreed to advertise the contract on condition that it should not be liable for more than $102,000, and that the Library should bear all expenses of repairs, replacement, and maintenance.

With this agreed to, the contract was advertised in the fall of 1909 and twelve bids were opened October 21. The figures were as follows:

Lord Electric Company — Engines (See Note A); Dynamos (See Note B) - - - - -	$71,842.00
Watson-Flagg Engineering Company — Engines, Harrisburgh; Dynamos, General Electric - - - - -	78,490.00
Peet & Powers, Inc. — Engines, Harrisburgh; Dynamos, General Electric - - - - -	79,600.00
Charles L. Eidlitz Company — Engines, as specified; Dynamos, as specified - - - - -	80,000.00
Reis & O'Donovan, Inc. - - - - -	80,880.00
Cowden & De Young, Inc. — Engines, as specified; Dynamos, as specified - - - - -	82,619.00
Wells & Newton Company — Engines, Fitchburg or Harrisburgh; Dynamos, Sprague or Westinghouse - - - - -	82,884.00
Louis Wechsler — Engines, Buckeye; Dynamos, Westinghouse -	83,875.00
Eugene Frank — Engines, Fitchburg; Dynamos, Westinghouse -	83,890.00
Providence Engineering Works — Engines, Rice & Sargent; Dynamos, Westinghouse or General Electric - - - - -	87,500.00
E. J. Duggan — Engines, Ball & Wood; Dynamos, as specified -	89,900.00
Henry E. Fox — Engines, Fitchburg or Harrisburgh; Dynamos, Westinghouse or Sprague - - - - -	97,000.00

Note A — Engines, C. & G. Cooper Company, or Fitchburg or Harrisburgh.

Note B — Dynamos, Sprague or Crocker-Wheeler, or Westinghouse.

The contract was given the Lord Electric Company, the low bidder, in December, and they began work in January, 1910. The contract was completed in March, 1911, with one extra charge of $705 for rails around the engines, making the total $72,547.

The last general contract, no. 11, included furniture of all kinds, small fixed fittings, lighting fixtures, the clocks and bells that were removed from contract no. 8, and the equipment of the printing and binding plants.

The architects began preparatory work on it in 1908 as soon as the rush of work on the interior finish contract permitted. There were so many different kinds of articles included that it was deemed best to enumerate them by schedules arranged by floor and room. These were made part of the drawings. The other drawings showed the types of each kind of furniture. The specifications in most cases merely gave the requirements of workmanship, leaving to the schedules the determination of what is included.

The contract was submitted in 1909 and approved June 25, but through mistakes in the formalities it was not advertised until the fall. Ten bids were received on November 18, 1909, as follows:

T. D. Wadelon & Company	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	$560,000.00
G. W. Smith & Company	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	579,440.00
John Gill & Sons	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	597,000.00
Lord Construction Company	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	632,000.00
John Peirce Company	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	654,900.00
Cobb Construction Company	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	665,423.00
L. Marcotte & Company	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	685,000.00
Thomas Dwyer	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	695,200.00
Library Bureau	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	760,820.00
A. H. Davenport Company	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	827,941.53

The architects were strongly in favor of awarding the contract to Mr. Wadelon, but before the Board of Estimate was ready to act several of the bidders threatened legal action to prevent the award. The primary difficulty lay with the printing and binding equipment. In describing this equipment, catalogue cuts had been used; the names had been removed and the machines were thus referred to as a type of what was required. In particular the Library had wanted linotype machines in the composing room. The Lans-ton Company of Philadelphia, selling agents for the monotype, insisted that this method of excluding them from competing was illegal, and the Corporation Counsel supported them. All bids were rejected. New specifications were prepared, adding throughout "or equal thereto" whenever any machinery was described.

The new bids were opened on December 30, 1909, with the following result:

Cobb Construction Company	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	$543,750.00
T. D. Wadelon & Company	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	544,700.00
G. W. Smith & Company, Inc.	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	558,000.00
John Gill & Sons	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	597,000.00
L. Marcotte & Company	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	615,375.00
Library Bureau	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	662,053.00
A. H. Davenport Company	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	679,000.00

The Wadelon bid here was $15,300 less than the bid the first time. The Cobb Company had reduced its tender by $121,250.

The contract was awarded to the Cobb Company and signed April 7, 1910. Many small changes were made during its execution, amounting to a net credit of $518.03. There were extra charges for the bases of the flag staffs on the terrace (done by Grandelis and Menconi), $5,880.45; for rugs $1,045, the final cost being $550,157.42.

By May, 1911, enough work on the contract had been done to justify opening the building, but final payment was not made until early in 1912.

A further contract, number 12 in the series, was prepared, but never advertised. This included a number of small items the necessity of which had not been foreseen and in addition a few items that had been supplied in previous contracts, but needed alteration. It was estimated that the cost of the contract would probably be between $50,000 and $75,000. When submitted to the Comptroller, the objection was raised that many of the things called for represented repairs rather than new work. It was changed and again submitted. Much discussion followed and it was finally decided to let the whole matter be treated as repairs to be done by the Building Superintendent as needed.

Representing the architects the first Superintendent was Mr. P. B. Polhemus appointed July 2, 1900. He resigned February 15, 1906, and was succeeded by Mr. S. H. Francis who held the position for three years, Mr. F. R. Hirsch for one year, Mr. George Woolston for a year and until the building was opened. From the beginning Mr. Franklin J. Ward was in charge of the drawings. As work developed on the interior finish plans and the furniture and equipment, Mr. John S. Humphreys supervised the drawings for design, and Mr. Ward for mechanical details. Mr. Owen Brainard, associated with the firm of Carrère & Hastings, was throughout the work depended on for structural and engineering questions, and after the death of Mr. Carrère on March 1, 1911, as a result of a collision between a taxicab and a trolley car on February 12, he took general charge of the practical details and business arrangements that heretofore had been supervised by Mr. Carrère.

As in this account there is frequent reference to the individual members of the firm of architects, it may be well to explain that Mr. Hastings was generally responsible for the design, and Mr. Carrère was the critic and administrative and executive member. Mr. Brainard, although his name did not appear in the firm name, was for all practical purposes a member thereof, and was responsible for the engineering and wrote the specifications. The combination was a rarely successful one, as each in his department was at the head of his profession.

About ten men were killed during the progress of the work, a remarkably small number for an enterprise of this magnitude and extending over so long a period. There were probably between twenty and thirty cases of serious injury to workmen.

A rapid survey of the progress of the work would fix the following dates as significant:

Consolidation of the three libraries was effected on May 23, 1895. The building was authorized by the Legislature on May 19, 1897. The terms of the first competition were printed May 21, 1897. The competition closed on July 15. Terms of the second competition were printed August 2. This competition closed November 1. The award was made to Carrère and Hastings November 11. The lease from the City is dated December 8. The agreement between the city and the architects is dated December 9, 1897.

The first contract was let June 2, 1899 and removal of the reservoir began that month. Laying of foundations began in May, 1900. The upper walls were begun in December, 1901. The first marble was set in August, 1902, the cornerstone laid on November 10, 1902. The roof was completed in December, 1906, the interior finish begun in December, 1907, and the building formally opened on May 23, 1911.

The total cost was $9,002,523.09, at the rate per cubic foot of about 87 cents, 77½ cents being for the building proper, 4½ cents for approaches, and 5 cents for furniture. For the time and conditions this is a very reasonable rate, some first class buildings of that period having cost $1.00 per cubic foot even when built under private ownership, which is always cheaper than public work. The cost excludes payments to the architects, engineers, certain expenses of the city departments, which are not usually included in computing building costs.

The building includes 10,382,600 cubic feet. The area covered by the building, including boiler and engine rooms, but excluding the south court is 115,000 square feet.

The woodwork is, in the main, white oak from Indiana. The trustees room, the third floor hall, current periodicals rooms at the southeast end of the first floor, and the technology rooms on the northeast corner are finished in French walnut. Philippine teak is used for the floor of the trustees room and for the furniture in the trustees room and the main exhibition room. The furniture is in general of oak, with some pieces of mahogany, while many of the desks used by the staff are of maple.

Vermont marble from quarries at Dorset and Danby, near Manchester, was used for the entire exterior and large portions of the interior. The exterior balustrades are of pink Milford granite from Milford, Massachusetts. The flag pole bases, seats, the Bryant monument in the Park are of pink Tennessee marble.

Certain portions of the lining of interior walls and corridors are of Pentelikon marble from Greece. The toilets throughout are finished with white Italian and Blanco P marble from Italy. The latter is nearly pure white, the former more greyish and strongly marked. The brownish grey marble used for floors and for some standing trim in the public catalogue and main reading room is Touraine or Basville marble from France. The red marble used for bases, door trim and other similar work is Rouge Jaspe from France. The purplish red marble, somewhat similar to this last mentioned, but more purple, used only in floors, is Red Champlain from Vermont. The grey mottled marble used in some halls, also as floor borders in some corridors, is Grey Sienna from Italy.

Yellow Sienna from Italy is used in the wall panels in the central circulation room. The walls of the small exhibition room opening off the main entrance lobby are paneled in Breche Violette from Italy. The grey marble on the doorways in the two front corner rooms on the first floor is Formosa from Germany. The mantel of the trustees' room is of Eastman Cream marble from Vermont. The small black border lines in the panels of the trustees' room are of Belgian Black marble.

In the corridors the floors are in general of marble. In the reading rooms they are of cork. This is made from granulated cork compressed into slabs by heavy pressure and baked without the addition of any other substance. A red quarry tile imported from Wales is used for the floor of most of the other reading rooms. The white wall tile used in the printing rooms and bindery and elsewhere was imported from England.

Looking at the completed building and comparing it with the preliminary studies leaves one in no doubt as to Mr. Hastings' success in his aim of a "simple and dignified design, not depending on an over amount of ornamentation, Renaissance in style, based upon classic principles, and modern in character." The architects throughout sought first to adapt the building to its purpose, and second to make it look well. In both they succeeded. The plan is realistic and practical, the design is dignified and distinguished.

The entrance lobby is as noble and inspiring a room as can be found in New York or in this country. It is an honest room, the marble vault proclaiming its honest structure in every sweep of its graceful curves. The severe simplicity of the main exhibition room proclaims it a place for display of treasures the beauty of which will be set off and enhanced by the lines of the marble and the tone of the ceiling. The four reading rooms on the Fifth Avenue front of the first floor are rich in the soft beauty of their French walnut trim, and the ceilings of the corner rooms show a most happy solution of a difficult problem.

The sweeping spaciousness of the quarter-acre main reading room, its inviting walls, its beautiful ceiling, all serve to secure a most unusual sense of repose and quiet in a room that seats over seven hundred readers and frequently has nearly a thousand visitors at a time. The skill with which the north court was roofed over, the daring of leaving in plain sight, with no covering but paint, the rivets of the steel pillars and trusses, are points so obvious that we often fail to give them the credit they deserve. Could anything proclaim more emphatically than the Sixth Avenue façade that here is a high store room with a large reading room on top of it, and could the same notice be expressed more pleasingly or artistically? The charm of the flag staffs on the front terrace, the design of their bases, the beauty of their sculpture are lost upon many of us, simply because they are things we see day by day — and therefore fail to give the appreciation to which they are entitled. How long the building will last is unwise to predict in this restless, changing New York, but surely as long as it stands it will remain a monument of civic pride, and a tribute to the wisdom and foresight of John Shaw Billings who in great measure planned it and to Carrère and Hastings who translated these plans into brick and marble with such artistic skill.

* Contract was let on unit prices. This figure represents the finance department estimate of probable cost.

† Amount certified by the architects. The contract itself records payment of but $26,933.76.

‡ In addition to this $17,788.69, representing the changes and alterations approved by the Comptroller, there is included in the total payment on the contract an item of $1,812.84 as an extra charge for setting the Bartlett statues over the Fifth Avenue entrance in 1916; the Comptroller refused to pass the item as an "extra" in the contract but agreed to pay it in 1918 as a special claim against the city. It does not appear on the city books as a charge against the library building. In estimating the cost of the building $90,000 of the $542,601.53 should be charged to the building proper and $452,601.53 to the exterior grading, etc.

§ In estimating the cost of the building $5,000.00 should be charged to the building proper and $345,157.42 to furniture and equipment. There are 10,380,000 cubic feet in the building and the gross cost was $6.67 cents per cubic foot, the net cost on the building proper being 77 cents per cubic foot.

THE ALBERT G. SPALDING COLLECTION

THE Albert G. Spalding Collection of material relating to baseball and other sports came to the Library this summer from its donor, Mrs. A. G. Spalding of Point Loma, California. It is being classified, catalogued, and made ready for public use. The extent of the collection may be suggested by mentioning the fact that there are 1,403 volumes, 1,672 pamphlets, 102 periodicals, more than 560 photographs, seventeen original drawings by Homer Davenport, thirteen other original drawings, about twenty-five miscellaneous pictures, framed and unframed, twelve letter cases of clippings and letters in manuscript, three boxes of clippings, with letters and other material.

Among the important items there may be named: Spalding's Athletic Library, bound volumes from 1892-1907; British Sports Athletic Library, No. 1 to 14; Spalding's Official Base Ball Guide, 1876-1911; Spalding's "How to Play Base Ball"; Spalding's Base Ball Encyclopedia, 1905; Spalding's Amateur Base Ball Year Book, 1905; Spalding's Official Guide, National Association, 1902-05; Spalding's Official Guide, National Association, Professional Base Ball Leagues, 1902-07; Reach's Official Base Ball Guide 1893-1911; Peck and Snyder's Amateur Base Ball Constitution and Playing Rules, 1875-1880; Spalding's Professional Base Ball Constitution and Playing Rules, 1881-1910; Beadle's Base Ball Guide, 1860-1881; DeWitt's Base Ball Guide, 1874-1883; National League Handbooks, 1906-1913; Knickerbocker Base Ball Score Book, 1845; 1856; 1859; Atlantic Score Book, 1860; Spalding's Base Ball Guide, 1878-1914; Spalding's Base Ball Records, 1908-1911; Peck & Snyder's Base Ball Guide, 1875; Munro's "Our Boys," 1877; Chadwick's Manual, 1875; Murnane's Base Ball Guide, 1902-1905; Wright & Ditson's Base Ball Guide, 1912; Beadle's Dime Base Ball Player; Beadle's Dime Miscellaneous Sports; Chadwick's Base Ball Manual; DeWitt's Base Ball Guide, 1869-1876; Handbook Base Ball, 1869-1884; Lajoie's Base Ball Guide, 1906-1908.

The collection includes Harry Wright's library of eight scrap books, three letter copy books, two large score books, a package of correspondence, four packages of letters, one box of clippings, six packages of miscellaneous memorandum books, and eight packages of miscellaneous photographs.

Another special collection is Henry Chadwick's library, also a part of the Spalding Collection, with a miscellaneous collection of scrap books, score books and clippings, Base Ball Guides, bound volumes on varied sports, photographs and Homer Davenport's cartoons, old score books and photographs of early baseball nines.

Not only is the collection remarkable for its printed records and sources of information, but there is a large number of manuscript diaries, account and expense books, letters and memoranda about the early days of the game. This will be indispensable for anybody studying or writing about the history of baseball. Other sports are represented, notably cricket and football. The pictures of baseball nines of the 1860's and 1870's and the pictures of the typical players of such early years are especially curious, amusing, and valuable.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of August, 1921, the Library received as gifts a total of 2,048 volumes, 3,367 pamphlets, 66 maps and 6 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

From the Department of Foreign Affairs, Tokyo, Japan, came a collection of school maps, hydrographic maps, marine and air charts, and a catalogue of charts and sailing directions. From the University of Calcutta came 10 volumes of their publications. From the Colombian Government Information Bureau, New York City, came a miscellaneous collection of publications relating to Colombia (86 volumes and 93 pamphlets).

Mr. William Henry Humiston gave the Library an autograph letter of Edward Alexander MacDowell to Mr. Moebius, dated April 11, 1893, requesting his publisher to send to Paderewski, who had ordered some MacDowell pieces, complimentary copies of certain other compositions for the piano. From The New York Times came six copies of the "History of The New York Times, 1851-1921," by Elmer Davis, New York, 1921. From Mr. Artemus Ward, New York City, came a copy of "The life of Artemus Ward, the first Commander-in-chief of the American Revolution," by Charles Martyn, New York, 1921.

Mrs. Charles Howland Russell gave the Library a collection of books, pamphlets and documents, comprising 420 volumes, 346 pamphlets, 441 periodicals and 5 maps. From Mr. J. Krive came a miscellaneous collection of 153 volumes in English, French, German and Russian. From Mr. Michel V. Hatsos, Chicago, came 12 volumes and 8 pamphlets in Greek. Mr. George P. Rowell, Stamford, Conn., presented a copy of his typewritten notes on the Rowell Family, containing complete data of births, marriages and deaths from the earliest records in New Hampshire to 1850, compiled April 24, 1919.

The following gifts of prints were received: From Mr. Horace Brodzky, four of his wood-block prints; from Mr. Morton C. Hansen, Hartford, Conn., two of his wood-engravings; and from Mr. A. Garfield Learned, five of his etchings.

Recent gifts to the Music Division include a large and welcome addition to our stock of vocal music, presented to the Library by Mrs. Douglas Powell in memory of the late Mr. Douglas Powell. Mr. Powell, born in England in 1864, came to America about 1902, where he established an enviable reputation as a baritone singer. In his frequent professional tours he was associated with such artists as Mme. Melba, Van Dyck, Edouard de Reszke and Plançon. During a part of his career he was a choral conductor (Mount Eagle Festivals near Nashville, Tennessee,) and a teacher in Meadville, Pennsylvania, Houston, Texas, and, from 1908 to 1914, at the Cincinnati College of Music. He died in New York in May, 1921.

The gift includes about 200 bound and unbound volumes of songs and vocal scores of operas and oratorios; about 1,000 pieces of folio sheet music, songs by modern British and American composers, as well as by such classic composers as Brahms; and about 2,000 pieces of octavo sheet music, anthems and secular choruses.

Charles H. Ditson & Company gave the Library fifty-two bound volumes of their sheet music publications. The Schlesinger'sche Musikhandlung, Berlin, gave a collection of orchestra scores and instrumental and vocal compositions by Eugenio di Pirani (7 volumes and 56 pamphlets).

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN AUGUST, 1921

DURING the month of August, 1921, there were received at the Library, 11,145 volumes and 4,703 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 84,227. They consulted 196,412 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 201,347.

PROVENÇAL LITERATURE LIST

THE instalment of the List of References on Provençal Literature and Language is omitted this month because of the long, final instalment of the History of the Library. Publication of the List will be resumed next month.

Beck, Ernest G. Tank construction, relating principally to the design, manufacture and erection of tanks in mild steel. Manchester: Emmott & Co., Ltd., 1921. x, 265 p. illus. 8°. 12 s. 6 d. VDL (121)

Revision of a series of articles which appeared in the Mechanical world, 1916-1920. Covers materials, stresses, riveting, economy of form, and the design of rectangular and cylindrical tanks. No attempt has been made to treat in detail the steelwork or other construction for supporting elevated tanks. Author claims originality for the discussion regarding economy of form; the suggested method for staying the walls of rectangular tanks by means of horizontal rails; the investigation concerning the action and design of curbs and rails; the treatment for trough-bottomed rectangular tanks; methods for simplifying the design, manufacture and erection of the roofs, walls and floors of cylindrical tanks, and the treatment for dished bottoms of elevated cylindrical tanks. 178 well executed drawings.

Biddulph-Smith, Thomas. Coke-oven and by-product works chemistry. London: Charles Griffin & Co., Ltd., 1921. x, 180 p. illus. charts. 8°. 21 s. VOF (118)

Brings together a large amount of material hitherto scattered throughout the technical press. Covers analytical and testing methods in the various departments, including the ammonium sulphate and benzol recovery plants. There is also a chapter on calorimetry and pyrometry. Appendix I has the title "Some constituents of coal tar and their properties" — a translation from the German circulated privately by the Ministry of Munitions. Appendix II comprises various tables.

"For the chemist who has made up his mind to adopt certain tests and does not desire to waste his time with superfluous language, Mr. Biddulph Smith's book will be found ideal, for if it has been possible to cut out a word, without danger to the meaning, the author has done so. The result is a bare statement of the procedure of any test, it being taken for granted that the operator is an experienced chemist fully acquainted with the innumerable pitfalls of analytical work. As a reference book, the volume is all that can be desired, and, owing to its special character, we have no hesitation in prophesying a ready sale." — Colliery guardian, June 17, 1921.

Brodetsky, S. The mechanical principles of the aeroplane. London: J. & A. Churchill, 1921. vii, 272 p. diagrs. 8°. £1, 1 s. VDY (121)

Strictly theoretical treatment of motion in air, dynamics of the air, and of aeroplane motion, emphasizing the theory of dimensions, moving axes, and the hydrodynamics of a perfect fluid in two dimensions. Presupposes a knowledge of the calculus. Author is Reader in Applied Mathematics, University of Leeds.

"Aeronautics, in spite of the fact that as a science it is yet a child, has already acquired quite a voluminous library and literature, but, with very few exceptions, the books are intended preeminently for designers. The present volume is certainly not of that nature. It bears the clear imprint of the student textbook and is evidently intended as a guide to students of applied mathematics that they may recognize that in aeronautics and aerodynamics lies a fruitful field for theoretic investigation. In that the author has undoubtedly succeeded, but it does not follow, as we have striven to show, that he has himself produced a good treatment of the subject. As a book on a chapter of applied mathematics we believe it weak; as a book on mathematical problems suggested by aeronautics, it is excellent." — Engineering, Aug. 5, 1921.

"It is an extraordinary fact that only about ninety years ago the jute industry, which now ranks second in importance to cotton as a raw material of British manufacture, was practically non-existent." — Page 1.

Development of the industry is briefly traced; cultivation and qualities of the fibre discussed; and preparation and manufacture described in detail. 70 illustrations.

Developments during and since the war have necessitated a thorough revision of this useful handbook — especially the chapters on instruments and engines. There is a new section on the International Air Laws.

Popular and practical, this book is the result of a wide range of experience with various types of outfits. Written expressly for the amateur. First chapter introduces the essential electrical facts.

Dana, Richard T. Handbook of construction equipment, its cost and use. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Company, Inc., 1921. xv, 849 p. illus. 12°. $6.00. Desk (121)

This book with its dictionary arrangement will appeal to the man who buys, sells or has use for engineering equipment. It is virtually a new edition of the author's Handbook of construction plant, published in 1914, a considerable amount of obsolete material having been replaced and all prices revised as of 1920. Descriptions of apparatus and operation are unusually complete for so compact a work. Included is a classified list of manufacturers and dealers.

"Métallurgists and metallographists have only recently been impressed with the fact that various impurities and addition agents may affect the properties of finished steel far in excess of that expected by their apparent amount. Precise data along these lines are almost entirely lacking; therefore Dr. Giolitti's present book, containing the first systematic discussion of their effect on commercial heat treatment, should prove a powerful stimulus toward their study; proving as he does the tremendous advantages to be gained by their elimination or suppression. Especially respectful attention will be given by those who have been baffled by so-called 'flakes' and 'woody fractures'—a disease of metals well understood and under control in the Italian works managed by the author..."—Translator's preface.

Morecroft, John Harold. Principles of radio communication. New York: John Wiley and Sons, Inc., 1921. x, 935 p. illus. 8°. cloth. $7.50 net. TTF (121)

Complete and up-to-date work, by the Associate Professor of Electrical Engineering, Columbia University, on the theory and practice of wireless telephony and telegraphy. Intended for students well grounded in the elements of electricity.

Explains the fundamental ideas and laws; laws of oscillating circuits; spark and continuous-wave telegraphy; vacuum tubes; radio-telephony; antennae and radiation; wavemeters and their use; amplifiers.

"Practically all the theoretical deductions are substantiated by experimental data, much of which has been obtained in the author's laboratory. Also incorporated is a short course of elementary experiments which may well be carried out by electrical engineering students, especially interested in radio."—Preface.

"Search has not revealed any work now in print published in this country which endeavors to deal with laboratories in a manner calculated to bring a building committee, a professorial staff and their architect on common ground for what is essentially a joint undertaking. In so large a field limitations have to be decided upon, and these pages are confined to the construction of buildings and fittings for what may be termed educational science as contrasted with technical and workshop requirements. After some general remarks on initiating schemes, an attempt has been made to deal with the specific requirements of chemistry, physics, biology, and geology. This is followed by descriptions and illustrations of some recent designs of various magnitudes."—Preface.

Patterson, Austin M. A French-English dictionary for chemists. New York: John Wiley & Sons, Inc., 1921. xvii, 384 p. 12°. $3.00. Desk (118)

"This book fills a long-felt demand for a companion volume to the same author's German-English dictionary for chemists, which has proved useful to many chemists both here and abroad. In the new work the plan of the earlier book is followed. A list of abbreviations is given, together with an introduction and a valuable article on "The conjugation of French verbs." Standard works of reference have been carefully studied by the author, and opinions have been obtained from several experts in the endeavor to produce a book of value, and there can be no question of the fact that this book will assist the research man to get at facts in original text which might otherwise elude him."—American dyestuff reporter, June 6, 1921.

A practical book by men of experience in the United States Navy. It covers the necessary mathematics for the beginner. Traces the development of the steam engine, and explains boilers, piping, valves, pumps, lubricants and lubrication, the steam turbine and gas engines. 100 questions and answers on recip-

Riegel, Robert. Merchant vessels. New York: D. Appleton & Co., 1921. xvi, 257 p. illus. 8°. $3.00. VXH (121)

Designed to give shippers, vessel owners, ship operators, and students of ocean transportation a general idea of the relative efficiencies and economic significance of the various types of ships, their propulsion, materials of construction, structural features, and engines. Part 2 deals fully with the rules of measurement, including a chapter on safety regulations. 69 illustrations and several reading lists. Translation, with some revision, of the 2nd German edition (3rd German edition was published this year).

"No book on metallurgy covers the ground so thoroughly as this volume... Here processes used all over the world are described in considerable detail, though European practice is given most prominence... To American metallurgists who are looking for a good treatise on current practice, the book will be a big disappointment, for practically nothing which has appeared in the last eight or ten years—and a great deal has happened—is mentioned... The advisability of publishing this book without bringing it up to date is open to question."—Engineering and mining journal, June 18, 1921.

Although based upon the author's experiences in military mining, the book is full of suggestions for those in the industrial field. Treats of mine rescue schools, training of personnel, self-contained breathing apparatus, testing and repairing, characteristic gases in military mining, resuscitation, rescue work in the trenches, care of mice and canaries. Deals with the Proto, Salvos, and Novita apparatus only. Brief bibliography of important titles.

"The book generally is free from military jargon, and civilian readers will have no difficulty in following the text."—Mining magazine, June, 1921.

TON (121)

Apparently this is not a revision of the author's Motor body-building published in 1914. It is regrettable that the physical make-up of the new book is inferior to that of the older, with its more attractive size, and better paper. The work, however, is up-to-date, covering the preparation of drawings; constructional details of various types of bodies, including those of omnibuses and taxicabs; windscreens; machinery required; painting, trimming and specifications. Thirty-eight illustrations and drawings, including a folding plan for a charabanc designed to carry 30 persons.

PKB (118)

"Not only a very convenient book of reference for chemists, but will appeal to general readers who desire to learn the main characteristics and achievements of some of the great men — from Boyle to Ramsay — who have built up the science of chemistry... Every chemist will find some new facts in this book, and will be pleased to see the old facts so skilfully arranged. Sir William Tilden has made excellent use of his materials, and every picture leaves a brilliant impression on the mind; he brings out the environment in which his heroes worked, and the stimulus they gave to their contemporaries." — Harold B. Dixon in the Journal of the Society of Chemical Industry, June 30, 1921.

Turner, L. B. Wireless telegraphy and telephony, an outline for electrical engineers and others. Cambridge [England]: University Press, 1921. x, 195 p. illus. 8°. £1.

Designed to meet the requirements of a large class of readers occupying an intermediate position between the operator and the wireless specialist, i. e.: that of the electrical engineer who is familiar with electrical theory and mathematics, but who has never studied this particular branch of the subject.

"The book pays the reader the compliment of assuming that he is as well up in the theory of his work as the author in his, and many of the arguments in the analytical portion are condensed and by no means easy to follow. The author sets the pace over a country he knows well, but the reader may find himself forced to stop and think hard at many passages that he is evidently expected to take in his stride. This is perhaps no drawback, but rather the reverse and the book well repays the close attention it demands... It is admirably produced with excellent plates and clear diagrams, and is a valuable addition to the technical library..." — R. Chenevix-Trench in The Royal Engineers journal, April, 1921.

VGI (121)

"Books on transformers are few and far between, and there has really been no modern up-to-date book on this subject known to all. If ever a book filled a badly felt gap, therefore, it is Vidmar's work on transformers. The author's name is well known to electrical engineers because of a great many practical articles by him which appeared in Austrian and German electrical papers. He is one of a few gifted men who know how to explain in simple words or equations the most intricate physical problems which the designer of electrical apparatus has to face in his daily work. It is a safe assumption that this book would become the companion of every transformer designer if an English translation of it were available." — Electrical world, Aug. 13, 1921.

VDT (121)

Traces the development of flight from the legendary period to the present time. There are chapters covering the war period, and the after war development, with emphasis on the progress in design. Sections are devoted to air ships and to engine development, and there is a short bibliography of aeronautics. Adapted to the understanding of the general reader.

Desk (121)

"The fact that this book has now gone into its fourth edition proves that it is having wide use. The latest edition is brought up to March 1, 1921, and contains matter of recent interest. The past three or four years, as the author well states, have played havoc with all cost estimates so that it is more than ever necessary to have revisions of such works as this. It is doubtful whether any revision could fully take care of the revolution in prices we have just gone through, but as Mr. Walker has in most cases included base rates the figures which he gives still have great use." — Engineering news-record, June 16, 1921.

Clearly written and well-diagrammed work for the advanced student and electrical engineer. Emphasis is laid on static electricity; properties of magnetic shells; Ampere's theorems of the equivalence of electric circuits and magnetic shells; transient currents; alternating-current problems by means of complex quantities; and the relationship between electrostatic, electromagnetic, and practical units. The volume is written from an engineer's point of view, and some knowledge of elementary calculus is necessary.

"The director of the Albertina... a rare and happy combination of scholarly historian of art and collecting amateur, in this handbook considers the aesthetic, the historical and the technical aspects... The first part of the book deals with the media of drawing... In the second part the development of the artist is traced... In the third the author considers his subject as an empirical esthetician... The fourth part has additions of practical value, a history of collecting, a section on forgeries, information regarding signatures; watermarks, and the restoring and mounting of drawings... The immense material is ordered in masterly manner, and made clear by word and by carefully selected illustrations." — Max J. Friedländer, in Kunst und Künstler, March, 1921, p. 229.

"Deals with representation in an entirely new but intensely practical manner. A clear but concise statement of the best methods in drawing from the point of utility... A panoramic view of art of the various fields in which a commercial artist is required... Pencil, pen and brush technique are well explained... the pencil which gives the best result, the results of using various kinds of paper... Since pen technique is hard to learn, the author goes into great detail in an effort to assist the beginner to form correct habits... A brief description of the engraver's problems, with clear illustrations of how improperly drawn lines will appear when reproduced... We are continually being reminded that only practice will make perfect. This book is designed for beginners who have talent." — Evening Post, March 19, 1921.

REFERENCE BOOKS

Annuaire des ventes de livres; guide du bibliophile et du libraire; publié par Léo Delteil; 1^{re} année (octobre 1918 - juillet 1920). Paris: À L'Agence Général de Librairie et de Publications [1921]. 421 p. 8°.

A new annual of French book auction records. Outside of two or three sporadic attempts, no guides to the current values of French books have been published and unless the books have been sold at auction in the United States, England or Germany, none can be established. The work is well executed and gives a rather fuller physical description of the books than the American or English auction records. Author alphabetical arrangement. Leo Delteil, the editor, has recently attempted a similar venture, an annual giving print auction records.

Artschwager, Ernst, and EDWINA M. SMILEY. Dictionary of botanical equivalents; French-English, German-English. Baltimore: Williams & Wilkins Co. [1921.] 137 p. 12°.

Translation of technical botanical terms not commonly found in dictionaries. "List of plant names includes important economic plants, form weeds, and the Latin equivalents for the larger plant groups." Does not aim at complete compilation. German section which is by far the largest portion of the book, is based on Schneider's Illustriertes Handwörterbuch der Botanik. Only 15 of the 137 pages in the book are devoted to French terms.

The Buffalo Foundation, compiler. Social service directory of Erie county; first edition January, 1921. Buffalo: The Buffalo Foundation, 1921. 206 p. 12°.

Includes all agencies, official and voluntary, state and federal, schools and churches, in the county which contains the city of Buffalo, with addresses, officials, and considerable information concerning their history, organization and function.

Graham, Bessie. The bookman's manual; a guide to literature. New York: R. R. Bowker Co., 1921. 434 p. 8°.

Consists of material expanded from a course of lessons on book salesmanship given at Philadelphia and is reprinted from chapters which appeared serially in the Publishers' weekly. Intended as a summary of the best books in most fields of general knowledge and literature. Intended for booksellers, but contains some material of interest to librarians, particularly the information and comments about modern American novelists, poets, dramatists, and about editions of the classics. Weak in some departments: e. g. gives no space at all to Italian, Spanish, Scandinavian, or Dutch literature. Arranged in classified chapters with systematic presentation of material. Indexed.

Great Britain. — Naval Intelligence Division. A manual of Netherland India (Dutch East Indies). Compiled by the Geographical Section of the Naval Intelligence Division, Naval Staff Admiralty. London: His Majesty's Stationery Office [1920], 548 p. 8°. (I. D. 1209.)

Encyclopedic information in condensed form about the Dutch East Indies. Similar in treatment to Statesmen's year book, but, of course, much fuller. Topography, climate, administration, health, history, agriculture and industries are all included. Indexed.

Handbook of local government for England and Wales, prepared for the use of councillors; with special sections on matters of immediate importance... London: Labour Party [and] George Allen and Unwin, 1920. 265 p. 12°.

A systematic treatment in encyclopedic form of the organization and powers of local government in England, with emphasis on what may be termed the public welfare side. Directory of the Labor Party offices and officers. Bibliography. Not indexed.

Haynes, Edwin, compiler and editor. Timber technicalities; being definitions of terms used in the home and foreign timbers, mahogany and hardwood industries, the sawmill and wood-working trades, as well as those employed in connection with architecture and building construction. London: William Rider and Son, Ltd. [1921.] 191 p. 12°.

A useful glossary of terms used in the description of timber, timber working and building. Commercial and shipping terms also included. Additional features are: a bibliography of timber; contractions and abbreviations in use in commerce; tables showing the gain in freight on planed wood; the actual measurement compared with the nominal; approximate weight per cubic foot of English and official weights of American hardwood lumber; and a glossary of terms in five foreign languages.

par auteurs et par pièces. Paris: Plon-Nourrit et Cie., 1921. 138 p., 3 l. 8°.

Gives a list of authors whose plays have been presented at the Comédie-Française, the number of times each was produced, and the year. The second section of the work gives a table of presumed authors, collaborators, etc., and the third an alphabetical list of the plays produced during this period. First edition extended only to 1900.

MacCába, Alasdair (Alexander MacCabe), editor. Leabhar na hÉireann. The Irish year book and world directory. Dublin: The Kenng Press, 1921. 160 p. 12°.

Reappearance in new form of the first Leabhar na hÉireann which ceased publication. Contents consist chiefly of short signed articles on different phases of Irish art, industry, literature, education, and government. Strongly nationalist in treatment. The world directory feature contains little that cannot be found in an ordinary almanac.

Recke, W., and A. M. WAGNER. Bücherkunde zur Geschichte und Literatur des Königreichs Polen. Leipzig: Verlag der deutschen Staatsdruckereien in Polen, Warschau, 1918. 242 p. 8°.

For German speaking and reading investigators of Polish history, literature, and spiritual life. Intended to supplement the work of Von Finkel and Estreicher. Preponderance of references are modern. Classified arrangement including headings on general works, political history, state development, finance, law, church, industries, and literature by periods. There is an index to authors.

Thorpe, A. Winton, editor. Burke's handbook to the most excellent Order of the British Empire containing biographies, a full list of persons appointed to the order, showing their relative precedence, and coloured plates of the insignia. London: The Burke Publishing Company, Ltd., 1921. 704 p. 4°.

Biographies of a large proportion of the knights, commanders, officers and members of the Order of the British Empire, a new order founded in 1917 primarily to reward the non-combatant war worker for distinguished service. It also includes a military branch. Since the membership of the order totals 25,419 and since it is democratic in inception and includes women as well as men, the work forms a useful biographical supplement to Who's Who.

The Times of Ceylon green book; a directory of Ceylon, 1921. Colombo, Ceylon: The Times of Ceylon, Ltd., 1921. 800 p. 12°.

This first issue of what is planned as an annual publication is more than a directory, since it includes besides the directory feature general information, institutions and clubs, and a necrology. Additional information is planned for succeeding numbers. The directory is classified to include the official and professional classes, mercantile occupations, estates and companies, men's section, ladies' section, and foreign section. Indexed.

Williams, Reginald G. A manual of book selection for the librarian and book lover. London: Grafton & Co., 1920. 132 p. 8°.

A text-book of book selection. Chiefly useful for assistants desiring promotion through examination or students who wish to familiarize themselves with the elementary aids to book selection in the various fields of knowledge. The methods of classifying and recording purchases given might also be of use to the librarian of a small library. References are almost entirely to British works.

win John Dingle. Containing 25 bi-lingual maps, with complete indexes, and many colored graphs. Compiled and translated from the latest and most authoritative surveys and records by the staff of The Far Eastern Geographical Establishment. Shanghai, China: The North-China Daily News & Herald, Ltd. [1918?] 2. ed. f°.

Map Room

An expensive but useful work with fairly recent statistics giving the commercial resources and trade of the Chinese Republic. The most useful feature, perhaps, is the maps, of which there are twenty-five, showing products, forests, railways, canals, etc., by province. The Chinese equivalent of the English place names are given in the text. Comparatively recent prices are given (1916). Tables of exports and imports by region. Indexed by place and by product. The graphs show aspects of China's trade. A special section is devoted to the principal commodities of the world's commerce with reference to China's needs and production. The appendixes contain information useful in transacting business with China.

NUMBER 10

AN EARLY NEWSPAPER OF ALEXANDRIA, VA.

BY NELSON NICHOLS

THE Library has received a good file of the scarce newspaper of Alexandria, Virginia, The Columbian Mirror and Alexandria Gazette. It covers all but the last four of the fifteen final months of Washington's administration. It was a tri-weekly issued Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, and began publication early in 1793. The printer and publisher was Ellis Price "at the East End of the Market-House."

It will be remembered that the seat of government for the United States was then in Philadelphia. The capital of the nation was not established on the Potomac River until 1800. Alexandria, however, was an important town of the Potomac valley in 1795-96. The streets of the town had been laid out on the plan of Philadelphia, anticipating an important future growth. Navigation was opened up the Potomac, past Mount Vernon, the home of General Washington, to Alexandria; and immediately the town began to grow. Jedidiah Morse said, in his American Gazetteer published in 1797, that Alexandria contained about 400 houses, many handsomely built, and a population of 2,748. He added that "in consequence of its vicinity to the future seat of the federal government, [it] bids fair to be one of the most thriving commercial places on the continent." Alexandria became a part of the District of Columbia upon its organization, though many years later it was returned to the State of Virginia from which it had been detached.

Across the Potomac, a little farther up, was the village of Georgetown, Maryland. This village was not named for George Washington, but for King George II. of England. In 1797 it was about half the size of Alexandria, though the Catholic college, now Georgetown University, was already established there. This village also became a part of the District of Columbia. Between the two towns, there grew up later the important city of Washington.

About eight miles down the river from Alexandria was Mount Vernon, the home of the gentleman who at the time of the publication of these newspapers was away, resident in the city of Philadelphia, and serving his seventh and eighth years as President of the United States. Later the seat of this government was to be removed to a short distance from his plantation, a matter of a two hours' sail up the river, or a quicker horseback ride through Alexandria to the shore opposite the capital. Naturally, Alexandria's newspaper publisher realized the importance of his position. The columns of the paper reflect this knowledge. President Washington not only received the paper, but he advertised in its columns.

This acquisition gives the Library most of the numbers of the paper from Dec. 10, 1795 to Nov. 12, 1796, volume 4, whole no. 416 to volume 4, whole no. 562. In its columns are some unusually interesting items. Among them are the following:

- Dec. 10, 1795. 4th of July oration of 1795 delivered by Morgan J. Rhees at Grenville, "Headquarters of the Western Army, North West of the Ohio."
- Dec. 10, and later nos. Advertisements of large tracts of land for sale south of the River Ohio.
- Dec. 12. A short address of President Washington, dated Dec. 8.
- Dec. 17. An address of Vice President Adams as President of the Senate to President Washington, and the reply of the President.
- Dec. 19. Debate in the Senate on the answer to the President's speech in which Senator Butler criticized President Washington for changing his mind.
- Dec. 19. A long article on the shooting at King George III.
- Dec. 19. Advertisement of The Gentleman's Political Almanack, for 1796, "ornamented with a head of General Washington." This almanac is not in N. Y. P. L. nor in Morrison's L. C. List.
- Dec. 22. Advertisement of apple trees for sale by John Ehlers of Mt. Vernon, Gardener to the President. The varieties were Golden Pippin, Newtown Pippin, Gloucester White, Spitzonberg, Vandever, Golden Rennet, Red Rennet, Summer Pearmain, Winter Pearmain, Early White, Red Summer, Cat Head, Red Streaks, Green, Large White, House and Sweed.

- Jan. 2 & 5, 1796. Long letter to the French Legation at Philadelphia, by Joseph Fauchet, "Minister Plenipotentiary of the French Republic, near the United States," with reference to western troubles and discontent against the administration of Washington.
- Jan. 12. List of the directors of the Mutual Assurance Co., at Richmond; Dr. Wm. Foushee, President, and Bushrod Washington, Jacob I. Cohen, Robert Bolling and John Peyton being on the list of directors.
- Jan. 12. Poem by Benjamin Franklin, Epitaph on a squirrel killed by a dog.
- Jan. 12. Advertisement of a valuable mill-seat for sale on the "river Potomak" in Loudoun Co., 35 miles from Washington, by Burgess Ball, a relative of President Washington.
- Jan. 28. Advertisement of Thacker Washington of King George County of full blooded horses and "likely" negroes for sale.
- Feb. 2. Advertisement of John Callender intending to open a school in Alexandria to teach church-music.
- Feb. 2. "Madame de la Fayette has reached Vienna with her two daughters. She has obtained the emperor's permission to reside with her husband; and did not lose a moment in setting out for the fortress in which he is confined."
- Feb. 2. Verses — Written by a Lady (reprinted from Virginia Gazette):
- Casca, thou vain concerted elf,
Thy fustian trash may please theyself;
We know false patriots from true,
Excuse us then for lashing you.
- When Casca 'nd all such friends are rotten,
Their bambast and abuse forgotten,
Columbia will bless her fav'rite son,
And boast his name is Washington.
- Feb. 11. Stanzas on the birth-day of the President. Written in 1792. Author not given.
- Feb. 20. An advertisement by George Washington, two and a half columns in length, dated from Philadelphia, Feb. 1st, of 4 farms adjoining his Mansion House Farm at Mount Vernon to let for terms of 14 years to "real Farmers of good reputation." They are called the River Farm, the Union Farm, the Dogue-Run Farm and the Muddy Hole. Possession is given in the Autumn. And there is also a list of lands General Washington would sell, on the Ohio River, on the Great Kanhawa River, on the Little Miami River and on the Rough Branch of the Green River, Kentucky. This advertisement was continued in later issues.

- March 1. The answer made by President Washington to the Committee from the House of Representatives asking for an official copy of the Indian treaty.
- March 3. An address of three and a half columns, of the Governor of Georgia to the Georgia Legislature.
- March 3. Advertisement to capture a negro named Burr who ran away from his owner, Spencer Grayson, Jr., of Colchester.
- March 3. Advertisement of Philip Fitzhugh of Marmion, King George's Co., Va., who has land on the Potomack River for sale.
- March 8. Proclamation by President Washington announcing his ratification of the treaty with Great Britain.
- March 10. At the head of the 1st column is this advertisement:
 I intend to leave the State for a few months.
 March 8. JAMES WILSON.
- March 12. A bill before the Georgia Legislature declaring null and void a certain usurped act passed by the last Legislature on the western lands.
- March 17. Copy of the Treaty with Algiers.
- March 22. Letters of the seizing of sailors from American ships by British captains.
- March 26. A letter on the same subject signed by masters of American vessels at anchor at Port Jeremie, Hispaniola, on Feb. 11th.
- March 26. The Disappointment, a poem on the Irish and the Sons of Tammany, by Murtough O'Pindar.
- March 29. Advertisement of Hening's The New Virginia Justice, just published.
- March 29. Poem on Georgia Lands, satirical of General Jackson.
- April 2. Advertisement of Bushrod Washington of the U. S. Supreme Court, and nephew of the President, to sell his estate, Bushfield in Westmoreland County; also a house and two acres in Richmond.
- April 5. A letter a column in length from President Washington to the House of Representatives refusing to give the House a copy of his instructions and papers on the treaty with Great Britain, requested by the House. Letter dated March 30.
- April 7. Letter of President Washington to the House of Representatives accompanying a copy of the treaty with Spain.
- April 9. News from London of the discovery of Shakespeare original manuscripts, Lear, and an unknown play Vortigern and Rowena, also a love letter to Anne Hathaway and others. [These were the Ireland forgeries.]

- April 9. Report of the vote on Wilberforce's motion in Parliament to abolish the slave trade: 93 for and 67 against.
- April 14. Resolution passed by the House of Representatives 57 to 37 against President Washington declaring the right of the House to consider treaty stipulations on subjects constitutionally within the power of Congress to deliberate upon.
- April 14. Article on the French colonists in St. Domingo that "have retired to the United States to avoid the dangers of war."
- April 16. Rules to be observed by American vessels in the Harbor of Setubal, Portugal.
- April 16. List of 20 American prisoners on board the British ship Severn.
- April 19. Advertisement of "Proposals for publishing by subscription the miscellaneous poems, theatrical pieces, &c. &c. written by Christopher Charles M'Grath, comedian." This was to be printed by Thomas Thornton of Dumfries, Va. No copy of this book has been located by the Library's Bibliographer. It may not have been published.
- April 30. Advertisement by Alice Wilson, Administratrix, of the sale of the printing office of the late Thomas Wilson of the City of Washington. Thomas Wilson established the first newspaper in Washington, beginning his Impartial Observer, and Washington Advertiser, May 22, 1795. He died February 22, 1796. A notice of his death appears in the Columbian Mirror and Alexandria Gazette of March 1st. Not until after Wilson's death was there any other newspaper established in Washington.
- April 30. A poem, The Jockey Club; or, a dissertation on jockeyship; by Ch. C. M'Grath.
- May 12. Marble bust of George Washington ordered by the Virginia Legislature from France was received in Richmond May 2d.
- May 17. A column letter on affairs in St. Domingo with reference to Toussaint Louverture.
- May 21. Members of the Constitutional Thinking Club are commanded to meet at the Cooper's Arms on the following Monday evening. "Those thinkers who may not have the good fortune to have been born Deaf and Dumb, and who consequently may have the treasonable infirmity of exercising the faculty of speech, . . . may be accomodated with Constitutional Muzzles at the door. The first question to be thought of is — 'How long shall we be permitted to think?' Dumb Waiters are provided."
- May 26. Reference to a work lately published in Germany under the title, Quelques Reflections sur les Fugitifs Francais, by M. Marchena. It "produced a very considerable sensation." It refers to Lafayette and his family in prison in Vienna, and that they "find the same horrors in Germany, which they suffered under the irons of the Jacobins in France."

- June 7. Quarantine proclamation by Governor Brooke of Virginia in view of the Yellow Fever in the West Indies.
- June 9. Apparently the whereabouts of all the Washingtons were not known, as among the letters not called for at the Alexandria Post Office were Edward Washington, Nathaniel Washington and two for William H. Washington. There was also one for Henry Lee and one for William Lee and other well known family names.
- June 9. Advertisement of the Washington Canal Lottery to raise money to cut a canal through the City of Washington from the Potomac to the Eastern Branch Harbour.
- June 18. Report of the evacuation at Niagara by the British garrisons, and the rapid development of the new British seat of government at York (now Toronto).
- June 18. Details of the capture of the American ship Mount Vernon by the French schooner Flying Fish off Cape Henlopen.
- June 18. Poem on the death of Major André.
- June 21. Article against the North Carolina Quakers who opposed slavery. The "runaways are protected, encouraged, and harbored by them!"
- June 30. Proclamation by President Washington suspending for a time certain articles of the building laws of Washington City to enable cheaper buildings to be erected.
- July 30. Lund Washington of Norfolk advertises for securing Jacob Taylor a runaway apprentice who probably went to sea in the Brigantine Nancy.
- Aug. 9. News of the occupation of the western posts by the withdrawal of the British forces July 13 in accord with the treaty. Comments by the editor praising the President, Jay and others, "and not one drop of blood shed."
- Aug. 13. Advertisement of choice Rhode Island cheeses for sale. This is an interesting fact in the history of American cheese making, as the Central New York industry, that for nearly a century led the market, was supposed to have been carried there by Rhode Island settlers prior to 1800.
- Aug. 16. "The exports of Cheese from the United States, in five years, have risen from Two Thousand Pounds Weight, to Two Millions. Mass. Pap."
- Aug. 25. Letter giving an account of the American occupation of Fort Ontario, or Oswego, July 14th.
- Aug. 25. Death of William Throckmorton, a printer, of Charleston, S. C., Aug. 3rd. He had formerly lived in the Virginia towns of Winchester, Richmond, Alexandria, and Staunton.

- Sept. 8. Leven Powell as Representative of the Counties of Loudoun and Fauquier has a column of extracts from his circular letter to the Freeholders, in which he declares for the election of President Washington to a third term, and discusses the merits of John Adams, Jefferson, Patrick Henry and Pinckney of South Carolina for the Vice Presidency.
- Sept. 20. Albert Russell gives his reasons for his support of Washington and Jefferson for President and Vice President in the coming election, in which he declares himself a candidate for the office of Elector for the Counties of Loudoun and Fauquier.
- Sept. 24. George Washington's letter in ten columns declining re-election to the Presidency, his Farewell Address to the American people.
- Oct. 1. Another letter from Leven Powell, candidate for Presidential Elector, in which he gives his preference for John Adams over Jefferson, Henry and Pinckney.
- Oct. 18. A seven column letter from Daniel C. Brent of Dumfries, Va., a candidate for the office of Presidential Elector, giving his reasons for supporting Thomas Jefferson.
- Oct. 25. John Taylor of Caroline says, in announcing his candidacy for Presidential Elector, that he is unfriendly to the chief measures of Washington's administration. "My wish is to see the government placed in the hands of administrators, who will bring it back to the republican ground, from which it has widely wandered."
- Oct. 29. Two articles on Madame La Fayette staying with her husband in the prison of Olmutz in Austria.
- Nov. 12. Daniel C. Brent and Leven Powell were two of Virginia's Presidential electors chosen at the election.

MERYON'S PARIS

CHARLES MERYON was born on November 23rd, 1821. The tendency toward centenary celebrations forms a sufficient peg on which to hang the Prints Division's first exhibition of this artist's work. The bulk of the exhibition, which will be on view in the Print Gallery during November, is drawn from the Meryon portfolios in the S. P. Avery Collection, that never-failing reservoir of French 19th century prints. To this have been added a number of drawings and early states of etchings, kindly lent by various collectors.

It is usual, in memorial shows of this kind, to aim at relative completeness. That is natural. It reflects the satisfaction of the collector — private or institutional — over possession of an artist's complete or nearly complete work. And it is precisely such collecting spirit that has preserved for us many works of the past. On the other hand, it is evident that an artist is not always at his best, and that certain prints in his œuvre will have mainly the documentary value of milestones in development. Some may even indicate passing fancies — aberrations even — prints either not intended for publication, or prints which were better unpublished. That not infrequently appears when an artist has used the copper etching-plate as one would a sketch-block.

In the present case, it is a happy circumstance that, as the prints are arranged according to Delteil's catalogue, the Paris plates, on which the fame of Meryon is based, are brought together on the wall. Thus, the average art-lover can easily limit himself to these, while the special student has the whole production of the famous and erratic Frenchman before him.

It would be obviously easy, and rather tempting, to expatiate again on this striking instance of posthumous fame. Meryon's life of disappointment, neglect and insanity has stirred the pens of Hamerton, Wedmore, and not a few others, who noted that not even the warm appreciation of Baudelaire nor the grandiloquence of Victor Hugo could make him a prophet in his own country and time.

It is more profitable, perhaps, to point out that when we eliminate all of Meryon's wild vagaries which thrust themselves into some of his Paris views, those views remain eminently sane records of a Paris he loved and felt. It was a Paris that was disappearing under the leveling city-planning of Baron Haussmann. So these prints have the added strong local interest.

To the lover of prints these weird and beautiful plates offer a poetical embodiment of a Paris seen through an original and impressive personality, who was passionately devoted to this, his favorite subject. It all forms a most notable chapter in the record of the French "revival" of painter-etching in the nineteenth century.

THE FRANKLIN PORTRAIT

THE Franklin portrait, a copy of which is reproduced as frontispiece in this number of the Bulletin, is now in the Main Exhibition Room. As Franklin founded the Pennsylvania Hospital, the first hospital in America, it seems appropriate to include his portrait in an exhibition held to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the foundation of the Society of the New York Hospital.

The letter from John Bigelow to the Trustees of The New York Public Library, dated May 13, 1908, accompanying his gift of the portrait said in part:

"The portrait. . . was painted by Joseph Siffred Duplessis for Franklin in 1783, and by Franklin presented to M. Louis Le Veillard, who during Franklin's residence in Paris was the Mayor of Passy, one of Franklin's most intimate friends and his constant competitor at the Chess Board. He became, doubtless under Franklin's tuition, an ardent Republican, and when Franklin returned to America, M. Le Veillard accompanied him thither for a short visit. On his return the French Revolution was raging in its lurid fury. He was soon required to expiate the crime of having been a public officer under the Bourbon régime and was guillotined.

"The portrait is a pastel, and though finished a full century and a quarter ago, has been pronounced by the late Mr. Champney, our own most successful pastel painter, as giving no sign or evidence of deterioration of any sort from the lapse of time — a commendation which perhaps has never been paid to any oil painting upon canvas of equal age without reparation. On the back will be found a memorandum in French, which I presume was inscribed there by Le Veillard or by a member of his family, of which the following is a translation:

'Benjamin Franklin in his 77th year, painted in 1783 by Duplessis, 'presented by Franklin himself to M. Louis Le Veillard, Gentleman in 'Ordinary of the Queen, his friend and his neighbor at Passy.'

"Following these lines is this citation from Les Trois Siècles de la Peinture de la France, par Gault de St. Germain — 1808:

'Joseph Siffred Duplessis, Academician, born at Charpentray, was 'distinguished by a beautiful intelligence, by his effects of light on flesh 'and accessories, by a free pencil, much feeling and correct coloring. The 'personages of distinction in his portraits are posed with nobility and in well 'selected attitudes. He painted the portrait of Louis XVI, the portraits of 'M. and Mme. Necker, and of many of the grandees of the court.'

"As I was about leaving France in 1867 I was so fortunate as to ascertain the hiding place of the original manuscript of Franklin's Autobiography, the name and address of its proprietor, M. de Senarmont, who was a member of the Le Veillard family by marriage, and thus the heir and proprietor not only of the Autobiography but of this portrait together with some letters of Franklin and of other members of Franklin's family. Finding M. de Senarmont and the others whom he represented willing to part with these memorials for a consideration, I felt it both a privilege and a duty to restore them to the country they most honor."

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of September, 1921, the Library received as gifts 1,709 volumes, 4,964 pamphlets, 284 maps, and three prints. Some of the more interesting and important of these gifts were the following:

Mr. David B. Ogden gave an unbound file of the New York Times, running from August, 1914, to April, 1921. This came at a particularly opportune moment, as the Library was about to begin treating the file of the Times for this period with tissue paper for preservation. The gift of unbound issues obviated the necessity of breaking out of their bindings volumes from the Library's duplicate stock or from the office of the Times — which would have meant lessened strength for the paper stock when rebound. Future students of this period will have Mr. Ogden to thank for providing papers in such good condition, as well as Mr. Ochs of the Times for furnishing the funds for the preservation treatment.

From the New York City Art Commission came 42 copies of Volume two of the "Catalogue of the Works of Art belonging to the City of New York," New York, 1920. From Mr. L. F. Alfau came 117 volumes of Spanish and French law books. From the Chile-American Association came 17 volumes and 25 pamphlets relating to Chile.

Mrs. Alfred Wheat gave the Library a collection of 29 volumes, 2 pamphlets, 134 pieces of folio sheet music, and 40 pieces of octavo sheet music. Mrs. A. J. Fisher gave a collection of 138 volumes, 28 pamphlets, and 357 pieces of sheet music. Mrs. William P. Northrup gave a large collection of mounted photographs, including views of Spain, paintings by Raphael, Murillo, Titian, etc.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN SEPTEMBER, 1921

DURING the month of September, 1921, there were received at the Library 21,250 volumes and 5,614 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 85,148. They consulted 198,098 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 224,929.

A LIST OF REFERENCES IN THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

COMPILED BY DANIEL C. HASKELL

The material listed here represents a fairly good collection of books for the student of either the old Provençal or the modern revival. More than ordinary interest attaches to the modern books because they came to the Library by gift from Mrs. Thomas A. Janvier, who added to her enthusiasm as a book collector the advantages of an intimate knowledge of the country and the people gleaned from frequent visits and from an extensive acquaintance with the leaders in the literary movement. Besides the printed books there came from Mrs. Janvier eleven letters from Félix Gras, Gaston Jourdanne, Mistral, and Jules Ronjat.

*Allen, Richard William. The air supply to boiler rooms of modern ships of war. London: Charles Griffin & Co., Ltd., 1921. [2. ed.] 149 p. 4°. £2.20. VXHG (121)

Presents data resulting from research work on design, construction, arrangement, and testing methods; on the installation of fans, deflectors, deck intakes, cowls, weather flaps, etc. Excellently printed and finely illustrated. Contains information which, for military reasons, was suppressed in the previous edition (1916). It is a volume of new ideas pertaining to a subject that has been neglected. The last few chapters relate to the calorific value of oil fuels, the air required for their combustion and various calculations.

"We never read a book of this kind without experiencing an uneasy feeling that we are surrounded by all sorts of things that want reforming, and could be reformed — just as the air supply to boiler-rooms is being reformed — if someone would perform the office that Mr. Richard Allen has performed and point them out to us." — Engineer, July 22, 1921.

*Broodbank, Sir Joseph. History of the port of London. London: Daniel O'Connor, 1921. 2 v. illus. 8°. £3, 3 s.

VDNA (Stack 3)

Traces the development and general progress of foreign trade from the Saxon period until the present time. Brief accounts are given of the careers of the various organizations that constitute the port. The volumes are attractively finished, containing 76 full-page illustrations and 3 large maps. The author, chairman of the Dock and Warehouse Committee of the Port of London Authority from 1909 to 1920, has had 49 years of personal association with port administration.

Chatburn, George R. Highway engineering; rural roads and pavements. New York: John Wiley & Sons, 1921. xii, 379 p. illus. 8°. $3.00. V DG (121)

This text-book covers road location, types and adaptation, drainage, culverts and bridges, various kinds of roads, surface treatment for dust prevention, revenue, administration and organization. Author is lecturer on highway engineering in the University of Nebraska.

Reviewed in Surveyor, Aug. 5, 1921.

Extensive study covering electric furnaces designed for the Héroult process; also a section on the Keller furnace. A long chapter is devoted to electric steel plants, with descriptions of some well-known installations. Industrial iron alloys; the manufacture and utilization of electrolytic iron; and electrothermic processes, including tempering and welding, are fully treated. Completely illustrated and has many diagrams.

Hale, Harrison. American chemistry. A record of achievement. The basis for future progress. New York: D. Van Nostrand Company, 1921. vii, 215 p. illus. 8°. $2.00. VO (118)

A summary of the most striking facts in the various chemical fields, previous to and during the great war. It discusses the progress in food, fertilizers, textiles, coal tar and dyes, fuel, silicate industries, paints and varnishes, rubber, electro-chemical industry, acids, and metals. The volume concludes with a brief forecast of the industry. With its untechnical style and appropriate illustrations, should prove of interest to the general reader.

Hering, Rudolph, and SAMUEL A. GREELEY. Collection and disposal of municipal refuse. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc., 1921. xii, 653 p. illus. 8°. $7.00.

Complete, authoritative, and well illustrated, this volume presents "enough to enable the reader or the designer of any special work to obtain general ideas, make better comparisons, and form safe general opinions on the subject." — Preface.

Discusses fundamental principles relating to house treatment, collection and final disposal; procedure in small towns and villages; estimating costs of disposal; feeding of garbage to hogs; stable and street refuse; night-soil and animals; incinerators, their design and construction. Unusually complete index.

Hool, George A., and CHARLES S. WHITNEY. Concrete designer's manual. Tables and diagrams for the design of reinforced concrete structures. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc., 1921. vii, 276 p. 8°. $4.00. VEOM (121)

A collection of data, obtained by the authors in their practice, pertaining to the design and working stresses of reinforced concrete slabs, beams, columns, and footings. An appendix gives the various rulings of the Joint Committee, American Concrete Institute; also the building code requirements of New York and Chicago.

PLE (118)

disintegration by alpha particles. Author is physical chemist of the United States Bureau of Mines.

"To the majority of chemists, especially teachers, the most interesting chapter will probably be that on isotopes. The discovery that many of our so-called elements are really composed of closely allied substances has startled most of us perhaps more than the discovery of the X-ray and radioactivity. It is stated that, so far, hydrogen, helium, carbon, nitrogen, oxygen, fluorine, phosphorus and arsenic have given no evidence of compound nature, a fact which accords with the whole-number character of their atomic weights, but boron, silicon, neon, chlorine and bromine have been found to consist of two forms, and krypton and xenon of several." — Henry Leffmann in Journal of the Franklin Institute, Aug., 1921.

VDY (121)

Popular, readable, and informative. Traces historical development, describes methods of training, and outlines the various phases of observation practice. The final chapter treats of the United States Air Service before, during, and after the War.

Singer, Charles, editor. Studies in the history and method of science. v. 2. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1921. xxii, 559 p. illus. 8°. £ 2. 8 s.

OAC (115)

The first volume of this attractive compilation of monographs was published in 1917. Volume 2 covers: Greek biology and its relation to the rise of modern biology; mediæval astronomy; Roger Bacon and the state of science in the thirteenth century; Leonardo as anatomist; the Asclepiadae and the priests of Asclepius; the scientific works of Galileo; the history of anatomical injections; science and the unity of mankind; four Armenian tracts on the structure of the human body; steps leading to the invention of the first optical apparatus; hypothesis; science and metaphysics; a sketch of the history of palaeobotany; Archimedes' principle of the balance, and some criticisms upon it; Aristotle on the heart. Beautifully and profusely illustrated, including many reproductions from old manuscripts.

Thomas, J. Bertram. The powering of ships. London: Scott, Greenwood & Son, 1921. xvi, 320 p. diagr. 8°. 25 s.

"This work has been compiled with the idea of collating and condensing much of the available information regarding the resistance of ships and presenting the same in a simple and accessible form. This the author has succeeded in doing; the work of many experimenters of different countries has been examined and the results of their experiments arranged so as to be of ready service to designers." — Shipping and shipping record, June 16, 1921.

Title of the work is misleading — the italics in the review are our own.

Also reviewed in Engineering, July 22, 1921.

Waddell, John Alexander Low. Economics of bridgework. A sequel to Bridge engineering. New York: John Wiley & Sons, Inc., 1921. xxxii, 512 p. illus. 8°. $6.00.

The general principles of economics are presented, and comparisons made of the relative advantages of bridges and tunnels, of high and low level crossings, of steel and reinforced concrete structures, of different types of ordinary steel structures, of riveted and pin-connected bridges, of continuous and non-continuous trusses, of the simple truss and cantilever bridges, of cantilever and suspension bridges, etc.

"The chapters on inspection, shopwork, erection, and maintenance and repair are well worth while and will give the young engineer a large amount of valuable practical information. The chapter on military bridges is timely, and the thanks of the profession are due to Gen. Beach and to Col. Bond for its preparation... Should be read by engineers connected with the design and construction of bridges not because any will necessarily agree with the findings in all respects but as a stimulus to the serious consideration of what constitutes the real economics of bridgework... The range of the author's investigations is remarkable." — Charles E. Fowler in Engineering news-record, Aug. 18, 1921.

Also reviewed in Times engineering supplement, London, August, 1921.

Whitmore, Frank C. Organic compounds of mercury. New York: The Chemical Catalog Company, Inc., 1921. 397 p. 8°.

POD (118)

Gives brief historical outline, traces general methods of preparation, and describes properties and reactions, with special chapters on the more important derivatives. Appendix gives analyses, list of proprietary mercurials, extensive bibliographies, and lists of patents.

THE MAIN READING ROOM IN THE AUTUMN¹

A BUSY winter is coming, if the statistics of books used in the Main Reading Room give their usual accurate forecast. In October we issued 76,967 volumes, twice as many as in October, 1918. The records show an increase of more than 50 per cent. in October, 1921, as compared with October, 1915.

Similar results are shown by a study of the annual figures. In 1915 587,529 volumes were used in the Main Reading Room; by 1918 there was a decrease to 544,306 and in 1920 an advance to 675,247. For the first ten months of 1921 we recorded 666,084 volumes, a larger number than in any full year except 1920, and if the results of the next two months bear their usual relation to the earlier ones, the total for the year 1921 will probably stand at something between 815,000 and 830,000 volumes.

Holidays are always busy, and November, with Election Day and Armistice Day coming in its first third, gave an interesting opportunity to test forecasts. For 1920 the average number of volumes issued daily was 1,850. On November 8, 1921, Election Day, we issued 3,675 volumes, almost twice the daily average for the preceding year. This made an average per hour on the 8th, of over 282 volumes, or 4.7 per minute. The next Sunday 2,701 volumes were given out in 9 hours, at the rate of 300 per hour, or 5 per minute, or 1 book every 12 seconds. As this average covers the whole day the rate is much higher, fully twice as high, in the busy hours. Obviously, at this rate personal contact between librarian and reader is swept away, and library service is reduced to terms of machinery.

Armistice Day, three days later, gave a record of 3,531 volumes, 144 less than Election Day. The daily average for the first thirteen days of November was 2,824. The corresponding figure for last year was 1,850. Heretofore the highest number of volumes issued on one day had been 3,393 on December 28, 1920.

It is important to note that this increase of use has been met without an increase in the personnel. War conditions shattered all the hopes and plans we had for increased effectiveness; it was impossible to hold people long enough, and the interest shown by those who did stay was, in general, discouragingly slight. For the past year the changes have been fewer and the spirit of interest has been commendable. Without these fortunate conditions it would have been almost impossible to take care of this great demand for books. Credit is due those members of the Staff who stayed with us during the trying times of the past six or seven years, and the Library is glad of this opportunity to make public expression of its thanks.

This same increase in use runs through practically every division and reading room of the Reference Department.

The problem of service has been complicated by the fact that for the past few years greater numbers of young people studying at local colleges and schools have come to use the Library, and particularly the Main Reading Room, as a place for study and for the preparation of their school lessons. Every member of our Staff is heartily in sympathy with any student making honest efforts. When, however, the number of these students becomes so great that we have no space for the people who come to consult the Library's books, we must see that what we may call our own readers receive their due attention. There are 768 seats in the Main Reading Room, and an hourly count frequently showed 800 to 1,000 people in the room on Saturday afternoons, Sundays, and holidays. The conclusion was forced upon us that a large part of the attendance consisted of students using their own text books and making no use of the Library except to occupy seats and use the coat rooms. As a result of this experience we began to require all persons entering the building on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays, with school and college text books, note books, and similar academic apparatus, to check these books at the coat rooms. The result has been salutary. Before the new rule went into effect the hourly attendance ranged between 644 and 683, the average maximum attendance being 853 to 922; we were giving out about 252 books an hour, with a total issue of 2,263 to 2,276. After the new rule began to work, the hourly attendance dropped to 573, the maximum attendance to 744; at the same time the number of books issued per hour rose to 270 and the total issue to 2,440. This is conclusive evidence that many people are now being served who could not get what they wanted under former conditions.

Facilities for the use of students exist in the city, and to put them at the service of these students requires merely the opening of the reading rooms of the various local schools and colleges on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays. In after years it will doubtless be difficult to believe that in 1921 the reading rooms of The New York Public Library were the only ones open to students on such days, and that institutions giving instruction, and collecting fees, threw on the Reference Department of the Library the burden of providing study room for the youths attending their courses.

Injustice and hardship to individuals may result from our new method. This is a possibility it would be foolish to deny, but there must be set off against it the assistance given many more who now can use in comfort facilities that heretofore were forbidden them.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of October, 1921, the Library received as gifts a total of 2,413 volumes, 4,078 pamphlets, 115 maps and 363 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

The New York City Art Commission gave a collection of art books and portfolios relating to city planning and architecture, comprising 46 volumes and 10 pamphlets, including "Les Promenades de Paris," A. Alphand, 2 v., Paris, 1868; "Neubauten der Stadt Berlin," Stadtbaurat Ludwig Hoffmann, 2 v., Berlin, 1903; "Metropolitan Improvements, or London in the 19th Century," James Elmes, London, 1827, etc.

From Mr. William Sloane came a copy of "The Fittings of a Famous English House, known as the Hogarth House," New York, 1921; from Mrs. Louis Prang, Boston, came a complete set of publishers' proofs of the publications of L. Prang & Co., 16 volumes; from Miss Elizabeth A. Achelis came a copy of the "Textbook of Aerial Laws and Regulations for Aerial Navigation, International, National and Municipal, Civil and Military," by Henry Woodhouse, New York, 1920, and a copy of the "Official Map of American and Canadian Airways and Aerial Mail Routes, 1920."

Mrs. James Thomson gave the Library 12 volumes of literary criticism by Ernest Seillière, in French; Mr. J. W. Lieb gave a copy of his work, "Leonardo Da Vinci, natural philosopher and engineer," 1921; Mr. Herbert Freeland gave a file of the London Daily Mail, Nov. 13 to Dec. 28, 1914; and Col. Sir Charles Wakefield gave a copy of the limited edition of "Pearl; an English Poem of the Fourteenth Century, re-set in English by Israel Gollancz," London, 1918 (sold for the benefit of the British Red Cross).

Large miscellaneous collections of books and pamphlets were received from the following: From Mrs. Frederick F. Eiseman (276 volumes and 40 pamphlets, including bound volumes of the German "Puck," "Humoristische Blätter," other bound magazines, music scores, etc.); from Mrs. Frank Altschul (10 volumes and 44 pamphlets, mainly relating to the war); from Mr. Thomas Hunt (41 volumes); from Mrs. Mary E. Latey (30 volumes); from Mrs. J. Metzger (30 volumes, mainly German); from Mrs. M. Moorehead (72 volumes of medical books); from Mr. George R. Mosle (46 volumes); from Mrs. Schweizer (130 volumes, 302 pamphlets and 23 periodicals); and from the Union League Club (139 volumes, 27 pamphlets, 85 periodicals).

Mr. David Keppel gave the Library seven etchings by F. Bracquemond, and one by G. Courbet.

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN OCTOBER, 1921

DURING the month of October, 1921, there were received at the Library 24,556 volumes and 4,825 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both the Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 105,481. They consulted 242,401 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 279,431.

PROVENÇAL LITERATURE AND LANGUAGE, INCLUDING THE LOCAL HISTORY OF SOUTHERN FRANCE

A LIST OF REFERENCES IN
THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

COMPILED BY DANIEL C. HASKELL

The material listed here represents a fairly good collection of books for the student of either the old Provençal or the modern revival. More than ordinary interest attaches to the modern books because they came to the Library by gift from Mrs. Thomas A. Janvier, who added to her enthusiasm as a book collector the advantages of an intimate knowledge of the country and the people gleaned from frequent visits and from an extensive acquaintance with the leaders in the literary movement. Besides the printed books there came from Mrs. Janvier eleven letters from Félix Gras, Gaston Jourdanne, Mistral, and Jules Ronjat.

This practical up-to-date handbook is designed to furnish a comprehensive and efficient instrument for saving time. Part 1 presents the theories of body resistance; wing characteristics; propeller, machine, air, ground, and water performances. Part 2, showing practical procedure, comprises a large number of curves. Part 3 works out problems at length and also shows the complete calculations for a typical machine. Author was recently technical adviser to the Air Department of the British Admiralty.

"The rapid advance of aeronautics during the war has been followed by a large crop of books, of which many, under the conditions now prevailing, will scarcely justify their existence... Books dealing with specific aspects of the subject, however, are likely to prove of more permanent value, and Mr. Booth's book is a case in point... Aeronautical engineers and designers should find the book of very great service as a time saver, while the student will find sufficient of the theory given to enable him to obtain a clear idea of the fundamental principles upon which the later work is based." — Mechanical world, August 12, 1921.

† VG (121)

The material of this annual is arranged in one alphabet and covers a large variety of subjects:— (1) growth, development and status of various applications of electricity; associations; colleges and schools; periodicals; libraries and testing laboratories; biographies; facts concerning codes, patents, and other items of interest; (2) definitions of electrical terms, words and abbreviations; (3) descriptions of products with names of manufacturers, also separate entries for the latter. Among the names of the contributing editors are some of the best known in the United States. An excellent volume for the reference librarian.

*Elles, Gertrude L. The study of geological maps. Cambridge: University Press, 1921. viii, 74 p. illus. 8°. 12 s. net.

PTD (117)

"The first three chapters are given up to the exposition of topographical maps in their relation to geology, and full emphasis is given to the paramount importance of surface relief in the analysis of geological maps... The remainder of the book describes and illustrates methods of solving the problems of dip, thickness, relative age of strata, etc., from a geological map... The book is very well illustrated with diagrams, sections, and maps, and a series of plates of block diagram drawings helps considerably in expounding the relation between surface relief and geological phenomena." — Geological magazine, August, 1921.

Emerson, David B. Modern building superintendence and the writing of specifications. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1921. viii, 247 p. 12°. $1.75.

The first section of this simply written work describes with some detail the constructional superintendence of a large 20-story office building, including a safe-deposit department and a Turkish bath. Section 2 tells how to write specifications, with details for a small house, and has chapters on "danger signals" and the importance of clear drawings. Designed primarily for students and juniors.

*Fischer, Martin H. Soaps and proteins, their colloid chemistry in theory and practice... with the collaboration of George D. McLaughlin and Marion O. Hooker. New York: John Wiley & Sons, Inc., 1921. ix, 272 p. illus. 8°. $4.00.

VON (118)

Dr. Fischer is professor of physiology in the University of Cincinnati. The linking of soaps and proteins was originally undertaken as a purely biological problem, for the reason that the former are similar in their colloidal chemistry to the latter, and because they contain a more controllable number of purely chemical variables. Covers: the colloid chemistry of soaps, including their foaming, emulsifying and washing properties; the colloid chemistry of soap manufacture, outlining the principles of hot and cold processes of manufacture, also a discussion of fillers; and the analogies in the colloid chemistry of soaps, protein derivatives and tissues.

Grabau, Amadeus W. A textbook of geology. Part 2, Historical geology. Boston: D. C. Heath & Co. [cop. 1921.] viii, 976 p. illus. 8°. $6.00. PTD (117)

Part 1 was noted in New technical books, 1921, v. 6, no. 2. Part 2, comprising nearly 1000 pages and over 1200 illustrations, emphasizes stratigraphic rather than biologic development, the latter having been segregated mainly in special chapters. An interesting history of the development of classification includes portraits of pioneers in this work. Mapping and correlation of geological formations; fossils, their nature and mode of preparation; essential characteristics of animal types; and the beginnings of earth history are followed by detailed descriptions of the geologic formations. Has an unusually complete index. Although designed as a textbook the general reader should find much of interest. The well-known author is at present professor of palaeontology in the Government University of Peking, China.

Harvey, Arthur. Tanning materials with notes on tanning extract manufacture. London: Crosby Lockwood & Son, 1921. vii, 182 p. illus. 8°. 15 s. VMK (121)

One half of this work comprises an alphabetical list of materials with the important facts about each. Section 2 is a synopsis of the general methods used in the manufacture of extracts. Section 3 is devoted to the examination of methods of examining materials. Has a good botanical index.

"The volume is well-illustrated, and from the point of general get-up leaves nothing to be desired. It will certainly appeal to all students of leather chemistry, and will be a useful handbook in the tanner's laboratory." — Chemical age (London), July 9, 1921.

Holmes, Arthur. Petrographic methods and calculations, with some examples of results achieved. London: Thomas Murby & Co., 1921. xix, 515 p. illus. 8°. 31 s. 6 d. PWR (117)

The author complains that most volumes dealing with this subject are almost wholly devoted to the optical properties of crystals and their application to the determination of minerals. He aims to give the same degree of attention to other methods as well. There are chapters on the specific gravity of minerals and rocks; the separation of minerals, including magnetic, electrostatic and chemical methods; the optical examination of crushed and detrital minerals; the examination of detrital sediments; preparation and examination of thin sections; micro-chemical and staining methods; textures and structures of rocks; chemical analyses and their interpretation; the graphical representation of chemical analyses.

"Much of the matter appears in a British textbook for the first time. . . . No chance of indicating a new line of inquiry is missed, and the student who can work through the book without attempting to settle some petrographic problem for himself will be very lacking in imagination. . . . Dr. Holmes is to be congratulated on having produced a book which should materially advance the study and practice of petrography." — The Mining magazine, August, 1921.

Lipson, E. The history of the woollen and worsted industries. London: A. & C.

Black, Ltd., 1921. illus. 8°. (The histories of English industries.) 10 s. 6 d. VLMD (121)

An economic rather than a technical study, much of the material having been taken from original sources in old documents. Discusses growth and origin, organization, state control, processes and inventions, introduction of machinery, geographical distribution of the industries. The appendices give estimates of cost of manufacturing a piece of cloth and include bibliographical material.

Makinson, J. T. Toy manufacture. London and New York: Cassell & Co., Ltd. [1921.] 264 p. illus. 8°. (Cassell's workshop series.) 6 s. VNR (121)

It is stated that the author has had wide experience in English and German workshops. His book is the first in English to cover satisfactorily the technical details of commercial work. Tells how to start a business, describes the special machinery required, and gives details of the making of picture blocks, dulcimers, dominoes, animals, soft metal toys, marbles, etc. There is a good chapter on mechanical toys. Well illustrated.

Moore, Benjamin. Biochemistry; a study of the origin, reactions and equilibria of living matter. New York: Longmans, Green & Co., 1921. vii, 340 p. diags. 8°. $7.50. PPB (118)

Discusses biotic structure and biotic energy; life and light; chemistry of plants; photo-synthesis in algae; energy and chemical transformation in living matter; enzymes and cells.

Rench, W. F. Roadway and track. New York: Simmons-Boardman Co. [1921.] 242 p. illus. 8°. $3.00. TPCM (121)

This concise work is based largely upon the practice of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Deals with the legal side of right-of-way; with drainage; vegetation of banks; labor saving devices; economics of roadway; and tools. Part 2 covers the various problems in track work and the special duties of the department. Curves and switches are omitted, having been considered in another of the author's books. Well illustrated.

"A good practical book for the supervisor and roadmaster and for the engineer who has to do with maintenance-of-way. To the experienced man it will give new ideas, besides refreshing his memory as to matters he should know and has forgotten. To the younger man it gives both information and instruction. The term practical is used advisedly, because there is little in regard to theory, principles or development, the book dealing mainly with present-day conditions of routine and special classes of maintenance work, which are described fully and clearly." — Engineering news-record, August 18, 1921.

Royds, Robert. Heat transmission; by radiation, conduction and convection. London: Constable & Co., Ltd., 1921. viii, 238 p. illus. 8°. 24 s. VFH (121)

*— Heat transmission; in boilers, condensers and evaporators. London: Constable & Co., Ltd., 1921. viii, 302 p. illus. 8°. 24 s. VFH (121)

Two closely connected volumes on the theory and application of heat. The first volume dismisses the subject of radiation in 20 pages, after which a short chapter deals with conduction, explaining heat losses from steam pipes. The concluding chapter on convection supplies data suitable in heat transmission plant design. Volume two begins with descriptions of a few types of boilers, and the two following chapters on condensers and evaporators are summaries of determinations made in the laboratory. Well diagrammed.

"The various parts of the subject are dealt with rather from the experimental and descriptive points of view than from the standpoint of the physicist or mathematician, the whole treatment being more broad and general than profound." — Times engineering supplement, August, 1921.

Snell, John F. C. Power house design. New York: Longmans, Green & Co., 1921. ix, 535 p. illus. 2. ed. 8°. $14.00.

VGMB (121)

"This standard work has now reached its second edition. The first edition, published in 1911, received favourable notice and the value of the present edition is considerably enhanced by the trouble taken... to modernize the work. Since 1911 there have been many noteworthy developments in all branches of power house designs, and this has necessitated the complete revision and recasting of many of the chapters. What with schemes for super power stations, etc., and the turning over to electrical power in most industrial undertakings, there is no doubt that the volume under notice is becoming of more and more value to a larger circle of readers. The whole design... is dealt with, from the foundations and the buildings to the switches and smaller plant, together with the design and economics of the prime movers, steam, gas or water... Possessing singularly few errors and well-illustrated, the work is sure to continue to hold the lead, for some time to come, among textbooks on power house design." — Colliery guardian, August 19, 1921.

VIIE (121)

Brief non-technical description of the present-day industry traced from its small beginnings. There are chapters on the jenny and the water frame, on the mule and ring frame, with an account of the modern spinning mill. Illustrated.

Watson, William. Textile design and colour, elementary weaves and figured fabrics. New York: Longmans, Green & Co., 1921. xi, 436 p. illus. 2. ed. 8°. $7.00.

VLB (121)

First edition (1912) and the author's Advanced textile design (1913) are standard works. Despite the sub-title of the present volume the treatment is anything but elementary, having been designed "for textile designers and manufacturers, as apart from students in elementary classes at technical schools." Deals with the construction and combination of simple and special weaves, the structure of standard classes of cloths, the theories of color, the application of colors to fabrics, and the designing of ordinary figured fabrics. Completely illustrated. The appendix of 75 pages is new, comprising a list of standard yarns, weaves and fabrics, and dealing "chiefly with examples which possess some special feature as regards either structure or method of manufacture."

"The present volume is the first work published on the Rutherford Trowbridge Memorial Publication Fund."

"The theories of Mr. Hambidge are, in their most important phases, architectural... The whole basis of the theory is that the Greek knowledge of geometry and of the proportion of areas was applied to the design of buildings and other forms of art. The simple fact is of crucial importance that Mr. Hambidge has explained by his theory why all the linear measurements of the Greek temples... are incommensurate. This peculiarity has baffled every student, up to date." — W. H. Goodyear, in American architect, 1920.

Dr. Hoppin brings no new ascriptions of his own into the catalogue... No catalogue of world-wide scope can be complete... Minor omissions should encourage Dr. Hoppin's colleagues to report scattered pieces which have escaped his notice. His catalogue will be indispensable. REFERENCE BOOKS

Bibliographies of modern authors. no. 1-3. Robert Bridges, John Masfield, George Moore. London: Leslie Chaundry & Co.; New Haven: The Brick Row Book Shop, Inc., 1921. 16°.

The first numbers of what is planned as a series of bibliographies of prominent contemporary authors. In pamphlet form containing about ten or a dozen pages. Compiler does not include periodical references unless they have been reprinted as separates. American first editions of British authors are not included. Good collation and physical description of each book is given.

Dow, Charles Mason. Anthology and bibliography of Niagara Falls. Albany: State of New York, 1921. 2 v. 8°.

State historian says author has compiled a source book for the history of Niagara Falls. Titles listed are followed in most cases either by a bibliographical note or by quotations, sometimes lengthy, from travelers of different nationalities and periods who have recorded their impressions of the cataract. Entries are arranged chronologically and by subject. Contains numerous colored reproductions of early prints. Indexed.

The Franco-American year book, containing authentic, up-to-date residential, commercial and professional directories of Americans in France and other parts of Europe; American clubs, societies and organizations, Americans with foreign titles; French firms with branches in the United States; Franco-American trade and commerce; and a Who's who section of Americans on the continent. Paris: The Franco-American Year-Book, 1921. 400 p. 12°.

A combination professional, business and social directory with informative articles on American institutions in France. Apparently well done.

Hendricks, Genevieve Poyneer. Handbook of social resources of the United States. Washington: American Red Cross, 1921. 300 p. 12°.

An extremely useful directory of social service organizations, institutions and agencies of the United States, with detailed information about each entry. Intended to supplement the "Handbook of information and instructions for home service sections" issued by the Red Cross Society in war time. The volume under discussion includes only peace time agencies. Limited to agencies of national scope. Statements published were compiled with the cooperation of the agencies listed. Information given includes mention of organization's general program; specific activities; annual meeting; information service; reference and library facilities; survey and investigational activities; publications; requirements for membership. General arrangement is alphabetical under name with two indexes, regional and subject.

Hyde, Dorsey W., editor. Special libraries directory. Washington: Special Libraries Association, 1921. 123 p. 8°.

Lists 1,300 special libraries of the United States, with descriptive notes giving, in most cases, date of organization, subject and amount of material collected, kind of service rendered and special features. Arranged by subject with a second geographical arrangement and subject index to the geographical list.

Jeffords, Clyde R., and CLAUDE F. WALKER, editors. The high schools of New York City; a handbook of procedure and personnel; published by the High School Teachers' Association of New York City. New York: High School Teachers' Association, 1921. 223 p. 8°.

This manual of the New York City high school system is of more than local interest on account of the size of the system and the foreign school population. Signed articles trace the historical development of New York City high schools, describe present practices and tendencies, and outline teachers' association activities. A directory is included.

The Labour international handbook [1921]; edited by R. Palme Dutt. London: The Labour Publishing Company, Ltd., and George Allen & Unwin, Ltd., 1921. 320 p. 12°.

TDA

Prepared as a continuation and extension of the Labour year book by The Labour Research Department. "Part 1 consists of reviews of the leading issues of international affairs and foreign policy from a labour standpoint. Part 2 is intended as a guide to the international labour movement." Contains chapters on: The Peace treaties; International government (including the League of Nations); Economic conditions after the war; Russia and the world; Problems of racial conflict; International socialism; International trade unionism; International cooperation; Labour abroad, and a Directory of international labour. Indexed.

Master printer's annual and typographical year book, 1921; edited by R. A. Austen-Leigh and Gerard T. Meynell. London: Spottiswoode, Ballantyne & Coy., Ltd. [1921.] 448+54 p. 8°.

*IPA

The first issue of this annual appeared in 1920. It is an annual review of industrial conditions, directory, and who's who of the printing trade in England. The directory feature includes associations, alliances, trade unions, and benevolent societies, and a trade directory of stationers. Includes also a bibliography for practical printers, and a chronological list of printers who have occupied prominent positions as King's printer, etc.

Mathews, Shailer, and GERALD BIRNEY SMITH, editors. A dictionary of religion and ethics. New York: The Macmillan Company, 1921. 513 p. 4°.

Might be defined as an expanded dictionary or condensed encyclopedia. Covers both social and individual ethics and religion but omits strictly biblical terms. Historical treatment is emphasized. No living persons are included in the biographies. Volume is the result of collaboration of many specialists and some of the articles are signed. A bibliography of 28 p. is appended.

THE LIBRARY'S FIRST FOLIO SHAKESPEARES

THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY shares with the British Museum the distinction of owning four copies of the first folio edition of Shakespeare. This first collected edition of Shakespeare's plays has, for a hundred years or more, appealed as an object of great interest to the collector (perhaps especially in this country) and also to the popular imagination. It is widely known that however high a price the book may bring at a sale there are other books which will surpass it in this respect. The first folio is not esteemed as an example of fine printing (far from it) nor as a specimen of early printing, since the art of the printer was already venerable when this book came from the press. Except in a perfect condition it is not extremely rare. But it is — because of its contents — the greatest of all English books. And so it is pleasant that collectors have always aspired to own it, and that it attracts public interest.

Brief and useful descriptions of the four copies owned by this Library are given in Sir Sidney Lee's "Census of Extant Copies." What is perhaps the most interesting of the four is Number XXIX in the "Census," in Class I, Division B, — i. e. "in good condition, but with occasional leaves either supplied from another copy of the First Folio, or repaired, i. e. mended, mounted, or inlaid." This is the celebrated copy, with the extra title-page (see frontispiece) apparently dated 1622. The description from the "Census" follows:

XXIX. NEW YORK. — PUBLIC LIBRARY — LENOX COLLECTION. Size: $12\frac{9}{16}$ in. \times $8\frac{5}{16}$ in. History: acquired about 1800 by John Lichfield of London, who described it in the Cabinet or Monthly Report of Polite Literature, 1807; afterwards in the library of James Baker of London, at whose sale in May, 1855, it was bought for James Lenox of New York for £163 16s. . . A few leaves, including the title-page with mutilated date 1622, are from another copy on sale about 1820 by J. & A. Arch, booksellers of Cornhill; this second copy was acquired by J. O. Halliwell [-Phillipps] about 1850, and disposed of by him through John Russell Smith about 1855 to John Cole Nicholl (1823-1894) of Merthyr Mawr, from whom Lenox procured it about 1860. Cf. James Lenox's articles in Historical Magazine, 1861, p. 224, and American Biblioplist, June and July, 1870; Contributions to a Catalogue of the Lenox Library No. V, Works of Shakespeare, pp. 32-33; Henry Stevens' Recollections of James Lenox, 1880, pp. 104-8, 139-40; F. S. Ellis in Quaritch's Dictionary of English Book-Collectors, 1897, pt. 10; also Mr. W. H. Fleming in Shakespeareana, Philadelphia, March, 1888, pp. 103-6. Condition: good; bound by Charles Lewis. There are duplicate fly-leaves and title-pages supplied from the Nicholl copy. One fly-leaf is perfect, the other is liberally inlaid. The inserted title from the Nicholl copy, though genuine, is inlaid, and the concluding figure in the date 1623 has been mutilated so as to resemble 1622; the other title has Harris's facsimile portrait. The last leaf is mounted on guards and other leaves have undergone repair. Two abnormal uncorrected leaves of "As You Like It" precede the normal corrected leaves which are paged respectively 193-4 and 203-4. The same curious feature characterizes the Barton-Boston copy...and the untraced Milner-Vertue copy...

The alteration of the date — 1622 for 1623 — is more obvious in the original than in the copy given here. The second 2 is apparently made by cutting off the bottom of the 3, and doctoring it a little. Even in our reproduction, from a photostat, the difference in the two figure 2's can be seen. The second of them may be compared with the 3 in the date of the other title-page reproduced opposite page 801 herewith. (This title-page is from the Astor copy.) How the 3 was converted into a 2 is not hard to observe. Dibdin, in his account ("Library Companion," 1824,) speaks of a First Folio, with the date 1622 as genuine. Mr. Lenox about 1861 wrote, that "if...the last figure has been tampered with, the alteration is very successfully concealed," but a later examination revealed the fact that the concealment is not successful if the leaf is held toward the light. Joseph Lilly of London, who is said to have sold more than a hundred copies of the First Folio, wrote in 1862 of his belief that the figure 2 in the date resulted from the figure 3 being imperfectly worked, or battered in that particular copy. Curious readers will find fuller discussion of this oddity in the references in the description from the "Census" given above.

The other Lenox copy, Number XXVIII in the "Census," and in the same class and division as to condition is described as follows:

XXVIII. NEW YORK. — PUBLIC LIBRARY — LENOX COLLECTION. Size: 12¾ in. × 8¼ in. History: owned in 17th century by R. Chapell, whose autograph it bears. Acquired by James Lenox, of New York, about 1860, and presented to the public with the Lenox library in 1870... Condition:

clean; bound by Bedford; fly-leaf and title both genuine but inlaid; a few letters in fly-leaf supplied in Indian ink; margin of last leaf mended.

XLIII. NEW YORK. — PUBLIC LIBRARY — ASTOR COLLECTION. Size: $12\frac{7}{10}$ in. \times $8\frac{1}{8}$ in. History: acquired about 1800 by first Duke of Buckingham (1776–1839) for his library at Stowe. Sold with the Stowe library in January, 1849, for £76 to William Astor of New York, for the collection bequeathed by his father John Jacob Astor to the Astor Library. Condition: unwashed; fly-leaf from Second Folio inlaid; first line of title patched up from another copy of First Folio; a few margins patched; Duke of Buckingham's crest on cover.

The Tilden copy, CXVI in the “Census” is given in Class II (Imperfect) Division C, “in moderate condition, with most of preliminary and other missing leaves in facsimile or from later Folios.”

CXVI. NEW YORK. — PUBLIC LIBRARY, TILDEN COLLECTION. Size: $12\frac{1}{4}$ in. \times $8\frac{1}{16}$ in. History: acquired about 1880 by Hon. Samuel J. Tilden, of New York, who bequeathed it in 1895 to The New York Public Library. Condition: fly-leaf, title, and all preliminary leaves, and the last three leaves in Harris facsimile.

AN ART MUCH USED, BUT SELDOM DISCUSSED

THERE are various good reasons for the exhibition of aquatints now in the Print Gallery in the Library. Etching has had it pretty much its own way in the world of exhibitions. Aquatint is its adjunct, a silent partner, tying together lines and the spaces between them into tones dark or light, losing its identity in the general process of etching, which, in the end, is also the process of aquatint. A handmaid it is to etching, — the better known medium. It is an effective response to the longing for a relative completeness of visible effect which does not make the same demand on mind and imagination as the etching. For the etching is in line, and the line is ever a symbol — since nature has no lines — and average humanity avoids symbols and adores statements. But the symbol may be true in its ultimate effect and the complete description untrue.

Aquatint is what the artist makes it; a cheap device to gain cheap effects, or an effective aid to the artist whose mastery of technique is matched by genuine mental activity. That is what the Library's present exhibition strives to show, through comparison of exhibits which trace the development of aquatint in about one hundred and fifty years. Conforming in phrase of title to the previous exhibitions in this series, it is called "The Making of an Aquatint," but technique is subordinated, as it should be, to consideration of the purpose for which it was employed, and of the results attained.

In aquatinting, a copper-plate is covered with minute particles of resinous substance, which are either dusted on the plate in powder form, or deposited on it in an alcohol solution. The plate is then immersed in an acid bath, which attacks the copper wherever it is not protected by the resinous particles. The result, in printing, is a flat tint, with a sort of crackle effect caused by minute white spots where the little dots of resin were. In order to get lighter and darker tones, "stopping out" is resorted to, as in etching. That is, when the plate has been acted on by the acid for a certain time, it is taken out and the portions to appear lightest are brushed over with stopping-out varnish, which protects them from the acid's "biting." The plate is then placed in the acid bath again, and this procedure is repeated according to the number of gradations desired by the artist, until the darkest portions are reached, which thus are exposed longest to the action of the acid.

Aquatint has distinct limits, but is a pleasing and useful art within those restrictions, with a liquid translucency and possibilities of delicacy and darkness, though hardly the rich black of the mezzotint. Employed in its purity it showed pretty sharply outlined flat tints. More recent experimenting, by intermingling other processes, has overcome the difficulty of producing gradations. Indeed, the French eighteenth-century makers of color prints practised superimposition of technical manipulations to a noteworthy degree. Among them were Vidal, Morret, and especially Debucourt, whose suppression of the flat grain, concealing the labor of the process, was praised by the Goncourts.

The enthusiasm of the Goncourts apparently made them overlook the fact that labor is just as much there whether it is evidenced in numerous obvious lines or dots, or covered by a conglomerate of devices and processes which one can painfully disintegrate only with the aid of a strong magnifying glass.

Originally aquatint was evolved through the desire to imitate and reproduce wash drawings in water-color, sepia or black-and-white. It was so used by J. B. Le Prince, who, it seems, invented it in 1768. Paul Sandby introduced it into England, where it also appeared in its pure state, in the lightness of aqua-relle. Thus it served, well into the nineteenth century, for separate prints and for book-illustrations, noteworthy among the latter being those for the "Microcosm of London" and Ayton's "Voyage round Great Britain." The production of such work is described in Martin Hardie's "English Coloured Books." Rowlandson, for instance, would dash off an outline in etching. From that plate there was taken an impression on which he washed in India ink the necessary modeling and shading. This added work was aquatinted on the plate by the engraver. From the plate thus amplified there was pulled another proof, on which the artist completed the desired effect by light washes of color. This last then served as a model for the staff of trained colorists whom publishers such as Ackermann kept busily employed. Thus, aquatint formed an effective and comparatively quick means of multiplying drawings of landscape and city views, caricatures and the coaching and sporting prints so dear to the British heart. It was transplanted to this country and gave us series such as the famous Hudson River Portfolio, as well as other prints, which brought our attention to picturesque beauties of our own land.

Turner made some experiments in aquatint during the production of his Liber Studiorum, and F. C. Lewis did for him entirely in that medium the plate Bridge and Goats, well exemplifying in its sky the delicate effects possible in this process. Turner, moreover, leads naturally to the "painter-aquatinters," those who made an autographic art of a process which has been known mainly as a reproductive art. Goya and his powerful Caprichos come particularly to mind; his tints, applied vigorously, are of a quivering inequality of strength that is subtly suggestive. He influenced Manet greatly. Delacroix set a Smith in a mosaic of lights and shadows of varying degrees and an eventual richness of black. Fortuny applied aquatint in his etchings "with diabolical cleverness." Max Klinger was as playful as his nature permitted him to be in his Intermezzi, enlivened with most delicate tints. Others used the resin-ground experimentally, often subordinately, to lend emphasis or to place spots or larger surfaces of local color. Among these are Jacque, Bracquemond, Jacquemart, Buhot, Bejot, Brunet-Debaines, Michalek, Graf, J. D. Smillie. It served Mary Cas-satt for a set of color-prints inspired by the Japanese, and Mielatz for his Iconophile Society prints of New York, as also for the freely handled Wave. Sir Frank Short has employed it with distinction, W. Lee Hankey and C. R. Baskett are among recent British aquatinters, Arms and Shope among Americans. In the modern work aquatint has taken on much vigor and freedom, with diversity of effects that contrasts strongly with the flat tints of other days.

Flexibility is added to the process by various manipulations, — an intimate mixture of soft-ground etching with aquatint, the use of the scraper and the roulette, the production of a grain by pressing organdy or some similar textile through the etching ground. Sand, salt, sand-paper, acid brushed onto the plate, and other media have also been used to produce a surface that would print tones.

All of this is the slightest possible indication of the possibilities of aquatint and of its employment. The record merely of English color books illustrated by this process, fills a volume or two; and a list of names of artists who have practised aquatint would be a sufficiently imposing affair.

In the exhibition, in the Library's Print Gallery, the interested visitor will find adequately described the development of the technique of the process. He will see how it has served public needs particularly in England, France, and the United States, in the production of illustrations and prints that have become interesting and useful documents illuminating costume, customs, points of view, scenery and architecture. And he will be enabled to compare the methods by which modern artists of note have made aquatint a happy medium for expression of their personal view-point, more than once raising it from its habitual secondary rôle to the distinctness of a separate and self-sufficient artistic dialect. The exhibition is on until March 31st.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES

At the meeting of the Board of Trustees held on December 14, 1921, Mr. Bronson Winthrop and Hon. Frank L. Polk were elected Trustees of the Library.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

DURING the month of November, 1921, the Library received as gifts a total of 1,238 volumes, 4,640 pamphlets, 28 maps and 71 prints. Some of the more important and interesting of these gifts were the following:

From Mr. H. G. Ardleigh, a copy of "Album nouveaux monogrammes en relief, russes et français," Varsovie, 1914; from Mr. A. E. Gallatin, a copy of his work, "Modern fine printing in America," privately printed, New York, 1921; from Mr. James S. De Benneville, Philadelphia, a copy of volume two of "Tales of the Tokigawa" retold by him from the Japanese originals, Yokohama, 1921; and from Mr. Arthur Hendrick Vandenberg, a copy of his work, "The greatest American, Alexander Hamilton, an historical analysis of his life and works together with a symposium of opinions by distinguished Americans," New York, 1921.

The following interesting collections were received: from the Minister of Science and Arts of Belgium, a collection of books relating to the literature of Belgium (26 volumes and 4 pamphlets); from the Bibliotheca e Museu da Marinha, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, a collection of 15 volumes relating to Brazil; from the Ministère des Régions Libérées, Service de Propagande, Paris, France, a collection of pamphlets and folders (1,093 in number) relating to the reconstruction of the devastated regions of France; from the Rosicrucian Fellowship, New York City, a collection of their publications (8 volumes and 22 pamphlets); and from Mrs. William Hawschurst Wheelock, 24 volumes, including poems by Samuel Rogers, London, 1822, "La Gerusalemme e l'Aminta di Torquato Tasso, per diligenza e studio di Antonio Buttura," 2 volumes, Parigi, 1823, and others.

The following gifts of music were received: from Miss Anna Goodman, 437 pieces of sheet music; from Chev. Eduardo Marzo, 1 volume and 24 pamphlets of music, including some of his own compositions; from Jack Mills, Inc., 26 songs of their publication; and from Sr. José Wianna da Motta, Conservatorio Nacional de Musica, Lisbon, Portugal, his symphony, "A Patria," other of his compositions, and 18 issues of the "Revista do Conservatorio Nacional de Musica."

Mr. George T. Plowman, Cambridge, Mass., presented four of his etchings — "Staples Inn," "Mt. Shasta" (dry point); "Chartres," "Ponte Vecchio, Florence."

ADDITIONS AND USE OF THE LIBRARY IN NOVEMBER, 1921

DURING the month of November, 1921, there were received 10,979 volumes and 6,562 pamphlets. (These include the additions to both the Reference and Circulation Departments.) The total number of readers recorded in the Central Building was 110,714. They consulted 247,437 volumes. Visitors to the building numbered 309,584, — an average of 10,319 daily.

A LIST OF REFERENCES IN
THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

COMPILED BY DANIEL C. HASKELL

The material listed here represents a fairly good collection of books for the student of either the old Provençal or the modern revival. More than ordinary interest attaches to the modern books because they came to the Library by gift from Mrs. Thomas A. Janvier, who added to her enthusiasm as a book collector the advantages of an intimate knowledge of the country and the people gleaned from frequent visits and from an extensive acquaintance with the leaders in the literary movement. Besides the printed books there came from Mrs. Janvier eleven letters from Félix Gras, Gaston Jourdanne, Mistral, and Jules Ronjat.

PART VI

LOCAL HISTORY, DESCRIPTION AND ARCHAEOLOGY

The term history as used in this list embraces social, economic and industrial, as well as purely political history. Ecclesiastical history, numismatics, regional genealogy and biography are also included.

The territory covered by the list embraces those departments in which the various dialects of Provençal are spoken, as defined by Paul Meyer: Allier, Alpes-Maritimes, Ardèche, Ariège, Aude, Aveyron, Basses-Alpes, Basses-Pyrénées, Bouches-du-Rhône, Cantal, Corrèze, Creuse, Dordogne, Drôme, Gard, Gers, Gironde, Haute-Garonne, Haute-Loire, Haute-Savoie, Haute-Vienne, Hautes-Alpes, Hautes-Pyrénées, Hérault, Isère, Landes, Loire, Lot, Lot-et-Garonne, Lozère, Puy-de-Dôme, Pyrénées-Orientales, Rhône, Savoie, Tarn, Tarn-et-Garonne, Var, and Vaucluse. For convenience those departments which, according to Meyer, are only partially within the limits of the Provençal language, are included in their entirety. The department of Haute-Savoie is also included for the same reason.

Towns, whose names begin with the definite article, as Le Puy, are listed under the article, rather than the succeeding word.

Aitchison, Leslie. Engineering steels, an exposition of the properties of steel for engineers and users to secure economy in working and efficiency of result. London: Macdonald & Evans, 1921. xxxi, 396 p. illus. 8°. 25s. VIR (117)

The author's viewpoint is that chemical composition is less of interest to the engineer than "heat treatment" designed to give the steel the qualities of strength, toughness, hardness, durability, etc. Much of the work is therefore devoted to discussions of methods of testing and their results. Well illustrated with diagrams and photo-micrographs. Bibliographies in the appendix.

"The author's training has evidently been wholly metallurgical and his outlook is narrow. Tensile tests, shock tests, hardness tests are not the confines within which the engineer has his being, and yet the whole subject is discussed from a restricted point of view, in which such laboratory tests fill a very large portion of the field of vision, and any reference to the result of general engineering experience in special steels will be looked for in vain. Machining properties, for instance, are covered by a general statement of about four lines. It is a book written on the general properties of steel and its heat treatment from the standpoint of the metallurgist." — Engineering, Sept. 9, 1921.

Deals adequately with proper charging methods, testing, locating and remedying troubles; the methods of use in large generating stations, in the telephone and telegraph industries, and in electric vehicles. Designed for self-instruction and home study.

Geddes, A. E. M. Meteorology, an introductory treatise. London: Blackie & Son, Ltd., 1921. xx, 390 p. illus. 8°. 21s. PRC (117)

Simple and devoid of difficult mathematics, with an interesting historical introduction. Has chapters on atmospheric electricity, atmospheric optics, atmospheric acoustics, weather forecasting and climate.

Maps and excellent colored plates. Author is connected with the University of Aberdeen.

"Mr. Geddes' book is very welcome as no comprehensive text-book of meteorology has been produced in this country [England] in recent years which could be regarded as a standard work for the non-mathematical student... It is to the advantage of the book that the author seeks to express rather the views of English meteorologists as a whole than to advance particular theories. The style throughout is easy and attractive, and the reader is not obliged to have already a knowledge of physics in order to follow the reasoning." — E. V. "The reader need have no previous knowledge of electricity, mechanics, or chemistry. For the appreciation of the evidence of certain critical experiments upon which modern scientists base their belief in electrons and in quanta of energy some knowledge of electricity, however, is required. To supply this in a quick and easy manner, the usual historical order of presentation is abandoned and the correctness of modern theories is assumed at the start. There are postulated the electron and its counterpart, the proton. In terms of these there are then described those few phenomena of electricity which are essential to the later consideration of the evidence. In this way it is hoped most rapidly to introduce the reader to modern theories as to the invisible workings of the physical universe."—Preface.

"Rather more than a third of the book consists of an examination of some general theories which apply to chemistry and especially to organic compounds; these are pleasantly written, easy to follow, and full of information. . . . An account of the compounds of carbon in a volume small enough to be carried about in one hand is necessarily a compromise between the desire to introduce information and the necessity of excluding it. . . . Professor Moureu's compromise differs from most others. This is fortunate; the reader is constantly being surprised by a clear statement of some principle which he fully expected would be squeezed out by considerations of space. . . . The translation seems to be well done, and there is an appropriate, though short, introduction by Sir William Pope which sets one's mind thinking in a proper key to enjoy the book."—Chemical age (London), Aug. 6, 1921.

A concise, well-illustrated account of the principles of temperature measurement, mercury thermometers, electrical thermometers and pyrometers, radiation and optical pyrometers, various other pyrometers, calibration of thermometers and pyrometers, the mean temperature of a metal wall, and the measurement of rapidly fluctuating temperatures.

"From internal evidence, it may be concluded that this treatise is arranged to supplement and illustrate the theory detailed in a previous work of the author on 'Heat transmission by radiation, conduction, and convection.' Those who wish to follow both the fundamental principles and their application in industry, will find a certain amount of inconvenience from this method of treatment, but it may be that the two works are not intended for the same class of readers. The use of pyrometers has increased to such an extent and become such an indispensable part of the equipment of many works and factories, that a sufficiently large class of readers could be found among those who are actively engaged in measuring and controlling the temperatures of furnaces, or of the molten metal they produce. This class is very well catered for in the present treatise, the instruments are described with accuracy; the illustrations enable their functions to be clearly followed."—Engineering, Aug. 12, 1921.

"The author has gone into the subject quite thoroughly, but has condensed the subject matter so that the book gives very explicit and yet simple details. . . . The various forms of colorimetric apparatus are given, although in this connection it appears to us one important omission is made in that the Hess-Ives colorimeter is not described and in our opinion this apparatus is one of the most important instruments in colorimetric analysis. The various methods of determining iron, copper, aluminum, chromium and a number of other metals in their salts and combinations are given, and it is surprising to what extent this form of analytical technique can be applied. The present book will be a very valuable one to analytical chemists and should be in the library of every chemical laboratory."—Color trade journal, Oct., 1921.

A projected "monumental" work of 10 volumes. Owing to the sudden prominence of the cellulose acetates during the war, v. 8 was published in 1916. Now appears v. 1, comprising five sizable books, covering respectively: cellulose, starch, and cotton; nitric and sulphuric acids; nitrocellulose; the historical development of the cellulose ester industries; and name, subject, and patent indices.

"The magnitude and scope of this colossal work has prompted an American contemporary to apply to it the apt description of a 'Cellulose ester's Beilstein'... On second thoughts it may be doubted whether the comparison with Beilstein does sufficient justice. As a matter of fact there are two books running concurrently in this work, one the large-print descriptive text and the other the small-print footnotes and references. The work is not merely an encyclopedia, such as could be strung together by a committee of card-index experts, but displays a unity of purpose and correlation of ideas which reveal the author as the creative spirit behind the formidable array of printed facts." — J.
